JURISDICTION OF COMMITTEE ON WAYS AND MEANS

RULES OF THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

RULE X

ESTABLISHMENT AND JURISDICTION OF STANDING COMMITTEES

THE COMMITTEES AND THEIR JURISDICTION

1. There shall be in the House the following standing committees, each of which shall have the jurisdiction and related functions assigned to it by this clause and clauses 2, 3, and 4; and all bills, resolutions, and other matters relating to subjects within the jurisdiction of any standing committee as listed in this clause shall (in accordance with and subject to clause 5) be referred to such committees as follows:

* * * * * * *

(v) Committee on Ways and Means.

(1) Customs, collection districts, and ports of entry and delivery.

(2) Reciprocal trade agreements.

(3) Revenue measures generally.

(4) Revenue measures relating to the insular possessions.

(5) The bonded debt of the United States.

(6) The deposit on public moneys.

(7) Transportation of dutiable goods.

(8) Tax exempt foundations and charitable trusts.

(9) National social security, except (A) health care and facilities programs that are supported from general revenues as opposed to payroll deductions and (B) work incentive programs.

NOTE. As a select committee the Committee on Ways and Means dates from 1789. It was made a standing committee in 1802. Originally it considered both revenue and appropriations, but in 1865 the appropriation bills were given to the Committee on Appropriations and certain other bills to what is now the Committee on Banking, Finance, and Urban Affairs. The subject of recesses and final adjournments, formerly within the jurisdiction of this committee was, under the Reorganization Act of 1946, transferred to the Committee on Rules.

SUMMARIES OF PUBLIC AND PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS REPORTED BY COMMITTEE—IN NUMERICAL ORDER

H.R. 1184 (Mr. Shannon); passed House Oct. 13, 1981.

Under present law, the President has the authority to vary the tariff on sugar imports between a range of 0.625 cent per pound (raw value) and 2.812 cents per pound. H.R. 1184, as amended, would increase the range over which the tariff may be adjusted. Under the bill, the President would be able to vary the tariff between a new minimum of 0.01 cent per pound and the present maximum of 2.81 cents per pound. It is the intent of the committee that the President would use his authority to further lower the tariff only when (a) the price of sugar is high and the domestic industry does not need the protection of tariffs, fees, or quotas and (b) consumers would benefit from a moderation in higher sugar prices. The bill, as amended, was reported to the House by the Committee on Ways and Means on Sept. 25, 1981. On Oct. 13, 1981, H.R. 1184 passed the House without amendment. As of adjournment of the 97th Congress, H.R. 1184 was pending in the Senate Finance Committee.

H.R. 1524 (Mr. Rousselot and Mr. Matsui); reported to Senate Sept. 30, 1982. (See H.R. 6211 for further action.)

H.R. 1524 restates and makes more specific the normalization rules relating to the investment credit, accelerated depreciation, and accelerated cost recovery. The bill also gives the Treasury Department specific authority to provide regulations setting forth conditions under which ratemaking projections and adjustments are not treated as consistent with the normalization rules. The amendments generally apply to taxable years beginning after Dec. 31, 1979.

The bill also provides a special transition rule. Under the special rule, a ratemaking projection or adjustment that violated the normalization requirements will not result in a public utility's loss of eligibility for the investment credit or accelerated depreciation if the projection or adjustment (1) applied for a period ending before Mar. 1, 1980, (2) was included in an order entered by a public service or public utility commission before Mar. 13, 1980, and (3) was used to determine the amounts of rates which were ordered to be collected or refunds which were ordered to be made.

H.R. 1524 was reported to the House by the Committee on Ways and Means on Sept. 16, 1982, with a technical amendment, and passed the House on Sept. 20, 1982.

The Senate Finance Committee reported the bill to the Senate on Sept. 30, 1982, with four amendments. Under the first amendment, the amount of charitable deduction for a contribution made after 1982 of any literary, musical or artistic composition, letter or memorandum, or similar property is the property's fair market value on the date of contribution if the donated property was created by the personal efforts of the taxpayer making the contribution, and if certain requirements are satisfied relating to use of the donated property by the donee and recipt of a written appraisal of the property's fair market value.

The second amendment reduces from 1 year to 6 months the holding period for determining whether a gain or loss on the sale or exchange of a capital asset (or certain business property) is long-term or short-term. This provision generally applies to sales or exchanges made after June 30, 1982, except that the new holding period does not apply to assets held by the taxpayer on that date on which the taxpayer realizes capital losses.

The third amendment makes several changes to the stock option exemption in sec. 1092 of the Internal Revenue Code. First, it provides that listed stock options are generally exempt from the loss deferral, wash sale, and short sale rules if none of the positions in the straddle can produce long-term capital gain or loss. In the case of syndicates, the straddles are exempt only if none of the positions can produce either long-term capital gain or loss or ordinary income or loss. For a stock option owned by a dealer to be exempt, the option must also be entered into in the normal course of the dealer's trade or business (unless the option is held in the dealer's investment account).

The fourth amendment provides that gain from the cutting of timber is to be treated as long-term capital gain only if the timber has been held for more than 6 months and was held on the first day of the taxpayer's taxable year.

H.R. 1524, as amended by the Senate Finance Committee, was considered by the Senate on Dec. 9, 1982, but no action was taken.

A modified version of H.R. 1524 without any of the Finance Committee amendments was added as a Senate floor amendment to H.R. 6211. That amendment was agreed to by the conferees on H.R. 6211 and became sec. 541 of P.L. 97-424. For a further explanation of this provision, see H.R. 6211.

H.R. 1553 (Mr. Rostenkowski, and Mr. Conable); Public Law 97-2; app. Feb. 7, 1981.

H.R. 1553 increases the public debt limit to $985 billion through Sept. 30, 1981. Under the bill, the permanent limit will remain at $400 billion and the temporary limit will increase to $585 billion. Under prior law, the public debt limit was $935.1 billion through Sept. 30, 1981. That limit was consistent with the budget estimates in the first concurrent resolution on the budget for fiscal year 1981. The Administration requested the increase to $985 billion based upon revised budget estimates. Those estimates indicated that the prior-law limit of $935.1 billion would be reached in mid-February 1981, and that a limit of $985 billion would be sufficient through Sept. 30, 1981.

H.R. 1553 was reported to the House on Feb. 3, 1981, and passed the House without amendment on Feb. 5, 1981. The bill was reported to the Senate on February 5 and passed on Feb. 6, 1981. H.R. 1553 was signed into law by the President on Feb. 7, 1981, as Public Law 97-2.

H.R. 2540 (Mr. Gibbons); passed House June 2, 1981. (See H.R. 6094 for similar legislation.)

H.R. 2540 combines three separate agency authorizations of appropriations under the jurisdiction of the Committee on Ways and Means.

For the U.S. International Trade Commission (ITC), the bill authorizes appropriations of $18,501,000 for fiscal year 1982 and requires that the ITC be reimbursed by other agencies for studies requested of the ITC by such agencies.

The bill also authorizes $480,001,000 for the Customs Service, the amount requested in President Reagan's budget. The bill provides for adjustments in authorization levels to reflect automatic salary supplementals, increases the charges for certain overtime service so as to recover fully the cost of providing such services, limits or "caps" overtime pay to any one customs officer to no more than $25,000, and prohibits any acceleration in the current system of collecting customs duties on commercial transactions. The bill also requires a reduction in the number of Customs regional and district offices by the end of fiscal year 1983, calls for an exploration of the joint, binational construction of certain border customs posts, and places a limit on the size of Customs air fleet. The bill also seeks to speed passenger processing through the test of new methods of inspection and the adjustment to more realistic levels of certain value limitations for the collection of duties and other customs actions.

Finally, the bill authorizes $10 million for the U.S. Trade Representative for fiscal year 1982, authorizes adjustment in authorization levels to reflect automatic salary supplementals, and provides certain standard administrative authorities to the agency.

H.R. 2540 was reported to the House by the Committee on Ways and Means on Apr. 10, 1981, with an amendment clarifying the nature of the tests of new systems of passenger processing. The bill passed the House on June 2, 1981. As of adjournment H.R. 2540 was pending in the Senate. (See H.R. 6094 for similar legislation.)

H.R. 3191 (Mr. Guarini with cosponsors); Passed House Dec. 16, 1982. (See P.L. 97-424 (H.R. 6211) for further action.)

Under present law, no deduction is allowed for expenses of attending a convention, seminar, or similar meeting on a cruise ship (code sec. 274(h)(2)). As reported to the House on Sept. 16, 1982, H.R. 3191 provides that business expenses for attending a convention, seminar, or similar meeting on a cruise of a domestic cruise ship will be deductible to the same extent as other business expenses (rather than being subject to disallowance under sec. 274(h)(2), if certain reporting requirements are satisfied and if all ports of call of the cruise are located within the United States and certain other countries ("the North American area"). The bill will apply to cruise ship seminars and meetings beginning after Dec. 31, 1982. On Dec. 13, 1982, the bill failed of passage under suspension of the rules; on Dec. 16, 1982, it passed the House. (See P.L. 97-424 (H.R. 6211) for further action.)

H.R. 3581 (Mr. Russo); failed of passage in the House Sept. 22, 1982.

As reported by the Committee on Ways and Means on Sept. 16, 1982, H.R. 3581 would exclude certain foreign commodity income from treatment as foreign personal holding company income. The bill would provide that dividends received by a controlled foreign corporation out of earnings and profits accumulated by one foreign subsidiary in taxable years beginning after Dec. 31, 1982, and attributable to the active conduct of the business of buying, selling, and distributing coffee will not be considered foreign personal holding company income if the country of its incorporation and the country where its principal office is located do not tax the dividend, if the controlled foreign corporation was incorporated before 1962, if its main activity is a continuation of an activity begun many years before 1962, if the controlled foreign corporation was acquired in 1978, and if more than half of the U.S. parent's control has been limited at all times after 1978 and before the date of distribution by indirect ownership through a voting trust.

On Sept. 22, 1982, H.R. 3581 was considered by the House under suspension of the rules and failed of passage.

H.R. 3603 (Mr. de la Garza, with cosponsors); Public Law 97-98; app. Dec. 22, 1981.

H.R. 3603, the "Food and Agriculture Act of 1981," was sequentially referred to the Committee on Ways and Means for consideration of two matters under the committee's jurisdiction.

The Committee on Ways and Means reported H.R. 3603 to the House on June 19, 1981, with an amendment relating to the Federal Financing Bank. Sec. 1506(b) of H.R. 3603, as referred, would have required the FFB to purchase loans guaranteed by the Rural Electrification Administration at the request of the borrower. The committee's amendment provided that the Rural Electrification Administration will have continued access to the FFB for its loan guarantee on the same basis as all other agencies and that no officer or agency of the Federal Government shall place such loan in a position which, with respect to access and terms and conditions, is less advantageous that the position of other similar loans then being made or purchased by the Bank.

Sec. 502(2) of H.R. 3603 was referred to the committee because it extends a special, expanded quota authority provision first contained in the 1977 Food and Agriculture Act, and authorizes the duty-free entry of upland cotton entered during the period of the expanded quota. These provisions are designed to moderate excessive upland cotton price fluctuations. After review, the Committee on Ways and Means recommended adoption without amendment of the language contained in sec. 502(2).

H.R. 3603 passed the House amended on Oct. 22, 1981. The bill was vacated and S. 884 was substituted after being amended to contain the language of the House bill as passed. The House insisted on its amendments and requested a conference. On Dec. 10, 1981, the Senate agreed to the conference report, and on Dec. 16, 1981, the House agreed to the conference report. The President signed the bill into law on Dec. 22, 1981, as Public Law 97-98.

NOTE.—Ways and Means provisions of the bill were added to other legislation as follows: (1) An amendment by the Agriculture Committee relating to the Federal Financing Bank was added to H.R. 3982, which became Public Law 97-35. (2) Tariff quotas on upland cotton were added as a committee amendment to H.R. 4566, as passed by the House, clearing Ways and Means jurisdiction from the bill.

H.R. 3850 (Mr. Rostenkowski and Mr. Conable); reported to House, June 12, 1981. (See P.L. 97-35; H.R. 3982.)

H.R. 3850 contains budget reconciliation recommendations of the Committee on Ways and Means which the committee is required to report by June 12, 1981, pursuant to the conference report on the First Budget Resolution (H. Con. Res. 115) for Fiscal Year 1982. Subsections 15(A) and 15(B) of section 301 of H. Con. Res. 115, the First Concurrent Budget Resolution for Fiscal Year 1982, required the Committee on Ways and Means to report specific recommendations by June 12, 1981, which reduce spending for both entitlement and nonentitlement programs as follows: (1) $9.241 billion in fiscal year 1982, (2) $10.559 billion in fiscal year 1983; and (3) $11.248 billion in fiscal year 1984. H.R. 3850 provides spending reductions of approximately $9.3 billion for fiscal year 1982 with respect to programs within the jurisdiction of the Committee on Ways and Means.

SUMMARY OF H.R. 3850 AS REPORTED

A. TITLE I: TRADE ADJUSTMENT ASSISTANCE

Title I consists of three parts amending the trade adjustment assistance programs for workers, firms, and communities under title II of the Trade Act of 1974 (Public Law 93-618). The amendments reflect administration proposals in nearly all respects.

WORKER TRADE ADJUSTMENT ASSISTANCE (PART A)

Under existing law, petitioning groups of workers are certified by the Secretary of Labor as eligible to apply for worker adjustment assistance if (1) a significant number or proportion of the workers in the firm or appropriate subdivision of the firm have been, or are threatened to be, totally or partially laid off; (2) sales and/or production of the firm or subdivision have decreased absolutely; and (3) increased imports of articles like or directly competitive with articles produced by the firm or subdivision "contributed importantly" to the actual or threatened layoffs and to the sales/production decline.

Individual certified workers who meet the 26 of 52 week preceding layoff employment requirement are eligible for trade readjustment allowance (TRA) payments supplementing unemployment insurance (UI) for up to 52 weeks of unemployment. The weekly TRA payment is 70 percent of the worker's previous gross weekly wage, not to exceed the average weekly manufacturing wage (currently $289), reduced by the worker's UI entitlement and 50 percent of any earnings. Workers may receive up to 26 weeks additional benefits if in training or age 60 or over at time of layoff. Supplemental training assistance and job search and relocation allowances are also available and the Secretary may provide employment services and approve training.

The major amendments in the trade adjustment assistance program for workers under part A of title I of the bill are as follows:

1. The causal link between increased imports and worker layoffs and production/sales declines in the worker's firm or subdivision is strengthened from the present "contributed importantly" standard to the "substantial cause" standard used for industry-wide import relief.

2. Certain weeks of employer-authorized leave or disability covered by workmen's compensation will be counted toward the minimum prelayoff employment requirement; the UI extended benefit "suitable work" test is applied to eligibility for TRA payments but not to other assistance.

3. TRA benefits are reduced to State UI levels for a maximum duration of 52 weeks of UI and TRA combined, payable only upon exhaustion of UI during the worker's most recent benefit period; payments are limited to weeks of unemployment more than 60 days after the petition is filed and during the 52 weeks after exhaustion of regular UI; an additional 26 weeks of TRA benefits will be available to workers in training, but not to older workers.

4. Supplemental training assistance and job search and relocation allowances are increased.

5. Training is made an entitlement if certain conditions exist; not less than $112 million is authorized in each of fiscal years 1982 and 1983 for training, job search and relocation allowances and program evaluation.

FIRM AND COMMUNITY TRADE ADJUSTMENT ASSISTANCE (PARTS B AND C)

Under existing law, individual firms may receive technical and/or financial assistance if they meet the same certification criteria described above for workers and develop an economic adjustment plan approved by the Secretary of Commerce.

Part B of the bill amends the criteria for firm certification to conform to the stricter import causation standard adopted for workers. Other modifications were necessary to preserve the existing program upon its transfer within the Commerce Department from the Economic Development Administration to the International Trade Administration, including authority for pre-certification and industry-wide technical assistance. Minor amendments make loan guarantees more attractive to private lenders and provide greater flexibility in their interest rate. Part C of the bill repeals the trade adjustment assistance program for communities which has never been utilized.

The worker and firm programs are reauthorized for one year, to terminate Sept. 30, 1983.

B. Title II: Federal Old Age, Survivors, and Disability Insurance Program

PHASE OUT STUDENT BENEFITS FOR POSTSECONDARY STUDENTS

Under current law, monthly cash benefits are paid to the children of an insured worker when the worker retires, becomes disabled, or dies. Because of a provision added in 1965 a child's benefits may continue after age 18 and up until age 22 as long as the beneficiary can establish that he is attending high school, college, or vocational school on a full-time basis. Benefits can continue for several months beyond age 22 (until the end of the school term) if the student has not yet completed his 4-year college degree.

The committee approved a proposal to eliminate the social security student benefit for postsecondary students age 18-22 who first enroll in postsecondary school after December 1982.

Children aged 18-22 currently receiving benefits as full-time students as well as those enrolled in postsecondary school before January 1983 could continue to receive benefits until age 22, but would be precluded from receiving future benefit increases after the 1981 increase, and would receive no payments during the summer months, June through August, except where the student is enrolled in a full-time summer school program beginning in 1982. Also, children over 18 would continue to receive benefits until completion of their elementary or secondary education.

TERMINATION OF MOTHERS' AND FATHERS' BENEFITS WHEN CHILD ATTAINS AGE 16

Under current law, monthly cash benefits are paid to mothers or fathers caring for a child receiving social security benefits until the child attains age 18. The committee would end entitlement to benefits for mothers and fathers when the child attains age 16.

The provision would not apply in the case of a parent caring for a disabled child aged 16 or over. The provision would be effective with respect to current beneficiaries only at the end of two years after the month of enactment, but would be effective for parents becoming newly entitled in or after the second month after enactment.

ELIMINATE THE SOCIAL SECURITY MINIMUM BENEFIT FOR NEWLY ENTITLED BENEFICIARIES

Under existing law, social security beneficiaries whose average lifetime earnings in covered employment are low receive a "minimum benefit" which is higher than the benefit they would otherwise receive under the benefit computation formula. (Low average earnings can result from work at low wages or from a few years attachment to the program.) The 1977 amendments "froze" the initial minimum benefit at $122 per month for persons who reach age 62, become disabled, or become eligible for survivor benefits after 1978; once they are on the benefit rolls, these beneficiaries receive the cost-of-living increases payable to all social security beneficiaries. Beneficiaries who turned 62, became disabled, or became newly eligible for survivor benefits in 1978 or earlier, receive whatever minimum benefit was in effect at the time they were first eligible to come on the rolls, plus any cost-of-living adjustments.

The committee approved a proposal to eliminate the minimum benefit for newly-entitled beneficiaries. As of January 1982, no new beneficiaries would receive the minimum benefit, and would instead receive a benefit based strictly on their earnings record. This provision, in contrast to the administration's proposal, would not affect the 3 million beneficiaries currently relying on their minimum benefits.

ROUND SOCIAL SECURITY BENEFITS

Under present law, at each stage in the benefit computation, the amount derived is rounded up to the next higher 10 cents.

The committee approved a proposal, effective generally for benefit computations after August 1981, which would provide that the amount derived at each stage in the benefit computation would be rounded to the lower dime, except for the last step—the actual benefit amount payable per beneficiary. This would be rounded to the next lower dollar. For those beneficiaries electing supplemental medical insurance (SMI), the rounding would occur after the SMI premium was deducted from the OASDI benefit check.

PENSION REFORM ACT—COST REIMBURSEMENT

Under current law, provisions of the Pension Reform Act of 1974 require administrators of most employee pension plans to furnish plan participants with information concerning their accrued and vested benefit rights. In addition, employers are required to maintain records, in accordance with Department of Labor regulations, sufficient to determine the benefits which are, or may become, due to each employee. While some pension plans have not kept the necessary earnings information, the Social Security Administration does maintain this information and has already received requests from plans for complete earnings histories of plan members. Under the provisions of the Freedom of Information Act and the Privacy Act, the cost of retrieving and transmitting this information is not fully borne by the requestor. Part is financed out of the social security trust funds.

The committee approved a provision to permit SSA to recover the full cost of retrieving and transmitting information for purposes of enabling pension plans to comply with the Pension Reform Act. Effective Oct. 1, 1981, full payment would be required from requestors to the social security trust funds for expenses incurred in providing earnings information, if the request is not directly related to determining an individual's social security benefit. Information requested by individuals for social security program records purposes will generally continue to be provided free of charge.

PAY ONE-HALF OF JULY 1982 CPI INCREASE IN JULY, REMAINDER IN OCTOBER

Under existing law, the change in the CPI is measured from the first calendar quarter of one year to the first calendar quarter of the next year. If it shows a 3 percent or more increase, a benefit increase of equivalent amount will be due for the month of June payable in July, following the end of the measuring period. This same increase applies to SSI, veterans' and railroad retirement benefits.

The committee approved a provision which moved part of the payment of the cost-of-living increase to October instead of July in 1982. An ad hoc increase equal to one-half the increase in the cost-of-living from the first quarter of 1981 to the first quarter of 1982 would be paid in July 1982.

In October 1982, a second benefit increase would be computed based on the increase in the CPI from the first quarter of 1981 to the March through May period of 1982 (a 14-month inflation period as compared to the present 12-month period). This increase would be adjusted to reflect the ad hoc increase paid in July, so that the October increase plus the ad hoc increase in July would equal the increase in the CPI over the 14-month measuring period. In this way, beneficiaries would receive a total increase based on 14 months of inflation, from January 1981 to March 1982. Future automatic increases, after 1982, would be based on the CPI change in the March through May period each year, and would be paid in October of each year.

TRUST FUND FINANCING FOR SUCCESSFUL VOCATIONAL REHABILITATION SERVICES

Under existing law, a limited amount of trust fund money can be used to pay States for vocational rehabilitation services (VR) provided to beneficiaries.

The committee repealed the program that provides social security trust funds for the rehabilitation of disabled social security beneficiaries. However, the States would be provided reimbursement for rehabilitation services provided to disabled beneficiaries if they engage for 9 continuous months in substantial gainful activity (SGA).

RETAIN SOCIAL SECURITY RETIREMENT TEST EXEMPT AGE AT 72 THROUGH 1982

Under current law, the age at which the retirement test no longer applies is scheduled to drop to 70 in January 1982. The provision would delay that change until January 1983.

RESTRICT SOCIAL SECURITY PAYMENT OF LUMP-SUM DEATH BENEFITS

Under current law a lump-sum death payment of $255 is payable when a worker who is fully or currently insured dies.

If there is a surviving spouse living with the worker at the time of death, the lump-sum payment is paid to that person. If there is no widow or widower eligible to receive the lump-sum death payment, the money can be paid to the person who assumed responsibility for funeral expenses.

The committee agreed to eliminate the lump-sum death payment effective October 1981 in cases where there is no eligible spouse or entitled child. Under the proposal, a surviving spouse or child (under age 18) who is eligible (or would be eligible, in the case of a surviving spouse, but for their age) to receive monthly cash survivor benefits upon the worker's death would receive the lump-sum death payment.

MODIFICATION OF MONTH OF INITIAL ENTITLEMENT FOR CERTAIN WORKERS AND THEIR DEPENDENTS

Under current law, social security benefits are paid for the entire month in which a person becomes eligible for the benefits, even if the date of eligibility is in the middle or the end of the month.

The committee approved a provision which would allow payment of benefits for certain workers and their dependents only for months in which conditions of eligibility are met for the entire month. This provision would be effective for months after August 1981.

C. Title III: Unemployment Compensation, Public Assistance, Low Income Energy Assistance and Social Services Provisions

UNEMPLOYMENT COMPENSATION

Elimination of the national trigger for the extended benefits program

Under existing law, up to 13 additional weeks of unemployment benefits, beyond the usual maximum duration of 26 weeks of State benefits, become payable to unemployed workers in times of high unemployment. Fifty percent of the costs of these extended benefits are paid from the proceeds of the Federal unemployment tax and 50 percent from State taxes. Extended benefits are paid in a State when the insured unemployment rate in the State reaches 4 percent and in addition, is 20 percent higher than it was during the same period in the previous two years. Thirty-nine States provide for the payment of extended benefits when their insured unemployment rate reaches 5 percent, regardless of unemployment levels in previous years. Extended benefits are paid in all States, regardless of State unemployment rates, when the national insured unemployment rate reaches 4.5 percent. This is referred to as the "national extended benefits trigger."

Section 301 would repeal the national trigger, so that extended benefits would be paid only in States with insured rates above the specified levels, effective upon enactment.

Exclude extended benefits claimants from State trigger calculations

Under current law, the insured unemployment rate—used to determine unemployment levels for the purpose of triggering extended benefits—is calculated by dividing the number of individuals receiving regular-State or extended benefits by the total number of workers covered under the State unemployment law.

Section 302 would exclude extended benefits claimants from the calculation of the insured unemployment rate for extended benefits trigger purposes effective July 1, 1981.

Changes in unemployment compensation requirements for ex-military personnel

Under present law, federally funded unemployment benefits are provided to former military personnel upon their separation from military service if they meet the qualifying requirements of the State in which they apply for unemployment compensation. The military service of the individual qualifies as wages or employment in the determination of eligibility under the State unemployment compensation law only if (1) the person had served continuously for 1 year or more prior to separation and (2) the individual was separated under other than dishonorable or bad-conduct circumstances.

Section 303 would increase to 2 years the period of continuous active military service an individual must have in order for his or her military service to qualify as employment for unemployment compensation purposes; prohibit eligibility for unemployment compensation until 4 weeks after separation from the military; and, limit the number of weeks of unemployment compensation based on military service to 13. This provision is effective with respect to new claims filed on or after Oct. 1, 1981.

AID TO FAMILIES WITH DEPENDENT CHILDREN (AFDC)

Limit earned income disregards

Under current law, in determining AFDC benefits, States reduce a family's monthly payment by the amount of any earnings that remain after the following disregards are applied: (1) the first $30, plus one-third of additional earnings; and (2) any expenses (including child care) reasonably attributable to the earning of any such income. (The work expense disregard is available to both recipients and new applicants. The $30 and one-third applies only to those already on the rolls.)

Section 321 would require States to disregard the following amount of monthly earnings, effective Oct. 1, 1981:

For determining eligibility, 20 percent of gross earnings up to a maximum of $175 per month; and child care costs up to a monthly maximum of $200 per child and $400 per family.

For determining benefits, $50; 20 percent of gross earnings up to $175 per month; child care costs up to $200 per child and $400 per family per month; and, one-third of remaining earnings.

For two-parent families, States could limit the disregards to 20 percent of gross earnings (up to $175 per month) for eligibility determination; and $50 plus 20 percent of gross earnings (up to $175 per month) for benefit calculation.

States could terminate, or phase-out gradually, the $50 disregard and the one-third work incentive disregard for families with earned income above the poverty level or, at State option, 200 percent of the State standard of need, after the family has had earned income and claimed one-third disregard for 12 consecutive months. Individuals who lose eligibility for AFDC payments because of the termination of the disregards would remain eligible for medicaid for 12 months after payment stops.

Count income of stepparent

Under existing law, States are prohibited from assuming the income of a stepparent is available to an AFDC child unless, under State law, stepparents are required to support stepchildren to the same extent that natural parents are required to support their children. In most States, a stepparent's income can be counted only in cases in which the welfare agency receives information that the income is available to an AFDC child. However, States are allowed to prorate AFDC shelter and utility benefits when an eligible child lives with a relative, including a stepparent, who is not an AFDC recipient, as long as the total income exceeds the State's standard of need.

Section 322 would require States to consider available to a child that portion of the income of a child's stepparent (living in the same home as the child) which exceeds (1) 20 percent of earnings, (2) an amount equal to the State standard of need for the stepparent and others living in the same household whom he claims as dependents for Federal income tax purposes, (3) amounts actually paid by the stepparent to dependents not living in the same household, and (4) payments of alimony or child support to individuals not living in his household. A State would have the option of establishing a procedure and the conditions under which the State could determine that a stepparent's income is not available to the children and, therefore, not make the reduction in benefits. Effective Oct. 1, 1981.

Require retrospective accounting and monthly reporting

Under Federal regulations, each State may choose to pay benefits "retrospectively" (make payments after a month has ended on the basis of the person's income during the month) or "prospectively" (make payments during or before a month based on what the recipient's circumstances are expected to be during that month). The Federal statute makes no mention of how frequently AFDC recipients must submit reports to the welfare agency.

Section 323 would require States to determine monthly benefits "retrospectively" on the basis of the actual income of the previous month. Eligibility would be determined "prospectively" on the basis of current month's circumstances. And, for the first month of a family's eligibility, benefits would be determined on current month's circumstances. States would have to require all recipients to provide monthly reports on income, family composition, resources, etc.

The Secretary could allow a State to require less frequent reporting for specified classes of recipients, if the State demonstrates the administrative cost of monthly reporting for such recipients is not worthwhile. The provisions would be effective on Oct. 1, 1981. However, until Oct. 1, 1983, the Secretary could waive any penalty for noncompliance if he determines that a State is taking the necessary steps to implement retrospective accounting and monthly reporting.

Allow States to require certain recipients to participate in job search and experience assignments

Under existing law, recipients of aid to families with dependent children (AFDC) are required to register for participation in the work incentive (WIN) program unless they fall within certain exempt categories specified in the Federal statute (e.g., mothers caring for children under age 6). Under the WIN program, recipients are required to accept available employment or training in order to receive AFDC payments. States are not now allowed to establish alternative work requirements which do not conform closely to the WIN program.

Section 324 would allow States to require AFDC recipients to participate in work experience assignments in which they would perform work in return for AFDC benefits. All employable recipients who are not in school or participating in a WIN or other approved training or work-related program, and who are working less than 20 hours a week, could be required to participate in work assignments after a WIN appraisal and an employability plan (or similar procedures established by the State) had been completed. Adequate day care would have to be available for recipients who need it.

Eligible participants could be required to work for up to 96 hours a month or, if less, the number of hours obtained by dividing their monthly AFDC payment by the minimum wage. In addition to the work assignment, each participant would be required, and must be provided necessary assistance and a reasonable period of time, to seek permanent employment or appropriate training. The State would have to reimburse participants for reasonable and necessary expenses incurred in connection with a work experience assignment and job search requirements.

Work experience assignments would have to be consistent with the physical capacity, skills, experience, health, family responsibilities and place of residence of the participant; meet health and safety standards specified by the Secretary of HHS; and could not displace permanent employees or jobs.

These provisions are effective Oct. 1, 1981 through Oct. 1, 1987.

Define an unemployed parent (UP) as the parent who is the principal earner for the family

Under present law, States have the option to provide AFDC-UP benefits to families where both parents are in the home and one is unemployed. Only one parent must be unemployed to meet this eligibility requirement; the other parent may be employed.

Section 325 would limit eligibility for AFDC to those two-parent families in which the "principal earner" (the parent with the most earnings in the 24 month period prior to application) is unemployed, effective Oct. 1, 1981.

Require States to recover AFDC overpayments and pay underpayments

Current Federal law does not require States to recover overpayments or make a retroactive reimbursement for any underpayments. By regulation, States are given the option of recouping overpayments. However, if a State recovers overpayments, it must also pay underpayments.

Section 326 would require States to promptly take all necessary steps to correct any overpayments or underpayments. Recovery of overpayments would be made from current assistance payments, available income, or through legal processes. In the case of a current recipient, the amount recovered in any month could not exceed the amount that would reduce the family's grant below 90 percent of the benefit for a family of the same size. This provision is effective Oct. 1, 1981.

Optional payments for dependent children age 18 and over and in school

Under present law, to be eligible for AFDC as a dependent child, the general rule is that the person must be under 18 years of age. States have the option, however, of continuing benefits through age 20 if the person is regularly attending high school, vocational school or college. Currently 43 States extend AFDC eligibility to students age 18 through 20. These States may limit benefits to those attending high school and vocational schools; but they must continue benefits through age 20 if the person remains in school.

Section 327 would allow States who pay benefits to dependent children over 18 years of age (because they are in school) to limit eligibility at any age between 18 and 21, effective Oct. 1, 1981.

Deem sponsors' income to aliens in AFDC families

Current Federal law does not require States to consider the income of a sponsor of an alien legally admitted to the U.S. as income available to the alien for AFDC program purposes.

Section 328 would restrict AFDC payments to citizens of the U.S. and lawfully admitted aliens. In addition, the income and resources of the sponsor would be considered available to an alien in an AFDC family for 3 years after his or her entry into the U.S. The provision would be applicable with respect to individuals applying for aid for the first time after Oct. 1, 1981.

Limitation on resources

Under present law, States are required to take into consideration any resources of a child or relative in determining eligibility for AFDC benefits. States are allowed to exclude certain resources, including a home, personal effects, an automobile and income-producing property. Regulations require States to deny benefits to any individual whose assets minus the exclusions exceed $2,000.

Section 329 would reduce the current $2,000 per recipient limit on resources to $1,500 per family. States would be allowed to exclude a home and a car; household and personal effects; life and burial insurance policies; tools, equipment and other income-producing property. States would also be allowed to continue to delay eligibility for AFDC in cases where assets were disposed of in order to qualify for benefits, as under current law. This provision is effective Oct. 1, 1981.

CHILD SUPPORT ENFORCEMENT

Collection of support for adults

Under current law, a State child support agency is not authorized to collect support (i.e., alimony) on behalf of a parent of a child for whom it is collecting child support. This is the case even when a court has ordered a single amount for both the parent and the child, without specifying the amount payable on behalf of each.

Section 331 would make State child support enforcement agencies responsible for collecting support for adults, in the case of a parent of a child for whom it is collecting child support and in those cases in which the support obligation has already been established, in the same manner as for child support. This provision is effective upon enactment.

Modify collection fee for non-AFDC families

Under existing law, States are required to provide services to non-AFDC families requesting assistance. States have the option of charging a fee of up to $20 and of retaining a portion of the child support payments to recover costs of administration in excess of the application fee.

Section 332 would require States to charge a fee equal to 10 percent of the support collected for non-AFDC recipients to defray costs of the child support enforcement agency collection services. The fee would be retained by the State. This provision is effective upon enactment.

Source of incentive payments to cooperating jurisdictions

Under current law, the 15 percent incentive payments to States or political subdivisions that collect child support payments on behalf of another jurisdiction are taken from the Federal share of the amount collected.

Section 333 would provide that the 15 percent incentive payments to States and political subdivisions would come from the full amount of collections, rather than from the Federal share, effective Oct. 1, 1981.

Child support obligations not discharged by bankruptcy

In 1974, a provision was included in the child support enforcement program which prohibited the discharge in bankruptcy of a child support obligation which had been assigned to a State as a condition of AFDC eligibility. This Social Security Act provision was subsequently repealed by section 328 of Public Law 95-598 (the 1978 revision of the Bankruptcy Act).

Section 334 would reinstate the provision previously in effect which provides that a child support obligation assigned to a State as a condition of AFDC eligibility is not discharged in bankruptcy, effective upon enactment.

Child support intercept of unemployment benefits

Under existing law, there is no provision allowing for the withholding of unemployment benefits in cases of outstanding child support obligations.

Section 335 would require child support enforcement agencies to determine on a periodic basis whether any individuals receiving unemployment compensation or trade adjustment assistance benefits owe child support obligations. The agency would be required to collect any outstanding child support obligations owed by an individual receiving unemployment benefits, through an agreement with the individual or the legal process of the State, by having a portion of the person's unemployment benefits withheld and forwarded to the child support agency by the unemployment compensation agency. This provision is effective Oct. 1, 1981; but the provisions would not become State child support enforcement and unemployment compensation plan requirements until Oct. 1, 1982.

Internal Revenue Service collection of child support and alimony

Under current law, a State may request the IRS to collect delinquent, court-ordered child support payments after the State has made diligent and reasonable efforts to collect the payments. The amount of the child support obligation must be certified by the Secretary of Health and Human Services before IRS collection procedures may be used.

Section 336, at the request of a State and subject to the same certification and other requirements in current law, would (1) allow IRS to collect delinquent alimony as well as child support payments where alimony and child support are combined in a single order and the amounts for child support and alimony are not identified; and (2) permit IRS collections in cases where child support/alimony obligations have been established under an administrative as well as court order. This provision is effective upon enactment.

SUPPLEMENTAL SECURITY INCOME (SSI)

Retrospective accounting for SSI recipients

Currently, SSI benefits are determined on the basis of income anticipated to be available in the current calendar quarter. Redeterminations are made at such times as provided by the Secretary.

Section 341 would provide that SSI benefits be based on actual income of the previous month (or, at the Secretary's option, the circumstances in effect on the last day of the second previous month). Eligibility would be based on current month's circumstances. And, for the first month benefits are received, and for any month in which significant change occurs in the living arrangements of the individual, benefits would be based on current month's circumstances. This provision is effective for months after the last month of the first quarter ending 5 months after enactment.

Eligibility of SSI recipients for food stamps

Under current law, SSI recipients in three States—Massachusetts, Wisconsin and California—receive a cash payment, as a part of the State supplemental SSI benefits, in lieu of food stamps. Massachusetts and Wisconsin are allowed to provide SSI recipients cash in lieu of food stamps because, and for so long as, the Federal Government continues to contribute to the cost of the State supplemental benefit as provided under the "hold harmless" provisions in present SSI law. A separate Federal law allows California to continue to "cash-out" food stamps for SSI recipients so long as it continues to pass-through each year the Federal SSI cost-of-living increase and provides a yearly cost-of-living adjustment in its State supplementary benefit.

Section 342 would modify current Federal SSI food stamp "cash-out" requirements so that a State could continue to "cash-out" food stamps for SSI recipients so long as it (1) had previously increased its supplementary benefits to include the bonus value of food stamps, (2) was providing a cash payment in lieu of food stamps as of December 1980, and (3) continued to pass-through the Federal cost-of-living increases as required under section 1618 of current SSI law. This provision is effective July 1, 1981.

Negotiability of SSI check

Under existing law there is no time limit on the negotiability of SSI checks.

Section 342 would limit the negotiability of SSI checks to 180 days from date of issuance. The amount of any unnegotiated checks which represents a State supplementary payment would be returned to the States. This provision is effective Oct. 1, 1981.

Special interim cost-of-living increase in SSI benefits

A yearly cost-of-living adjustment is made in Federal SSI benefits equal to the percentage adjustment provided for social security retirement and disability insurance payments. This is done through a reference in the SSI law to the cost-of-living adjustment provisions in title II of the Social Security Act.

Section 344 would conform future cost-of-living adjustments in SSI to changes in the social security cost-of-living adjustment provisions contained in title II of this bill.

LOW-INCOME ENERGY ASSISTANCE

Reauthorization of low-income energy assistance

Under current law, authority for providing low-income energy assistance (LIEA) exists under both the Economic Opportunity Act of 1964 and the Home Energy Assistance Act of 1980 (title III of the Crude Oil Windfall Profit Tax Act of 1980 (P.L. 96-223)). The Economic Opportunity Act does not specify a specific budget authority. The Home Energy Assistance Act authorizes $3.125 billion for energy assistance in fiscal year 1981. The authority under both acts expires on Sept. 30, 1981. For fiscal year 1981, $1.85 billion was appropriated for LIEA under the authority of the Economic Opportunity Act of 1964. However, the fiscal year 1981 appropriation stipulates that LIEA is to be administered under the "terms and conditions" of the regulations and any "non-formula amendments thereto" published in the May 30, 1980 Federal Register pursuant to the Home Energy Assistance Act of 1980.

Section 361 would authorize the LIEA funds under a new title XXI of the Social Security Act: $1.4 billion for fiscal year 1982 and $1.6 billion for fiscal year 1983. Each State would receive the same proportion of Federal LIEA funds appropriated for fiscal years 1982 and 1983 that it received of the LIEA funds allotted by formula for fiscal year 1981. States would be allowed to carry over up to 25 percent of the funds received in one fiscal year into the next. Beginning in fiscal year 1983, States would be required to provide 20 percent matching funds.

Federal LIEA funds could be used to provide assistance to families receiving federally funded public assistance benefits (AFDC, SSI, food stamps, veterans benefits) and to other families with incomes below 150 percent of the poverty level or 60 percent of State median income. (States could establish income limits below either of these.) Payments could be made directly to eligible households, or to energy suppliers or certain building operators, or any combination thereof.

States could use Federal LIEA funds to assist eligible households pay for the costs of heating or cooling; for the purchase and installation of weatherization materials designed to improve the heating or cooling efficiency of homes of eligible households; and to meet energy-related emergency needs, including provision of in-kind benefits.

SOCIAL SERVICES AMENDMENTS

Limit Federal title XX training funds to $75 million for fiscal year 1982

Under current law, 75 percent Federal matching funds are available to States for training costs related to title XX social services activities. Beginning in fiscal year 1982, States will be reimbursed only for those expenditures included in an HHS approved State title XX training plan.

Section 381 would continue through fiscal year 1982 the $75 million limitation on Federal title XX training funds that was in effect in fiscal year 1981. States will receive the same share of the $75 million in fiscal year 1982 as they received in fiscal year 1981.

D. Title IV: Health Savings

The bill achieves health savings through changes in medicare reimbursement, benefits, deductibles and coinsurance amounts, and through more efficient program administration.

Medicare reimbursement limits on inpatient hospital and home health services would be tightened, an incentive reimbursement system for renal dialysis services would be established, interest earnings on funded depreciation accounts of providers would be offset against interest expense in determining reimbursement, rules regarding reduced payment for long-term care in hospitals would be tightened, and a provision of existing law postponing reimbursement to certain hospitals at the end of fiscal year 1981 would be repealed

Nutritional therapy services for end stage renal disease patients would be covered where such therapy postpones or reduces the need for renal dialysis. Alcohol detoxification facilities would no longer be recognized as medicare providers of services.

Deductible and coinsurance amounts under medicare part A (hospital insurance) would be changed to more nearly reflect current hospital costs, and a coinsurance amount of $1 per day would be established for the first through the 60th day of inpatient hospital care. The annual deductible for medicare part B (supplementary medical insurance) would be increased from $60 to $70 and indexed in future years to reflect cost of living increases. Expenses incurred in the last 3 months of a year could no longer be used to satisfy the part B deductible in the next year.

The Secretary of Health and Human Services would be authorized to impose civil money penalties on persons who file fraudulent medicare or medicaid claims, surveys of skilled nursing facilities would be permitted to be conducted less frequently than annually, and utilization guidelines would be established for coverage of home health services.

Authority would be given to the Secretary to terminate the less effective Professional Standards Review Organizations during fiscal year 1982, and the PSRO program would be repealed at the end of fiscal year 1983.

Medicare part B would become the secondary payor to the Federal employees health benefits program for people aged 65 and over who have coverage under both programs. Medicare part A would become secondary payor to the Federal employees program with respect to people reaching age 65 on or after Jan. 1, 1982.

H.R. 3982 (Mr. Jones of Oklahoma); Public Law 97-35; app. Aug. 13, 1981.

H.R. 3982, the Omnibus Reconciliation Act of 1981, provides for reconciliation pursuant to sec. 301 of the First Concurrent Resolution on the Budget for Fiscal Year 1982.

SUMMARY OF H.R. 3982 AS PUBLIC LAW

TITLE XXV: TRADE ADJUSTMENT ASSISTANCE

Title XXV consists of two parts amending the trade adjustment assistance programs for workers and firms under title II of the Trade Act of 1974 (Public Law 93-618). The amendments reflect administration proposals in nearly all respects.

WORKER TRADE ADJUSTMENT ASSISTANCE (SUBTITLE A)

Under existing law, petitioning groups of workers are certified by the Secretary of Labor as eligible to apply for worker adjustment assistance if (1) a significant number or proportion of the workers in the firm or appropriate subdivision of the firm have been, or are threatened to be, totally or partially laid off; (2) sales and/or production of the firm or subdivision have decreased absolutely; and (3) increased imports of articles like or directly competitive with articles produced by the firm or subdivision "contributed importantly" to the actual or threatened layoffs and to the sales/production decline.

Individual certified workers who meet the 26 of 52 week preceding layoff employment requirement are eligible for trade readjustment allowance (TRA) payments supplementing unemployment insurance (UI) for up to 52 weeks of unemployment. The weekly TRA payment is 70 percent of the worker's previous gross weekly wage, not to exceed the average weekly manufacturing wage (currently $289), reduced by the worker's UI entitlement and 50 percent of any earnings. Workers may receive up to 26 weeks additional benefits if in training or age 60 or over at time of layoff. Supplemental training assistance and job search and relocation allowances are also available and the Secretary may provide employment services and approve training.

The major amendments in the trade adjustment assistance program for workers under subtitle A of the bill are as follows:

1. The causal link between increased imports and worker layoffs and production/sales declines in the worker's firm or subdivision is strengthened from the present "contributed importantly" standard to the substantial cause" standard used for industry-wide import relief.

2. Certain weeks of employer-authorized leave or disability covered by workmen's compensation will be counted toward the minimum pre-layoff employment requirement; the UI extended benefit "suitable work" test is applied to eligibility for TRA payments but not to other assistance.

3. TRA benefits are reduced to State UI levels for a maximum duration of 52 weeks of UI and TRA combined, payable only upon exhaustion of UI during the worker's most recent benefit period; payments are limited to weeks of unemployment more than 60 days after the petition is filed and during the 52 weeks after exhaustion of regular UI; an additional 26 weeks of TRA benefits will be available to workers in training, but not to older workers.

4. Supplemental training assistance and job search and relocation allowances are increased.

5. Training is authorized if certain conditions exist.

FIRM TRADE ADJUSTMENT ASSISTANCE (SUBTITLE B)

Under existing law, individual firms may receive technical and/or financial assistance if they meet the same certification criteria described above for workers and develop an economic adjustment plan approved by the Secretary of Commerce.

Subtitle B of the bill makes certain modifications necessary to preserve the existing program upon its transfer within the Commerce Department from the Economic Development Administration to the International Trade Administration, including authority for pre-certification and industry-wide technical assistance. Minor amendments make loan guarantees more attractive to private lenders and provide greater flexibility in their interest rate.

The worker and firm programs are reauthorized for one year, to terminate Sept. 30, 1983.

TITLE XXII: FEDERAL OLD AGE, SURVIVORS, AND DISABILITY INSURANCE PROGRAM

PHASE OUT STUDENT BENEFITS FOR POSTSECONDARY STUDENTS

Under current law, monthly cash benefits are paid to the children of an insured worker when the worker retires, becomes disabled, or dies. Because of a provision added in 1965 a child's benefits may continue after age 18 and up until age 22 as long as the beneficiary can establish that he is attending high school, college, or vocational school on a full-time basis. Benefits can continue for several months beyond age 22 (until the end of the school term) if the student has not yet completed his 4-year college degree.

The Act contains a provision, effective August 1982, which would eliminate new benefits for child beneficiaries 18 or older in postsecondary school and 19 or older in high school. However, students 18 or older who began postsecondary school before May 1982 would be able to continue receiving benefits. The amount of their benefits, however, would not be adjusted for changes in the cost of living after August 1981. Further, beginning in August 1982, the amount of their benefit would be reduced each year 25 percent of the August 1981 amount. Benefits would continue until the student turned 22, discontinued his education, or for some other reason ceased to qualify for benefits (in no case could benefit to a postsecondary student 18 or older continue beyond July 1985). In addition, beginning in 1982, no benefits would be payable to these postsecondary students during the summer months, defined as the months May through August.

TERMINATION OF MOTHERS' AND FATHERS' BENEFITS WHEN CHILD ATTAINS AGE 16

Under current law, monthly cash benefits are paid to mothers or fathers caring for a child receiving social security benefits until the child attains age 18. The committee would end entitlement to benefits for mothers and fathers when the child attains age 16.

The provision would not apply in the case of a parent caring for a disabled child aged 16 or over. The provision would be effective with respect to current beneficiaries only at the end of two years after the month of enactment, but would be effective for parents becoming newly entitled in or after the second month after enactment.

ELIMINATE THE SOCIAL SECURITY MINIMUM BENEFIT

Under existing law, social security beneficiaries whose average lifetime earnings in covered employment are low receive a "minimum benefit" which is higher than the benefit they would otherwise receive under the benefit computation formula. (Low average earnings can result from work at low wages or from a few years attachment to the program.) The 1977 amendments "froze" the initial minimum benefit at $122 per month for persons who reach age 62, become disabled, or become eligible for survivor benefits after 1978; once they are on the benefit rolls, these beneficiaries receive the cost-of-living increases payable to all social security beneficiaries. Beneficiaries who turned 62, became disabled, or became newly eligible for survivor benefits in 1978 or earlier, receive whatever minimum benefit was in effect at the time they were first eligible to come on the rolls, plus any cost-of-living adjustments.

The Act contains a provision which eliminates the minimum benefit for all present and future beneficiaries. The amount payable to individuals already receiving benefits based on the minimum primary insurance amount would be recomputed based on their actual earnings record and according to recomputation procedures to be prescribed in regulations issued by the Secretary of Health and Human Services. All benefits payable to new beneficiaries would be based on their actual earnings, with no minimum payment level. In addition, persons aged 60 to 64 who are entitled to a minimum benefit for the month of July 1981 would become eligible for a special SSI benefit, if they qualify under all SSI rules except that pertaining to age. The amount of their SSI payment would be limited to the difference between the minimum benefit the individual received in July 1981 (without regard for the earnings test) and the recalculated benefit.

No person becoming eligible for old age or disability benefits after November 1981 would be entitled to the minimum benefit. All other persons would be affected beginning with benefits payable for the month of March 1982. The Social Security Administration is required to notify all current recipients of the minimum benefit of the reduction in benefits, in writing on or before Dec. 3, 1981.

ROUND SOCIAL SECURITY BENEFITS

Under present law, at each stage in the benefit computation, the amount derived is rounded up to the next higher 10 cents.

The Act provides, effective generally for benefit computations after August 1981, that the amount derived at each stage in the benefit computation would be rounded to the lower dime, except for the last step—the actual benefit amount payable per beneficiary. This would be rounded to the next lower dollar. For those beneficiaries electing supplemental medical insurance (SMI), the rounding would occur after the SMI premium was deducted from the OASDI benefit check.

PENSION REFORM ACT—COST REIMBURSEMENT

Under current law, provisions of the Pension Reform Act of 1974 require administrators of most employee pension plans to furnish plan participants with information concerning their accrued and vested benefit rights. In addition, employers are required to maintain records, in accordance with Department of Labor regulations, sufficient to determine the benefits which are, or may become, due to each employee. While some pension plans have not kept the necessary earnings information, the Social Security Administration does maintain this information and has already received requests from plans for complete earnings histories of plan members. Under the provisions of the Freedom of Information Act and the Privacy Act, the cost of retrieving and transmitting this information is not fully borne by the requestor. Part is financed out of the social security trust funds.

The Act contains a provision to permit SSA to recover the full cost of retrieving and transmitting information for purposes of enabling pension plans to comply with the Pension Reform Act. Effective Oct. 1, 1981, full payment would be required from requestors to the social security trust funds for expenses incurred in providing earnings information, if the request is not directly related to determining an individual's social security benefit. Information requested by individuals for social security program records purposes will generally continue to be provided free of charge.

TRUST FUND FINANCING FOR SUCCESSFUL VOCATIONAL REHABILITATION SERVICES

Under existing law, a limited amount of trust fund money can be used to pay States for vocational rehabilitation services (VR) provided to beneficiaries.

The Act repeals the program that provides social security trust funds for the rehabilitation of disabled social security beneficiaries. However, the States would be provided reimbursement for rehabilitation services provided to disabled beneficiaries if they engage for 9 continuous months in substantial gainful activity (SGA).

RETAIN SOCIAL SECURITY RETIREMENT TEST EXEMPT AGE AT 72 THROUGH 1982

Under current law, the age at which the retirement test no longer applies is scheduled to drop to 70 in January 1982. The provision would delay that change until January 1983.

RESTRICT SOCIAL SECURITY PAYMENT OF LUMP-SUM DEATH BENEFITS

Under current law a lump-sum death payment of $255 is payable when a worker who is fully or currently insured dies.

If there is a surviving spouse living with the worker at the time of death, the lump-sum payment is paid to that person. If there is no widow or widower eligible to receive the lump-sum death payment, the money can be paid to the person who assumed responsibility for funeral expenses.

The Act eliminates the lump-sum death payment effective for deaths occurring after August 1981 in cases where there is no eligible spouse or entitled child. Under the provision, a surviving spouse or child (under age 18) who is eligible (or would be eligible, in the case of a surviving spouse, but for their age) to receive monthly cash survivor benefits upon the worker's death would receive the lump-sum death payment.

MODIFICATION OF MONTH OF INITIAL ENTITLEMENT FOR CERTAIN WORKERS AND THEIR DEPENDENTS

Under current law, social security benefits are paid for the entire month in which a person becomes eligible for the benefits, even if the date of eligibility is in the middle or the end of the month.

The Act allows payment of benefits for certain workers and their dependents only for months in which conditions of eligibility are met for the entire month. This provison is effective for months after August 1981.

MODIFICATION OF WORKER'S COMPENSATION OFFSET

The Act expands the present worker's compensation offset provision to include other disability benefits provided by Federal, State, and local governments, except that needs-tested benefits, veterans benefits, benefits based on public employment covered by social security, and private insurance benefits are not taken into account. The offset applies not only to workers under 62 and their families, but also to workers 62 through 64 and their families. In addition, the reduction is to be made beginning in the month during which the concurrent payments actually began.

The provision is effective with respect to initial entitlement to benefits for individuals who become disabled after the 6th month preceding the month of enactment.

TITLE XXIV: UNEMPLOYMENT COMPENSATION

Elimination of the national trigger for the extended benefits program

Under existing law, up to 13 additional weeks of unemployment benefits, beyond the usual maximum duration of 26 weeks of State benefits, become payable to unemployed workers in times of high unemployment. Fifty percent of the costs of these extended benefits are paid from the proceeds of the Federal unemployment tax and 50 percent from State taxes. Extended benefits are paid in a State when the insured unemployment rate in the State reaches 4 percent and in addition, is 20 percent higher than it was during the same period in the previous two years. Thirty-nine States provide for the payment of extended benefits when their insured unemployment rate reaches 5 percent, regardless of unemployment levels in previous years. Extended benefits are paid in all States, regardless of State unemployment rates, when the national insured unemployment rate reaches 4.5 percent. This is referred to as the "national extended benefits trigger."

Section 2401 of the Act repeals the national trigger, so that extended benefits would be paid only in States with insured rates above the specified levels, effective upon enactment.

Modification of optional State trigger level for extended benefits

Under current law, extended benefits are payable in any State in which the insured unemployment rate (IUR) is at least 4 percent and, in addition, is 20 percent higher than the average of the same period in the previous years. When the "20 percent factor" is not met, a State, at its option may provide extended benefits when the State IUR reaches 5 percent, regardless of the IUR in previous years.

Section 2403 of the Act raises from 4 percent (plus 20 percent factor) to 5 percent (plus 20 percent factor) the IUR at which extended benefits would be payable in any State, and also raises the optional trigger rate from 5 percent to 6 percent. The provision is effective for weeks beginning after Sept. 25, 1982.

Exclude extended benefits claimants from State trigger calculations

Under current law, the insured unemployment rate—used to determine unemployment levels for the purpose of triggering extended benefits—is calculated by dividing the number of individuals receiving regular-State or extended benefits by the total number of workers covered under the State unemployment law.

Section 2402 of the Act excludes extended benefits claimants from the calculation of the insured unemployment rate for extended benefits trigger purposes effective on date of enactment.

Require 20 weeks of work or equivalent wages for extended benefits

Under present law, all States require an individual to have worked for a certain length of time or to have earned a specified amount of wages in the base year to be eligible for State unemployment compensation benefits. There are no additional work or wage requirements for receipt of extended benefits. A person who exhausts State benefits during a period when extended benefits are payable, and who continues to meet State and Federal requirements, is eligible to receive extended benefits for one-half of the number of weeks (up to a maximum of 13 weeks) she received State benefits.

Section 2404 of the Act requires extended benefits claimants to have worked at least 20 weeks, or have an equivalent amount of wages during the base period in order to receive extended benefits. States could use one of the following measures of equivalent wages:

Wages equal to 40 times the claimant's weekly benefit amount; or Wages equal to 1.50 times the claimant's wages earned in the quarter with the highest wages.

The provision is effective for weeks beginning after Sept. 25, 1982.

Changes in unemployment compensation requirements for ex-military personnel

Under present law, federally funded unemployment benefits are provided to former military personnel upon their separation from military service if they meet the qualifying requirements of the State in which they apply for unemployment compensation. The military service of the individual qualifies as wages or employment in the determination of eligibility under the State unemployment compensation law only if (1) the person had served continuously for 1 year or more prior to separation and (2) the individual was separated under other than dishonorable or bad-conduct circumstances.

Section 2405 of the Act disqualifies, for unemployment compensation those ex-servicemembers who leave the military at the end of a term of enlistment and are eligible to reenlist, effective July 1981, but only to weeks of unemployment compensation payable after date of enactment.

Certification of State unemployment laws

Under current law, a payroll of 3.4 percent on the first $6,000 of wages paid to employees is levied on employers (Federal Unemployment Tax Act, FUTA). If a State's unemployment compensation program is certified by the Secretary of Labor as meeting certain requirements of Federal law, employers in that State receive a 2.7 percent credit against the 3.4 percent FUTA tax.

Section 2408 of the Act (1) prohibits certification by the Secretary of Labor of any State which has failed to amend its unemployment compensation law so that it contains provisions required to be included by this Act, including provisions of the Federal-State Extended Unemployment Compensation Act; (2) delays for 1 year the effective dates of sections 2401 and 2402 for any State whose legislature does not meet at least 25 calendar days after the date of enactment and before Sept. 25, 1981; (3) delays for 1 year the effective dates of sections 2403 and 2404 for any State whose legislature does not meet at least 25 calendar days after the date of enactment and before Sept. 25, 1982.

Federal unemployment compensation loans to States

Under present law, the costs of regular State benefits and one-half of the costs of extended benefits are funded by State unemployment payroll taxes. If State unemployment tax revenues exceed benefit costs, the surplus amounts are retained by the State in an interest bearing account in the Federal Unemployment Trust Fund. If the benefit costs exceed revenues, States draw down their accumulated surpluses from prior years. If those surpluses become depleted, States are allowed to receive interest-free Federal advances from an account which is funded through the Federal unemployment payroll tax (FUTA). If there are insufficient Federal unemployment tax revenues for this purpose, additional funds are obtained as interest-free advances from the general fund of the Treasury. The standard net Federal unemployment tax, which is paid by employers in all States, is currently 0.7 percent on the first $6,000 paid annually to each employee. The gross FUTA tax rate is 3.4 percent; however, employers are eligible for a 2.7 percent credit against this Federal tax (unless, as explained below, the State is subject to a reduction in this credit because of outstanding Federal advances). The 2.7 percent credit reduces the gross tax rate from 3.4 to the net tax rate of 0.7 percent.

States with an outstanding advance from the Federal Government must repay it fully within two to three years. (Technically, it must be repaid by November 10 of the calendar year in which the second consecutive January 1 passes with the State still having an outstanding advance. This means that a State may have from 22 months and 10 days to 34 months and 10 days to repay the advance, depending on when it obtained the outstanding advance.)

If a State does not fully repay an advance within the 22 to 34 month period, employers in the State become subject to a reduction in the 2.7 percent credit against the 3.4 percent Federal tax. This credit reduction is applied to the calendar year beginning with the second consecutive January 1 in which the advance has been outstanding and continues until the advance is repaid fully. The increased tax resulting from the credit reduction is payable no later than January 31 of the next calendar year. The proceeds from the increased tax are used to reduce the principal of the State's outstanding loan.

Sections 2406 and 2407 of the Act cap the credit reduction under certain conditions and charge interest on advances under certain conditions:

a. Limit on Federal tax credit reduction. Effective Oct. 1, 1981, through Dec. 31, 1987, in States that meet certain solvency requirements, reductions in the Federal tax credit resulting from outstanding Federal loans are limited to 0.6 percent or, if higher, the level that was in effect in the year prior to the year the State qualifies for the limitation. The years in which a State meets the requirements, and therefore qualifies for a limitation in the credit reduction, would not count in determining the level of the increase in the net Federal tax in subsequent years in which the State does not meet the solvency requirements.

b. Interest on Federal unemployment compensation loans to States. Interest will be charged on unemployment loans to States received between Apr. 1, 1982 and Dec. 31, 1987. The rate of interest charged in any year is the same as that paid by the Federal Government on balances in State unemployment trust funds for the quarter ending December 31 of the preceding year, but no higher than 10 percent per annum.

A State would not have to pay interest on a loan that is repaid by September 30 of the calendar year in which the advance was received, if the State receives no new advances during the period remaining in the calendar year following the repayment.

c. Non-FUTA repayments. Any non-FUTA State repayments (not including a lump-sum repayment in lieu of the credit reduction) is credited first to the most recent loans received by the State that have not triggered a credit reduction.

TITLE XXIII: PUBLIC ASSISTANCE PROGRAMS

SUBTITLE A: AID TO FAMILIES WITH DEPENDENT CHILDREN; CHILD SUPPORT ENFORCEMENT

Limit earned income disregards

Under current law, in determining AFDC benefits, States reduce a family's monthly payment by the amount of any earnings that remain after the following disregards are applied: (1) the first $30, plus one-third of additional earnings; and (2) any expenses (including child care) reasonably attributable to the earning of any such income. (The work expense disregard is available to both recipients and new applicants. The $30 and one-third applies only to those already on the rolls.)

Section 2301 of the Act requires States to disregard the following amount of monthly earnings, effective Oct. 1, 1981:

The provision standardizes the work expense disregard at $75 per month for full time employment, caps the child care disregard at $160 per month, and changes the order of the $30 plus one-third disregard.

States are required to disregard the following amount of earnings, in the following order:

(a) Eligibility determination—The first $75 of monthly earnings (in lieu of itemized work expenses); and the cost of care for a child or incapacitated adult, up to $160 per child per month.

(b) Benefit calculation—The first $75 of monthly earnings; child care costs up to $160 per child per month; and $30 plus one-third of earnings not previously disregarded.

The $30 plus one-third disregard is only allowed during the first 4 consecutive months in which a recipient has earnings in excess of the standard work expense and child care disregards. After 4 months, the benefit is determined without the $30 plus one-third disregard for each month the family continues to receive AFDC and for 12 consecutive months after AFDC is terminated.

Count income of stepparent

Under existing law, States are prohibited from assuming the income of a stepparent is available to an AFDC child unless, under State law, stepparents are required to support stepchildren to the same extent that natural parents are required to support their children. In most States, a stepparent's income can be counted only in cases in which the welfare agency receives information that the income is available to an AFDC child. However, States are allowed to prorate AFDC shelter and utility benefits when an eligible child lives with a relative, including a stepparent, who is not an AFDC recipient, as long as the total income exceeds the State's standard of need.

Section 2306 of the Act requires the income of a stepparent to be counted in determining eligibility and benefit amounts for AFDC applicants or their children. Countable income would include any amount which exceeds: (1) the first $75 of earned income (a smaller amount may be prescribed for less than full-time work); (2) the amount specified in the State's standard as the amount needed by the stepparent to support himself and his dependents living in the same household; (3) amounts paid by the stepparent to dependents living outside the household; and (4) payments of alimony or child support to individuals not in the same household. The law would be amended to preclude prorating of shelter allowances with regard to persons to whom this provision applies.

Require retrospective accounting and monthly reporting

Under Federal regulations, each State may choose to pay benefits "retrospectively" (make payments after a month has ended on the basis of the person's income during the month) or "prospectively" (make payments during or before a month based on what the recipient's circumstances are expected to be during that month). The Federal statute makes no mention of how frequently AFDC recipients must submit reports to the welfare agency.

Section 2315 of the Act (a) requires States to determine monthly benefits "retrospectively" on the basis of the actual income of the previous month. Eligibility would be determined "prospectively" on the basis of current month's circumstances. And, for the first month of a family's eligibility, benefits would be determined on current month's circumstances. States would have to require all recipients to provide monthly reports on income, family composition, resources, etc.

(b) the Secretary could allow a State to require less frequent reporting for specified classes of recipients, if the State demonstrates the administrative cost of monthly reporting for such recipients is not worthwhile. Effective Oct. 1, 1981.

Provisions related to employment of AFDC recipients

Under existing law, recipients of aid to families with dependent children (AFDC) are required to register for participation in the work incentive (WIN) program unless they fall within certain exempt categories specified in the Federal statute (e.g., mothers caring for children under age 6). Under the WIN program, recipients are required to accept available employment or training in order to receive AFDC payments. States are not now allowed to establish alternative work requirements which do not conform closely to the WIN program.

Section 2307 of the Act authorizes States to establish community work experience programs for AFDC recipients. Under these programs, recipients could be required to work on useful public projects in return for their AFDC grants. Any such required work must meet appropriate standards with respect to health, safety, and other conditions. The amount of work required in relation to the family's AFDC payments must be consistent with Federal or State wage provisions. Persons exempt under present law from participation in the WIN program would also generally be exempt from participation in this program except that parents caring for children under age 6 (but not under age 3) could be required to participate if child care is available.

Section 2308 of the Act permits States to use savings from reduced AFDC grant levels to make jobs available on a voluntary basis. Under this approach, recipients would be given a choice between taking a job or depending upon a lower AFDC grant than now exists. States implementing this provision could do so in addition to or as an alternative to the community work experience approach.

Section 2309 of the Act authorizes States to implement 3-year demonstration projects of their own design as an alternative to the current work incentive program. Participation criteria would have to follow the work incentive provisions and would have to be applied statewide. However, the components of the program could be varied in different regions or political subdivisions of the State. Earnings derived from participating in the project would not make a family ineligible for AFDC. The demonstrations would be administered by the State welfare agencies.

These provisions are effective Oct. 1, 1981.

Define an unemployed parent (UP) as the parent who is the principal earner for the family

Under present law, States have the option to provide AFDC-UP benefits to families where both parents are in the home and one is unemployed. Only one parent must be unemployed to meet this eligibility requirement; the other parent may be employed.

Section 2313 of the Act limits eligibility for AFDC to those two-parent families in which the "principal earner" (the parent with the most earnings in the 24 month period prior to application) is unemployed, effective Oct. 1, 1981.

Require States to recover AFDC overpayments and pay underpayments

Current Federal law does not require States to recover overpayments or make a retroactive reimbursement for any underpayments. By regulation, States are given the option of recouping overpayments. However, if a State recovers overpayments, it must also pay underpayments.

Section 2318 of the Act would require States to promptly take all necessary steps to correct any overpayments or underpayments. Recovery of overpayments would be made from current assistance payments, available income, or through legal processes. In the case of a current recipient, the amount recovered in any month could not exceed the amount that would reduce the family's grant below 90 percent of the benefit for a family of the same size. This provision is effective Oct. 1, 1981.

Optional payments for dependent children age 18 and over and in school

Under present law, to be eligible for AFDC as a dependent child, the general rule is that the person must be under 18 years of age. States have the option, however, of continuing benefits through age 20 if the person is regularly attending high school, vocational school or college. Currently 43 States extend AFDC eligibility to students age 18 through 20. These States may limit benefits to those attending high school and vocational schools; but they must continue benefits through age 20 if the person remains in school.

Section 2311 of the Act amends the definition of "dependent child" to limit benefits to children through age 17. A State could opt to provide benefits through age 18 to those who are in primary or secondary schools, effective Oct. 1, 1981.

Deem sponsors' income to aliens in AFDC families

Current Federal law does not require States to consider the income of a sponsor of an alien legally admitted to the U.S. as income available to the alien for AFDC program purposes.

Section 2320 of the Act restricts AFDC payments to citizens of the U.S. and lawfully admitted aliens. In addition, the income and resources of the sponsor would be considered available to an alien in an AFDC family for three years after his or her entry into the U.S. The provision would be applicable with respect to individuals applying for aid for the first time after Oct. 1, 1981.

Limitation on resources

Under present law, States are required to take into consideration any resources of a child or relative in determining eligibility for AFDC benefits. States are allowed to exclude certain resources, including a home, personal effects, an automobile and income-producing property. Regulations require States to deny benefits to any individual whose assets minus the exclusions exceed $2,000.

Section 2302 of the Act reduces the current $2,000 per recipient limit on resources to $1,000 per family. States would be allowed to exclude a home and one car. The value of the automobile would be limited by regulations. This provision is effective Oct. 1, 1981.

Permit offset for food stamps and housing subsidies

Under current law, States may establish the standard to be used in determining AFDC payments. The standard may be "consolidated," that is, provide a dollar amount to cover all basic needs, or it may provide amounts for certain specified items. Federal regulations do not require that a standard of assistance include any specific items or number of items. In setting the dollar amount of the standard, a State may or may not take into account the availability of food stamps. In addition, the State standard may or may not take into account the value of available housing subsidies.

Section 2302 of the Act permits States explicitly to take into account the value of benefits received from food stamps or housing subsidies. This would be done by treating the value of the food stamp coupons or housing subsidy as income, up to the value for food or shelter that is included in the State standard. The provision is effective Oct. 1, 1981.

Income limit for AFDC eligibility

Under present law, there is no statutory limit on the amount of gross income a family may have and still remain on AFDC. In determining eligibility, work-related expenses (including child care costs) are disregarded. In addition to work expenses, $30 plus one-third of gross earnings minus $30 are disregarded in determining the monthly payment for those determined to be eligible for benefits. Recipients become ineligible for benefits at the point their countable income equals the AFDC benefit amount.

Section 2303 of the Act, effective Oct. 1, 1981, limits eligibility for AFDC to families with gross incomes at or below 150 percent of the State's standard of need.

Treatment of income in excess of standard of need; lump sum payments

Under present law, any payments that meet the definition of income (e.g., retroactive social security benefits) are counted as income in the month of receipt and any of the payment that is not spent in that month is usually considered a resource in the months thereafter.

Section 2304 of the Act, effective Oct. 1, 1981, requires that income received in a month be considered available as income in the month it is received and also in future months. Thus, if such income exceeded the standard of need in the month of receipt, the family would be ineligible in that month. In addition, any amount of the income that exceeds the initial month's needs standard would be divided by the monthly needs standard, and the family would be ineligible for aid for the number of months resulting from that calculation.

Treatment of earned income tax credit (EITC) advance amount under AFDC

Under current law, the earned income tax credit (EITC) supplements the earnings of the working poor by providing tax credits or rebates through the tax system. Eligible employees may elect to receive their EITC in the form of advance payments added to their paychecks, rather than waiting until the end of the year to apply for refunds. For purposes of determining AFDC eligibility and benefit amounts, the EITC (whether received as an advance payment or an income tax refund) is counted as carried income when actually received.

Section 2305 of the Act, effective Oct. 1, 1981, provides that, in determining earned income for AFDC, the State must assume that an individual is receiving the EITC advance payment that he or she is eligible to receive, regardless of whether or not the person has applied for the advance payment (i.e., if the individual does not receive advance EITC payments, an amount equal to what he or she could get as advance payment is imputed as earned income).

Prohibition against payment of aid in amounts below $10

Under present law, States must make a payment to families eligible to receive AFDC regardless of how small the amount of the payment.

Section 2316 of the Act prohibits States from issuing AFDC checks in amounts less than $10 a month. Individuals denied a benefit as a result of this provision would be considered recipients for all purposes, including medicaid eligibility. Effective Oct. 1, 1981.

Remove 20 percent limit on vendor payments

Under current law, the States are restricted in their use of vendor payments (direct payments by the welfare agency for housing, utilities, etc.), in that vendor payments may not be used in more than 20 percent of the State's AFDC caseload. Use of vendor payments is further restricted to those households which are determined to be unable to manage funds properly for the use of the child.

Section 2317 of the Act, effective Oct. 1, 1981, removes all restrictions on the number of cases in which vendor payments are made by a State, and allows recipients to choose to have vendor payments made even though they could otherwise receive payments directly. There would not have to be a determination that the household cannot manage funds for those who elect to receive vendor payments.

Effect of participation in a strike on eligibles for AFDC

Current Federal law does not expressly exclude strikers from AFDC eligibility. States must pay AFDC benefits to households where the caretaker relative is not required to work, even though she could be working if not involved in a labor dispute (as long as the family meets other eligibility requirements). Where eligibility is based on the unemployed parent, the States have the option of paying or denying benefits to households where the parents' unemployment results from a strike.

Section 2310 of the Act, effective Oct. 1, 1981, requires States to specify that striking workers must comply with all AFDC provisions concerning work registration and training. No AFDC would be payable to a family in which the caretaker relative is engaged in a strike on the last day of the month, and no individual participating in a strike could have his or her needs included in computing the amount of the AFDC grant.

Limitation on AFDC pregnant women

Under present law, States have the option of paying AFDC benefits to pregnant women with no other children.

Section 2312 of the Act, effective Oct. 1, 1981, prohibits AFDC for pregnant women with no other children until the last 3 months of pregnancy. However, AFDC-eligible pregnant women with no children would be covered under medicaid from the determination of pregnancy.

Work requirement for AFDC recipients

Under present law, children 16 and over, including AFDC parents, are not required to register for work or training under the WIN program if they are attending school (including college) full-time. Also exempt from a WIN registration requirement are those "caretakers" caring for a child under age 6.

Section 2314 of the Act limits the exemption from work requirements to children who are attending, full-time, an elementary, secondary, or vocational school. Also, the exemption for caretakers is limited to a parent or relative who is personally caring for a child with only brief or infrequent absences from the child. The provision is effective Oct. 1, 1981.

Reduce Federal match for training

Under current law, the Federal Government reimburses States for 75 percent of training expenses for employees (or those preparing for employment) of State or local agencies administering the AFDC program. All other administrative expenses are matched at a 50 percent rate.

Section 2319 of the Act, effective Oct. 1, 1981, provides that training expenses be matched by the Federal Government at a 50 percent rate, rather than 75 percent as under present law.

CHILD SUPPORT ENFORCEMENT

Collection of support for adults

Under current law, a State child support agency is not authorized to collect support (i.e., alimony) on behalf of a parent of a child for whom it is collecting child support. This is the case even when a court has ordered a single amount for both the parent and the child, without specifying the amount payable on behalf of each.

Section 2332 of the Act makes State child support enforcement agencies responsible for collecting support for adults, in the case of a parent of a child for whom it is collecting child support and in those cases in which the support obligation has already been established, in the same manner as for child support.

Modify collection fee for non-AFDC families

Under existing law, States are required to provide services to non-AFDC families requesting assistance. States have the option of charging a fee of up to $20 and of retaining a portion of the child support payments to recover costs of administration in excess of the application fee.

Section 2333 of the Act requires States to charge a fee equal to 10 percent of the support collected for non-AFDC recipients to defray costs of the child support enforcement agency collection services. The fee would be retained by the State. This provision is effective upon enactment.

Child support obligations not discharged by bankruptcy

In 1974, a provision was included in the child support enforcement program which prohibited the discharge in bankruptcy of a child support obligation which had been assigned to a State as a condition of AFDC eligibility. This Social Security Act provision was subsequently repealed by section 328 of Public Law 95-598 (the 1978 revision of the Bankruptcy Act).

Section 2334 of the Act reinstates the provision previously in effect which provides that a child support obligation assigned to a State as a condition of AFDC eligibility is not discharged in bankruptcy, effective upon enactment.

Child support intercept of unemployment benefits

Under existing law, there is no provision allowing for the withholding of unemployment benefits in cases of outstanding child support obligations.

Section 2335 of the Act requires child support enforcement agencies to determine on a periodic basis whether any individuals receiving unemployment compensation or trade adjustment assistance benefits owe child support obligations. The agency would be required to collect any outstanding child support obligations owed by an individual receiving unemployment benefits, through an agreement with the individual or the legal process of the State, by having a portion of the person's unemployment benefits withheld and forwarded to the child support agency by the unemployment compensation agency. This provision is effective Oct. 1, 1981; but the provisions would not become State child support enforcement and unemployment compensation plan requirements until Oct. 1, 1982.

Internal Revenue Service collection of child support and alimony

Under current law, a State may request the IRS to collect delinquent, court-ordered child support payments after the State has made diligent and reasonable efforts to collect the payments. The amount of the child support obligation must be certified by the Secretary of Health and Human Services before IRS collection procedures may be used.

Section 2331 of the Act amplifies existing authority in the following way. Upon receiving notice from a State child support agency that an individual owes past-due support which has been assigned to the State as a condition of AFDC eligibility, the Secretary of the Treasury would be required to withhold from any tax refunds due that individual, an amount equal to any past-due support. The withheld amount would be sent to the State agency, together with notice of the taxpayer's current address. The Secretary of the Treasury would be required to issue regulations, approved by the Secretary of HHS, prescribing the timing and contents of notices by the States. States would be required to reimburse the Federal Government for the cost of the procedure. "Past-due support" is defined as the amount of a delinquency, determined under court order or an order of an administrative process established under State law for support and maintenance of a child, or of a child and the parent with whom the child is living. The provision would be effective Oct. 1, 1981, unless the State agency demonstrates that it cannot, by reason of State law, comply with the requirement. In such cases, the Secretary of HHS may prescribe an effective date no later than the first month which begins after the close of the first session of the State's legislature ending on or after Oct. 1, 1981.

SUBTITLE B: SUPPLEMENTAL SECURITY INCOME (SSI)

Retrospective accounting for SSI recipients

Currently, SSI benefits are determined on the basis of income anticipated to be available in the current calendar quarter. Redeterminations are made at such times as provided by the Secretary.

Section 2341 of the Act provides that SSI benefits be based on actual income of the previous month (or, at the Secretary's option, the circumstances in effect on the last day of the second previous month). Eligibility would be based on current month's circumstances. And, for the first month benefits are received, benefits would be based on current month's circumstances. This provision is effective for months after the last month of the first quarter ending 5 months after enactment.

Eligibility of SSI recipients for food stamps

Under current law, SSI recipients in three States—Massachusetts, Wisconsin and California—receive a cash payment, as a part of the State supplemental SSI benefits, in lieu of food stamps. Massachusetts and Wisconsin are allowed to provide SSI recipients cash in lieu of food stamps because, and for so long as, the Federal Government continues to contribute to the cost of the State supplemental benefit as provided under the "hold harmless" provisions in present SSI law. A separate Federal law allows California to continue to "cash-out" food stamps for SSI recipients so long as it continues to pass-through each year the Federal SSI cost-of-living increase and provides a yearly cost-of-living adjustment in its State supplementary benefit.

Section 2342 of the Act modifies current Federal SSI food stamp "cash-out" requirements so that a State could continue to "cash-out" food stamps for SSI recipients so long as it (1) had previously increased its supplementary benefits to include the bonus value of food stamps, (2) was providing a cash payment in lieu of food stamps as of December 1980, and (3) continued to pass-through the Federal cost-of-living increases as required under section 1618 of current SSI law. This provision is effective July 1, 1981.

Negotiability of SSI check

Under existing law there is no time limit on the negotiability of SSI checks.

Section 2343 of the Act requires the Secretary of the Treasury to notify the Secretary of HHS on a monthly basis of all benefit checks which have not been presented for payment within 180 days of issuance. The Secretary of HHS is required to return (or credit) amounts which represent State supplementary payments to the State. The Social Security Administration must attempt to determine the whereabouts and eligibility of those recipients whose checks were not negotiated within 180 days of issuance. The provision is effective Oct. 1, 1981.

Funding of rehabilitation services for SSI recipients

Under present law, the Secretary has the authority to reimburse State vocational rehabilitation agencies for services provided to blind and disabled recipients of the SSI program.

Section 2344 of the Act allows the Secretary to reimburse State vocational rehabilitation agencies only for services provided to SSI recipients who subsequently perform substantial gainful activity which lasts for a continuous period of 9 months, under the same conditions as are applicable with respect to reimbursement for services to social security beneficiaries (as provided in this Act). The provision is effective Oct. 1, 1981.

SUBTITLE C: SOCIAL SERVICES BLOCK GRANT

Subtitle C amends title XX of the Social Security Act to establish a new block grant to States for social services. The new block grant does not incorporate the child welfare services, foster care, and adoption assistance programs.

The Act provides that each State is entitled to an annual allotment for operating social services programs aimed at meeting the following goals:

(1) Achieving or maintaining economic self-support to prevent, reduce, or eliminate dependency;

(2) Achieving or maintaining self-sufficiency, including reduction or prevention of dependency;

(3) Preventing or remedying neglect, abuse, or exploitation of children and adults unable to protect their own interests, or preserving rehabilitation, or reuniting families;

(4) Preventing or reducing inappropriate institutional care by providing for community-based care, home-based care, or other forms of less intensive care; and

(5) Securing referral or admission for institutional care when other forms of care are not appropriate, or providing services to individuals in institutions.

The amount of the allotment for each State is its share of a national total of $2.4 billion in 1982, $2.45 billion in 1983, $2.5 billion in 1984, $2.6 billion in 1985, and $2.7 billion in 1986 and years thereafter. Allotments would be based on State population.

TITLE XXVI: LOW-INCOME HOME ENERGY ASSISTANCE

Reauthorization of low-income energy assistance

Under current law, authority for providing low-income energy assistance (LIEA) exists under both the Economic Opportunity Act of 1964 and the Home Energy Assistance Act of 1980 (title III of the Crude Oil Windfall Profit Tax Act of 1980 (P.L. 96-223)). The Economic Opportunity Act does not specify a specific budget authority. The Home Energy Assistance Act authorizes $3.125 billion for energy assistance in fiscal year 1981. The authority under both acts expires on Sept. 30, 1981. For fiscal year 1981, $1.85 billion was appropriated for LIEA under the authority of the Economic Opportunity Act of 1964. However, the fiscal year 1981 appropriation stipulates that LIEA is to be administered under the "terms and conditions" of the regulations and any "non-formula amendments thereto" published in the May 30, 1980 Federal Register pursuant to the Home Energy Assistance Act of 1980.

Sections 2601—2611 authorize a new low-income energy assistance program under a free-standing act, the Low Income Home Energy Assistance Act of 1981. Funding is set at $1.875 billion for each of fiscal years 1982, 1983, and 1984. Each State will receive the same proportion of Federal funds appropriated that it received of funds allocated for fiscal year 1981. The Secretary is empowered to reallocate funds that are not used by the State in that fiscal year although the State may request to retain 25 percent of its allotment. Programs are 100-percent federally financed.

Funds could be used to provide assistance to families receiving federally funded public assistance benefits (AFDC, SSI, food stamps, veterans benefits) and to other families with incomes which do not exceed the greater of 50 percent of the poverty level of the State or 60 percent of State median income. Payments could be made directly to eligible households, or to energy suppliers on behalf of eligible households.

States may use funds to assist eligible households pay for the costs of heating or cooling and for the purchase and installation of weatherization materials designed to improve the heating or cooling efficiency of homes of eligible households. However, no more than 15 percent of the funds available to each State may be used for weatherization or other energy-related home repair. In addition, States are required to reserve a reasonable amount of funds, based on data from prior years for energy crisis intervention.

TITLE XXI: MEDICARE

Medicare reimbursement limits on inpatient hospital and home health services are tightened, an incentive reimbursement system providing for a dual composite rate formula for renal dialysis services is established, and medicare is made the secondary payor for the first 12 months after an individual has been determined to be eligible for end-stage renal benefits. Rules regarding reduced payment for longterm care in hospitals are tightened with different criteria established for public hospitals and nonpublic hospitals, a provision of existing law postponing reimbursement to certain hospitals at the end of fiscal year 1981 is repealed, and the routine nursing salary cost differential is reduced from 8½ percent to 5 percent.

Occupational therapy is no longer recognized as a qualifying criterion for home health benefits, but such benefits can be continued if the patient continues to need occupational therapy. Freestanding alcohol detoxification facilities are no longer recognized as medicare providers of services, and the open enrollment period for medicare part B is limited to January through March of each year.

Deductible and coinsurance amounts under medicare part A (hospital insurance) are changed to more nearly reflect current hospital costs. The annual deductible for medicare part B (supplementary medical insurance) is increased from $60 to $75, and expenses incurred in the last 3 months of a year may no longer be used to satisfy the part B deductible in the next year.

The Secretary is authorized to impose civil money penalties on persons who file fraudulent medicare or medicaid claims; surveys of skilled nursing facilities are permitted to be conducted less frequently than annually; and utilization guidelines are to be established for coverage of home health services. Additionally, the Act provides for reimbursement for certain costs associated with closing or conversion to approved use, of underutilized beds or services in hospitals.

Payment under both medicare part B and medicaid is prohibited for certain prescription drugs found to be less than effective in use. The Secretary is authorized to offset, from reimbursements due to certain medicare providers, overpayments made to them under medicaid. The Secretary is authorized to establish limitations on costs or charges that will be considered reasonable for outpatient services provided by certain providers of medicare services.

The Secretary is authorized to terminate up to 30 percent of the less effective PSRO's by the end of fiscal year 1982 and the States are given the option of contracting with PSRO's for medicaid review with the Federal Government paying 75 percent of the cost of review. The Secretary is required to implement, by Jan. 1, 1982, the provision of P.L. 96—499 relating to demonstration projects for the training and employment of AFDC recipients as homemakers and home health aides.

Finally, the Act makes several technical and clerical corrections in present medicare law.

H.R. 3991 (Mr. de la Garza, with cosponsors); Public Law 97-118; app. June 30, 1981.

H.R. 3991, a bill to amend Public Law 93-233, the Food Stamp Act of 1977, was jointly referred to the Agriculture and Ways and Means Committees. The bill amends sec. 8(d) of Public Law 93-233 to continue the "cash-out" of food stamp program benefits of certain recipients of supplemental security income (SSI).

Under current law, SSI recipients in three States—Massachusetts, Wisconsin, and California—receive a cash payment, as part of the State supplemental SSI benefit, in lieu of food stamps. Massachusetts and Wisconsin are allowed to provide SSI recipients cash in lieu of food stamps because, and for so long as, the Federal Government continues to contribute to the cost of the State supplemental benefits. California is permitted to cash out food stamps for SSI recipients so long as it continues to pass through each year the Federal SSI cost-of-living increase and provides a yearly cost-of-living adjustment in its State supplemental benefit.

Sec. 2 of the bill provides that a State may continue to cash out food stamps for SSI recipients in the State if (1) the State increased its supplemental payments to include the bonus value of food stamps in June 1976, (2) recipients of supplementary payments in such State were ineligible for food stamps for the month of December 1980, and (3) the State continues to meet the requirements for passing through the Federal cost-of-living increases in SSI.

The provision is effective for the period July 1, 1981, through Aug. 1, 1981.

The Agriculture and Ways and Means Committees were discharged from consideration of the bill by the House and it passed the House on June 23, 1981. The bill passed the Senate on June 26, 1981. H.R. 3991 was signed into law by the President on June 30, 1981, as Public Law 97-118.

H.R. 4182 (Mr. Mineta with cosponsors); passed House July 27, 1981. (See P.L. 97-35 (H.R. 3982) for further action.)

H.R. 4182, the Fiscal Year 1981 Airport Development Authorization Act, was reported by the House Committee on Public Works and Transportation on July 24, 1981. The bill authorizes funding from the Airport and Airway Trust Fund for the ADAP and noise abatement programs for fiscal year 1981. As reported, the bill included a conforming amendment approved by the Committee on Ways and Means on July 23, 1981, to the provisions of the trust fund in sec. 208(f) of the Airport and Airway Revenue Act of 1970.

H.R. 4182 passed the House on July 27, 1981. The provisions of the bill were later enacted by Congress in Public Law 97-35, the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1981.

H.R. 4242 (Mr. Rostenkowski); Public Law 97-34; app. Aug. 13, 1981.

H.R. 4242, the Economic Recovery Tax Act of 1981, embodies the tax aspects of the administration's economic recovery program, with amendments. As reported by the Ways and Means Committee on July 24, 1981, H.R. 4242 then titled the Tax Incentive Act of 1981, sought to encourage economic growth through (1) reductions in individual taxes with most of the relief targeted to individuals with less than $50,000 of income, (2) expensing of machinery and equipment, (3) corporate rate cuts, (4) substantial tax relief for small business, and (5) significant incentives for savings, investment, and productivity. On July 29, 1981, the House adopted a substitute providing for (1) a three-year across-the-board individual rate cut with indexing of the tax brackets, personal exemptions, and the zero bracket amount beginning in 1985, (2) the accelerated cost recovery system (ACRS), and (3) other changes. The Senate passed the bill on July 31, 1981, with further amendments. The conference report was adopted by the Senate on Aug. 3, 1981, and by the House on Aug. 4, 1981. The President signed H.R. 4242 on Aug. 13, 1981, as Public Law 97-34.

I. Summary of Provisions of H.R. 4242

A. INDIVIDUAL INCOME TAX REDUCTIONS

1. Individual income tax rate reductions

Under present law, individual income tax rates begin at 14 percent on taxable income above $3,400 on a joint return and $2,400 on a single return. The rates range up to 70 percent on taxable incomes, in excess of $215,400 on a joint return, and $108,300 on a single return.

The highest marginal rate is 70 percent on taxable income in excess of $215,400 on a joint return and $108,300 on a single return. However, the top rate on personal service income is limited to 50 percent (the maximum tax). This rate applies above $60,000 on a joint return and $41,500 on a single return.

A deduction from gross income is allowed for 60 percent of any net capital gain for the year. The remaining 40 percent of any net capital gain is taxed at the ordinary rates up to 70 percent. Thus, the top effective tax rate on capital gains is 28 percent (70 percent rate times the 40 percent included in taxable income).

The Act provides for cumulative across-the-board reductions in individual income tax rates of 23 percent by 1984 on the following schedule:

1981	1¼ percent
1982	10 percent
1983	19 percent
1984	23 percent

Withholding changes take place on Oct. 1, 1981, July 1, 1982, and July 1, 1983. The Act makes several other withholding changes to give the Secretary the authority to issue regulations to permit workers to adjust their withholding to more closely match their tax liability.

The Act reduces the top marginal rate from 70 percent to 50 percent (and, thus, the maximum effective rate on capital gains from 28 percent to 20 percent) in 1982 and repeals the maximum tax in 1982.

A special alternative tax for 1981 provides that a maximum 20-percent rate on net capital gains applies to sales or exchanges occurring after June 9, 1981. Thus, this provision does not apply to taxable receipts after June 9, 1981, of proceeds of sales or exchanges which occurred prior to that date. However, proceeds received in taxable years after 1981 will be taxed at the rate in effect for that year.

2. Deduction for two-earner married couples

Under present law, married taxpayers generally are treated as a single taxpaying unit. If married taxpayers elect to file separate rather than joint returns, they usually pay a higher tax. The differing rate schedules for single and married taxpayers give rise to a marriage penalty when two single wage earners with relatively equal incomes marry.

The Act allows couples filing a joint return a deduction in computing adjusted gross income equal to a percentage of the lower earning spouse's qualified earned income (up to $30,000 of income). In 1982, the percentage will be 5 percent (up to a $1,500 maximum deduction) and in 1983 and subsequent years the percentage will be 10 percent (up to $3,000 maximum deduction).

3. Indexing

Under present law, the individual income tax is based on various fixed amounts including the amounts that define the tax brackets, the zero bracket amount, and the personal exemption. These amounts are set by statute and are not adjusted for inflation.

Under the Act, the income tax brackets, zero bracket amount, and personal exemption are adjusted for inflation (as measured by the Consumer Price Index), starting in 1985. The first adjustment, for 1985, will be based on the increase in the CPI between fiscal year 1983 and fiscal year 1984.

4. Child and dependent care credit

Present law provides a tax credit equal to 20 percent of expenditures, for the care of children and other dependents, which are incurred in connection with the taxpayer's employment. The maximum amount of expenditures that may be taken into account is $2,000 (one dependent) or $4,000 (two or more dependents). Thus, the maximum credit is $400 or $800. In general, expenses incurred for services outside the household are not creditable unless incurred for the care of a dependent under the age of 15.

The Act increases the child and dependent care credit to 30 percent of employment-related expenses for taxpayers with adjusted gross income of $10,000 or less. For each $2,000 (or fraction thereof) above $10,000, the percentage of creditable expenses is reduced by one percent (but not below 20 percent). Taxpayers with adjusted gross income in excess of $28,000 will be entitled to a credit of 20 percent of employment-related expenses.

The Act also increases the amounts of employment-related expenses that may be taken into account to $2,400 (one dependent) and $4,800 (two or more dependents). Furthermore, the Act provides that qualified, employer-provided child care will not be included in an employee's gross income.

The provisions are effective for taxable years beginning after Dec. 31, 1981.

5. Charitable contribution deduction for nonitemizers

Under present law, individual taxpayers may claim deductions for charitable contributions only if they itemize deductions.

The Act provides that all taxpayers may deduct charitable contributions, whether or not they itemize deductions. The deduction for nonitemizers will be phased in over a 5-year period, with a cap on the amount of contributions that qualify for deduction in the first 3 years, as follows:

Year	Percentage	Cap
1982	25	$100
1983	25	100
1984	25	300
1987	Provision expires

The contributions cap is not doubled for married taxpayers filing jointly. Thus, in 1982, for example, the maximum deduction for a nonitemizer who files a joint return, or who is single, will be $25. The maximum deduction for a married taxpayer filing separately in 1982 will be $12.50.

6. Gain on sale of residence

a. Rollover of gain time on sale of residence. Present law provides for the nonrecognition, or rollover, of gain on the sale of a taxpayer's principal residence if a new principal residence is purchased and used by the taxpayer within a period beginning 18 months before, and ending 18 months after the sale.

The Act extends the 18-month replacement period of present law to 2 years. This change is effective for sales and exchanges of principal residences after July 20, 1981, and for such sales and exchanges with respect to which the 18-month rollover period has not expired on July 20, 1981.

b. Exclusion of gain on sale of residence. Present law allows individuals who have attained the age of 55 to elect a one-time exclusion of up to $100,000 of gain on the sale of their principal residence. Generally, the individual must have owned and used the property as a principal residence for three years or more out of the five-year period preceding the sale.

The Act increases from $100,000 to $125,000 the amount of gain excludable from gross income on the sale or exchange of a principal residence by an individual who has attained the age of 55.

The provision is effective for sales and exchanges of a principal residence after July 20, 1981.

7. Foreign earned income

Present law allows a variety of deductions and exclusions for U.S. citizens and residents living abroad, including deductions for excess cost of living, housing, education expenses, and home leave. Also, an exclusion is provided for the value of food and lodging in a camp in a hardship area.

The Act replaces the existing provisions for income earned abroad with an exclusion for the first $95,000 of such income and an exclusion for excess housing costs. The maximum foreign earned income exclusion will be $75,000 in 1982 and will be phased up to $95,000 by 1986 in $5,000 per year increments. The combination of housing and earned income may not exceed earned income of the taxpayer for the year.

The provision is elective, and once an election is made it is binding. An exclusion for camps whether or not in hardship areas is provided.

The provisions are effective with respect to taxable years beginning in 1982.

B. CAPITAL COST RECOVERY PROVISIONS

1. General concept

Prior law was designed to allocate depreciation deductions over the period the asset is used in business so that deductions for the cost of an asset were matched with the income produced by the asset.

Under the Act, the prior law asset depreciation range (ADR) system is terminated for recovery property placed in service after Dec. 31, 1980 and replaced with the accelerated cost recovery system (ACRS). Under ACRS, the cost of an asset is recovered over a predetermined period generally shorter than the useful life of the asset or the period the asset is used to produce income.

2. Eligible property

Assets used in a trade or business or for the production of income are depreciable if they are subject to wear and tear, decay or decline from natural causes or obsolescence. Assets that do not decline in value on a predictable basis or that do not have a determinable useful life, such as land, goodwill, and stock, are not depreciable.

Under the Act, most tangible depreciable property (real and personal) is covered under the accelerated cost recovery system (ACRS). However, ACRS does not apply to (1) property not depreciated in terms of years (except certain railroad property), and (2) property amortized (e.g., leasehold improvements and certain rehabilitation expenditures.)

3. Useful lives and methods

a. Personal property useful lives and methods. Under prior law, a principal method used to determine useful lives for personal property was the asset depreciation range (ADR) system. For assets not eligible for ADR and for taxpayers who did not elect ADR, useful lives were determined according to the facts and circumstances pertaining to each asset or by agreement between the taxpayer and the IRS.

The Act provides that the cost of eligible personal property (and certain real property) is recovered over 3, 5, 10, or 15 years. The classification of property by recovery period is as follows:

3 years	Autos, light-duty trucks, R & D equipment, racehorses over 2 years old and other horses over 12 years old and personal property with an ADR midpoint life of 4 years or less.
5 years	Most other equipment except long-lived public utility property. Also includes single purpose agricultural structures and petroleum storage facilities, which are designated as section 1245 property under the Act.
10 years	Public utility property with an ADR midpoint life greater than 18 but not greater than 25 years; burners and boilers using coal as a primary fuel if used in a public utility powerplant and if replacing or converting oil- or gas-fired burners or boilers; railroad tank cars; mobile homes; and real property with an ADR midpoint life of 12.5 years or less (e.g. theme park structures).
15 years	Public utility property with an ADR midpoint life exceeding 25 years (except certain burners and boilers using coal as a primary fuel).

Under a flexibility provision (described below), taxpayers may elect to use the regular recovery period or one of two longer recovery periods as set forth below:

3-year property	3, 5 and 12 years
5-year property	5, 12 and 25 years
10-year property	10, 25 and 35 years
15-year property	15, 35 and 45 years

Under prior law, taxpayers could use the straight-line method, a declining balance method at a rate up to 200-percent of the straight-line rate, or the sum of the years-digits method with respect to new personal property. For used personal property, taxpayers could use either the straight-line method or a declining balance method at a rate up to 150-percent of the straight-line rate.

Under the Act, taxpayers have the option to use the straight-line method over the regular or optional longer recovery period or a prescribed accelerated method over the regular recovery period. The prescribed accelerated method for property placed in service in the following years is based on depreciation methods as set forth below, using a half-year convention and no salvage value limitation:

Year property placed in service	Prescribed method
1981-1984	150 percent declining balance, changing to straight-line
1985	175 percent declining balance, changing to SYD
After 1985	200 percent declining balance, changing to SYD.

b. Real property. Prior to the Act, IRS guideline lives ranged from 40 to 60 years for real property, but actual lives claimed under a facts and circumstances approach could be shorter. Nonresidential property could be depreciated using a 150-percent declining balance method (if new) or the straight-line method. New residential property could be depreciated using straight-line, the 200-percent declining balance method, or the sum of the years-digits method. Used residential could use up to the 125-percent declining balance method (if 20 years useful life remaining) or straight-line. Taxpayers could use different lives for each separate component of a building, such as plumbing, wiring, etc. (component depreciation) or use a single life for the building and all components (composite depreciation).

Under the Act, real property is assigned a 15-year recovery period, but taxpayers may elect a 35- or 45-year extended recovery period. Composite depreciation is required. For real property other than low-income housing, the property can be depreciated using the 175-percent declining balance method, changing to the straight-line method to maximize acceleration. Low-income housing can be depreciated under the 200-percent declining balance method changing to straight-line. As an option, taxpayers may elect to use the straight-line method over 15, 35, or 45 years.

4. Election to expense certain depreciable business assets

Under prior law, a deduction was provided for "bonus" first-year depreciation up to 20-percent of up to $10,000 of eligible property ($20,000 for individuals filing a joint return) (sec. 179).

The Act repeals the "bonus" depreciation provision (sec. 179) and replaces it with an election to expense the cost of new or used personal property used in a trade or business. The maximum annual amount a person can expense is $5,000 for 1982 and 1983, $7,500 for 1984 and 1985, and $10,000 for years after 1985. No investment credit is allowed for expensed property.

5. Recapture of depreciation

Under prior law, gain on the disposition of personal property was treated as ordinary income rather than capital gain to the extent of prior depreciation taken (sec. 1245). Gain on the disposition of real property was treated as ordinary income rather than capital gain only to the extent prior depreciation taken exceeds what would have been allowable if straight-line depreciation had been used (sec. 1250). In the case of installment sales of personal and real property, the recognition of any gain realized could be deferred (sec. 453).

Under the Act, the treatment of personal property is unchanged, except that the recognition of gain cannot be deferred by installment sales treatment to the extent a deduction was taken for the property under the special expensing election. The treatment of residential real property is unchanged. The treatment of nonresidential real property is unchanged if the straight-line depreciation method is used. However, for nonresidential real property depreciated under an accelerated method, gain is treated as ordinary income to the extent of all prior depreciation taken.

6. Flexibility

Under prior law, taxpayers had several options that permit a degree of flexibility in computing depreciation deductions and net operating losses. Taxpayers have an option to use a useful life 20 percent shorter or longer than ADR midpoint life. There was an option to use straight-line or accelerated methods, where allowed. In determining the date of additions to and retirements from a depreciation account, taxpayers had an option to use an averaging convention for personal property. In general, net operating losses, and operating losses of certain insurance companies, could be carried back 3 years and forward 7 years.

Under the Act, taxpayers have an option to use one of two recovery periods that are longer than the recovery period prescribed for each class of property. In addition, taxpayers have an option to use an accelerated or straight-line method over the regular recovery period. Under the Act, the carryover period for operating losses is extended to 15 years. Net operating losses of a financial institution are carried back 10 years and forward 5 years as under prior law. The carryover period for Cuban expropriation losses remains at 20 years.

7. Earnings and profits

Distributions by a corporation to its shareholders are taxable as dividends only to the extent the distribution is out of current or accumulated earnings and profits. Earnings and profits for U.S. corporations were computed, under prior law, using straight-line depreciation over the useful life of the property. The 20-percent ADR useful life variance could be used to determine the useful life for this purpose. Under the Act, earnings and profits for U.S. corporations are based on straight-line depreciation over extended recovery periods as set forth below:

Property	Extended recovery period
3-year property	5 years
5-year property	12 years
10-year property	25 years
15-year property	35 years

If, to compute the recovery deduction under sec. 168, a taxpayer uses a recovery period longer than the applicable extended recovery period described above, the taxpayer must use such longer period in lieu of the regular extended period to compute earnings and profits.

8. Depreciation of assets held outside the United States

Property used outside the United States for more than half the taxable year generally is considered a foreign asset. The investment tax credit generally is not allowed for such property (sec. 48(a)(2)). However, railroad rolling stock owned by a domestic railroad and used within and without the United States is not considered a foreign asset, even if it is used outside the United States for more than half the taxable year.

Under prior law, foreign assets were depreciated using useful lives based on facts and circumstances or the guideline lives under the ADR system, but the 20-percent useful life variance under ADR could not be used. Accelerated methods of depreciation generally could be used with respect to such property.

The Act provides that foreign personal property is depreciated using the 200-percent declining balance method, changing to the straight-line method over the ADR midpoint life in effect for the property on Jan. 1, 1981, or 12 years if no ADR midpoint life is in effect at such time. Taxpayers have the option to use the straight-line method over the regular recovery period (ADR midpoint life or 12 years, whichever is applicable) or an optional recovery period. Foreign real property can be depreciated over 35 years using the 150-percent declining balance method, changing to the straight-line method, or the straight-line method over 35 or 45 years.

The Act also provides that railroad rolling stock used within and without the United States is not treated as a foreign asset, whether it is owned by a domestic railroad or other U.S. person. However, this provision does not apply to rolling stock not owned by a domestic railroad if it is leased to a foreign person for periods aggregating more than 12 months out of any 24-month period.

9. Add-on minimum tax and maximum tax

A 15-percent minimum tax is imposed on a portion of a taxpayer's items of tax preference. Accelerated depreciation on leased personal property is an item of tax preference for taxpayers other than corporations (but including subchapter S corporations and personal holding companies). Under prior law, accelerated depreciation on real property is an item of tax preference for all taxpayers. Under prior law, the amount of the preference item was the excess of depreciation taken over what would have been allowable using the straight-line method over the property's useful life (ADR midpoint life for property depreciated under the ADR system).

Under the Act, accelerated depreciation is an item of tax preference for only individuals, subchapter S corporations, and personal holding companies.[1] The amount of the tax preference item for accelerated depreciation is the excess of the depreciation taken over the amount that would have been allowable using the straight-line method over prescribed periods as set forth below:

Property	Prescribed period
3-year property	5 years
5-year property	8 years
10-year property	15 years
15-year property	15 years
15-year personal property	22 years

10. Regular investment credit

a. Eligibility for the credit. The regular investment credit applies to tangible personal property and other tangible property used in connection with manufacturing, production and certain other activities not including distribution. Petroleum storage facilities were ineligible under prior law unless used in connection with production. Property used predominately outside the United States is not eligible. Although there is an exception from the foreign use rule permitting the credit for railroad rolling stock of a domestic railroad that was used within and without the United States, railroad rolling stock of other persons used within and without the United States was not eligible under prior law.

The Act adds to eligible property facilities used for storage of petroleum and its primary products, even if used in connection with distribution and not production.

The Act retains the prior law "within and without" foreign use exception for rolling stock of a domestic railroad and adds to that exception rolling stock of other U.S. persons. However, rolling stock owned by a U.S. person other than a domestic railroad and used within and without the United States is not eligible if it is leased for periods aggregating more than 12 months in any 24-month period to a foreign person.

b. Amount of credit. Under prior law, the amount of regular credit was determined as follows:

Estimated useful life (years)	Credit (%)
Less than 3	0
3-4	3⅓
5-6	6⅔
7 or more	10

Under the Act, the regular credit amount is as follows:

Recovery period (years)	Credit (%)
5, 10 and 15	10

c. Used property limitation. Under prior law, only $100,000 of used property was eligible for the investment credit.

The Act raises the limitation to $125,000 for 1981 through 1984 and to $150,000 in 1985.

d. Recapture of credit. Under prior law, the credit was recomputed on early disposition of property as if the actual useful life had been used to determine the amount of credit.

Under the Act, the credit is recomputed on early disposition by allowing a 2-percent credit for each full year the property is held. Thus, no recapture is required for eligible 5-year, 10-year, or 15-year property actually held for at least 5 years, or for eligible 3-year property held at least 3 years.

e. Carryover of credit. Under prior law, unused investment credit could be carried back 3 years and forward 7 years. The Act extends the carryover period to 15 years.

11. Normalization rules for public utility property

Under prior law, a public utility could use an accelerated depreciation method only if it also used a normalization method of accounting, unless the company used flow-through accounting for accelerated depreciation in 1969. A public utility that had to normalize accelerated depreciation could use the ADR system only if it normalized certain differences between the ADR useful life and the ratemaking useful life of eligible property. Similarly, a utility that had to normalize accelerated depreciation also had to normalize the investment tax credit. In addition, some utilities not required to normalize accelerated depreciation were required to normalize all or part of the investment credit.

Under the Act, except as provided in relevant transition rules, normalization of accelerated depreciation, useful lives, and the investment credit is mandatory for all public utilities with respect to property depreciated under ACRS. Under transition rules, taxpayers are considered to satisfy the new normalization requirements for depreciation or the investment credit under a rate order that complies with the present law requirements if (1) the rate order was put into effect before the date of enactment of the Act and (2) a superseding rate order determining cost of service is put into effect complying with the new applicable normalization requirement before Jan. 1, 1983.

12. Investment credit at-risk limitation

Under prior law, there was no at-risk limitation on the allowance of investment credits.

Under the Act, the allowance of investment credits is subject to an at-risk limitation. The limitation applies to business activities, the losses from which are subject to limitation under the at-risk rules of sec. 465, engaged in by individuals, subchapter S corporations, and certain closely held corporations. The investment credit is not allowed with respect to amounts invested in qualifying property to the extent the invested amounts are not at risk, within the meaning of sec. 465(b) (without regard to subsection (b)(5)).

[1] The elimination of the tax preference item for accelerated depreciation of real property for corporations other than subchapter S corporations and personal holding companies is a technical error and was not intended.

The Act contains an exception for certain qualified lenders and direct or guaranteed Federal, State or local government loans, if the taxpayer has a minimum 20-percent at-risk investment in the property. Qualified lenders include banks, savings and loan institutions, credit unions, insurance companies, pension trusts and unrelated third parties engaged in the business of loaning money. For this exception, the lender must be unrelated to the borrower, the promoter, and the seller. In addition, the borrower must be unrelated to the seller.

The Act also contains a safe harbor rule for certain loans related to certain energy property. This special safe harbor rule applies only to solar or wind energy property, recycling equipment, qualified hydroelectric generating property, biomass property, equipment for converting alternative substances into alcohol fuels, geothermal equipment, and to ocean thermal energy equipment. The special safe harbor rule also applies to energy property which comprises a system for using the same energy source for the sequential generation of electrical power, mechanical shaft power, or both, in combination with steam, heat, or other forms of useful energy.

Amounts borrowed with respect to these types of property would be considered, under certain circumstances, at risk, even though such amounts are not otherwise considered at risk under the Act. In order to qualify under the safe harbor, the taxpayer must have a minimum 25-percent at-risk investment in the property. In addition, any nonrecourse financing for the property (other than financing by a qualified lender that is considered at risk) must be a level payment loan. A level payment loan is a loan repaid in substantially equal installments which include both principal and interest. If the taxpayer does not make adequate repayments of loan principal, some of the credit allowed will be recaptured, and additional interest added to the increase in tax, determined as if the increase in tax were for the taxable year in which the property was placed in service.

13. Qualified progress expenditures

Under prior law, the investment credit was available for qualified progress expenditures made for property with a 2-year normal construction period and at least a 7-year useful life.

The Act repeals the 7-year useful life requirement. Thus, the amount of credit allowed with respect to progress expenditures will be determined in accordance with the recovery period the taxpayer expects the property to have when the property is placed in service.

14. Leasing

Under prior IRS guidelines, a transaction was characterized as a lease if: (1) the lessor's minimum at-risk investment in the property throughout the lease term was 20 percent of cost; (2) the lessor had a positive cash flow and a profit from the lease independent of tax benefits; (3) the lessee did not have a right to purchase the property at less than fair market value; (4) the lessee did not have an investment in the lease and does not lend any of the purchase costs to the owner, and is the user of the property at the end of the lease term by a person other than the lessee must be commercially feasible to the lessor.

The Act creates a safe harbor that guarantees that a transaction will be characterized as a lease for purposes of allowing investment credits and cost recovery allowances to the nominal lessor. To come within the safe harbor, both the lessor and the lessee must elect affirmatively to treat the lessor as the owner of the property. The lessor must be a corporation, a partnership of corporations, or a grantor trust, the grantor and beneficiaries of which are all corporations. At all times during the term of the lease and at the time that the property is in service, the lessor must have a minimum "at risk" investment of not less than 10 percent of the adjusted basis of the property. In addition, the term of the lease (including all extensions) cannot exceed the greater of (1) 90 percent of the useful life of the property under sec. 167 or (2) 150 percent of the present class life (ADR midpoint as of Jan. 1, 1981).

Only property that is new sec. 38 property (or certain mass commuting vehicles) may come within the safe harbor rules. The leased property must be leased within 3 months after its acquisition or, in the case of a sale-leaseback transaction, it must purchased by the lessor within 3 months of the lessee's acquisition for a purchase price that does not exceed the adjusted basis of the property in the hands of the lessee at the time of the lessor's purchase.

If a transaction meets the requirements above, the parties will be treated as lessor and lessee without regard to (1) whether the lessor or lessee must take into account tax benefits to derive a profit or cash flow from the transaction, (2) the fact that the lessee retains title and the burdens, benefits, and incidents of ownership, (3) whether a person other than the lessee may use the property at the end of the lease, (4) the fact the property may be purchased at the end of the lease at a fixed or determinable price that is more or less than its fair market value at that time, (5) the fact the lessee has provided financing or has guaranteed financing (other than for the lessor's minimum 10 percent investment), and (6) the fact an obligation of any person is subject to a contingency or offset agreement.

15. Effective dates and phase-in provisions

In general, the capital cost recovery provisions apply to property placed in service after Dec. 31, 1980. Although there is no phase-in period, the most accelerated method of depreciation for personal property is not available until 1986. In general, the rules for extension of the carryover period for operating losses apply for operating losses in taxable years ending after Dec. 31, 1975. A special rule applies for losses of a former REIT. The effective dates for extension of the carryover periods for various credits are as follows:

(1) Investment credit and WIN credits.—Unused credit years ending after Dec. 31, 1973.

(2) New employee credit.—Unused credit years ending after Dec. 31, 1976.

(3) Alcohol fuel creits.—Unused credit years ending after Sept. 30, 1980.

The at-risk rule for the investment credit applies to property placed in service on or after Feb. 19, 1981, except for property acquired by the taxpayer pursuant to a binding contract entered into on or before Feb. 18, 1981. A technical amendment to sec. 46(e) relating to investment credit for noncorporate lessors applies to leases entered into after June 25, 1981. The rules relating to railroad rolling stock apply for taxable years beginning after Dec. 31, 1980.

Special rules are provided to prevent the taxpayer from bringing its property used during 1980 (pre-1981 property) within the system by certain post-1980 transactions (i.e., "churning" transactions). Similar rules are provided to prevent the taxpayer from taking advantage of the increased recovery percentages available after 1984 for its property used before 1985 (pre-1985 property). Under these antichurning rules ACRS will not apply to personal property in use during 1980 unless the property is transferred after 1980 in a transaction in which the owner and user (if different) change. Also ACRS does not apply to personal property leased back to a person that owned or used the property during 1980 or to a person related to that person.

For the antichurning rules, a corporation is not a related person to the taxpayer if either (1) the person is a distributing corporation in a transaction described in sec. 334(b)(2)(B) and 80 percent of the stock is acquired by purchase after Dec. 31, 1980, by the taxpayer or (2) if the person is a distributing corporation in a complete or partial liquidation to which sec. 331 applies and 80 percent of the stock of that corporation is acquired by purchase by one or more taxpayers or by persons related to the taxpayer after Dec. 31, 1980.

C. REHABILITATION EXPENDITURES

1. Tax credit for rehabilitation expenditures

Under prior law, the 10-percent investment tax credit (and additional energy credit) was available for expenditures to rehabilitate a building that is at least 20 years old. The credit allowed did not reduce the basis of the property for purposes of depreciation. In lieu of the investment credit, the taxpayer could elect with respect to rehabilitation of a certified historic structure to amortize the expenditures over a 60-month period (sec. 191).

Under the Act, the 10-percent regular investment credit (and the additional energy credit) for rehabilitation expenditures and the 60-month amortization provision for cetified historic rehabilitation expenditures are replaced by a 3-tier investment credit. The credit is 15 percent for structures at least 30 years old, 20 percent for structures at least 40 years old, and 25 percent for certified historic structures. No credit is allowed for rehabilitation of a building (other than a certified historic structure) less than 30 years old.

The 15- and 20-percent credits are limited, as under prior law, to nonresidential buildings. However, the 25-percent credit for certified historic rehabilitation is available for both nonresidential and residential buildings. These credits are available only if the taxpayer elects to use the straight-line method of cost recovery with respect to rehabilitation expenditure expenditures. In addition, there must be a substantial rehabilitation of the building to qualify for the credit.

For rehabilitation credits other than the credit for certified historic rehabilitations, the basis of the property must be reduced by the amount of the credit allowed. If subsequently there is a recapture of the credit, the resulting increase in tax (or adjustment in carrybacks and carryovers) will increase the basis of the building immediately before the recapture event.

No credit is available for a certified historic structure if approval of the rehabilitation is not obtained from the Secretary of Interior. The Act treats a noncertified building in an historic district as a certified historic structure for this purpose unless the taxpayer obtains a certification from the Secretary of Interior that it is not of historic significance to the district. This changes the prior law rule under which a building in an historic district was not a certified historic structure unless the Secretary of the Interior took action to designate the property as being of historic significance to the district.

Under the Act, the prior law rule denying investment credit for property leased to tax-exempt organizations (sec. 48(a)(4)) or governmental units (sec. 48(a)(5)) does not apply to the portion of the basis of the building attributable to qualified rehabilitation expenditures. This corrects a clerical error in the enrollment of the Miscellaneous Revenue Act of 1980. Due to the error, this provision was omitted from the Act.

The Act applies to expenditures made after Dec. 31, 1981. Rehabilitation expenditures which are paid or incurred both prior to Jan. 1, 1982, and after that date, can qualify for the prior law credit of 10 percent for buildings over 20 years old, or for the credits under the Act after Dec. 31, 1981, for other qualifying buildings. Thus, some expenditures may be subject to two different credit rates as a rehabilitation is completed. For a certified historic structure the taxpayer may use either the prior law 10-percent credit or 60-month amortization for pre-1982 expenditures, but is allowed only the 25-percent credit for post-1981 expenditures. The rule permitting a rehabilitation credit for property leased to tax-exempts applies to uses after July 29, 1980.

2. Demolition of historic structures

Under prior law, buildings constructed or reconstructed at the site of a demolished or substantially altered certified historic structure had to be depreciated using the straight-line method over its useful life (sec. 167(n)). Demolition costs had to be capitalized as part of the basis of land and, thus, could not be deducted as a loss or depreciated if the structure was acquired to be demolished (sec. 280B).

The Act retains the loss deduction prohibition of present law, but repeals the straight-line depreciation requirement. The provision applies to expenditures made after Dec. 31, 1981.

D. INCENTIVES FOR RESEARCH AND EXPERIMENTATION

1. Tax credit for research and experimentation

Under present law, a taxpayer may elect to deduct currently the amount of research or experimental expenditures incurred in connection with the taxpayer's trade or business, or may elect to amortize certain research costs over a period of 60 months or more (sec. 174). These rules apply to the costs of research conducted by the taxpayer and, in general, to expenses paid for research conducted on behalf of the taxpayer by a research firm, university, etc. Treasury regulations define qualifying expenditures to mean "research and development costs in the experimental or laboratory sense," and provide illustrations of qualifying and nonqualifying expenditures.

The Act provides a 25-percent tax credit for certain research and experimental expenditures paid in carrying on a trade or business of the taxpayer, but only to the extent that current year expenditures exceed the average amount of research expenditures in a base period (generally, the preceding 3 taxable years). Subject to certain exclusions, the Act adopts the definition of research used for purposes of the special income tax deduction rules under sec. 174.

Under the Act, research expenditures qualifying for the new incremental credit consist of (1) "in-house" expenditures for research wages and supplies, plus certain lease or other charges for research use of computers, laboratory equipment, etc.; (2) 65 percent of amounts paid (e.g., to a research firm or university) for contract research; and (3) 65 percent of corporate grants for basic research to be performed by universities or certain scientific research organizations (or of grants to certain funds organized to make basic research grants to universities).

The credit under the Act applies to research expenditures made after June 30, 1981, and before 1986.

2. Charitable contributions of newly manufactured equipment to universities for research

Under present law, the amount of charitable deduction for a contribution of inventory or other ordinary-income property generally is limited to the amount of the taxpayer's basis in the property. An exception is provided for corporate contributions of certain property for use in the care of the needy, the ill, or infants; in such case, 50 percent of any appreciation plus the basis (but not more than twice the basis may be deducted.

The Act allows a deduction equal to the taxpayer's basis plus 50 percent of any appreciation (but not to exceed twice the basis) for qualified corporate contributions, by the manufacturer, of new scientific equipment or apparatus to a college or university for research or experimentation, including research training, in the United States in the physical or biological sciences. This provision applies to qualified charitable contributions made after the date of enactment of the Act.

3. Allocation of research expenditures to domestic income

Taxpayers must allocate and apportion research and experimentation expenditures between their domestic and foreign source income. To the extent that such expenditures are allocated to foreign source income, the taxpayers foreign tax credit limitation is reduced, which may reduce utilization of foreign tax credits. Other results also flow from the allocation.

The Act provides that for 2 years, taxpayers must allocate or apportion all research and experimental expenditures paid or incurred in activities conducted in the United States to U.S. source income. The Treasury is required to study the impact of its allocation regulations on domestic research and development and on the foreign tax credit.

The provision is effective for the first 2 taxable years of a taxpayer beginning after the date of enactment of the Act.

E. SMALL BUSINESS PROVISIONS

1. Accumulated earnings credit

Under present law, an accumulated earnings tax is imposed on earnings accumulated in a corporation to avoid income tax on the corporation's shareholders. In computing the tax base, a credit (of not less than $150,000) is allowed for earnings retained for the reasonable needs of the business.

The Act increases the minimum accumulated earnings credit to $250,000 except for service corporations in health, law, engineering, architecture, accounting, actuarial science, performing arts and consulting. The provision is effective for taxable years beginning after Dec. 31, 1981.

2. Subchapter S corporations

Under present law, a subchapter S corporation may not have more than 15 shareholders and, generally, trusts may not be shareholders.

The Act increases the number of permitted shareholders to 25 and allows "sec. 678" trusts to be shareholders. In addition, under the Act the sole income beneficiary of a trust which distributes all its income currently can elect to be treated as the owner, under sec. 678, of the stock of any subchapter S corporation held by the trust, and the trust will be eligible as a shareholder of that subchapter S corporation. The income beneficiary must be a U.S. citizen or resident, and must be beneficiary for his life unless the corpus of the trust is to be distributed to the income beneficiary upon termination of the trust. The election under this section may be made retroactive for up to 60 days.

The provision is effective for taxable years beginning after Dec. 31, 1981.

3. LIFO inventory and small business accounting

Taxpayers with inventories must use accrual accounting rather than cash accounting. LIFO is a method of accrual accounting that, during periods of inflation results in the highest cost goods being deducted from income, thus, producing low taxable income. Dollar-value LIFO is an advantageous method of computing LIFO inventories but because of its inherent complexity it is considered by some, especially small businessmen, as unworkable.

Under the Act, businesses with average gross receipts of less than $2 million for the 3 years (ending with the taxable year) may elect one inventory pool for purposes of dollar-value LIFO inventory accounting. Also, taxpayers electing LIFO will have 3 years (beginning with the year of the election to LIFO) to take back into income inventory writedowns taken in years prior to the year of the LIFO election. The Secretary shall also prescribe regulations providing for the simplification of LIFO inventory accounting through the use of published Government indexes.

Also under the Act, the Secretary of the Treasury is directed to conduct a full and complete study of methods of tax accounting for inventory (including but not limited to the LIFO method and the cash receipts and disbursements method) with a view toward the development of simplified methods. The Secretary is also directed to submit to the Committee on Ways and Means of the House of Representatives and to the Committee on Finance of the Senate a report on this study, together with such recommendations as he deems appropriate, by Dec. 31, 1982.

F. WINDFALL PROFIT TAX AND OTHER ENERGY PROVISIONS

1. Royalty owners credit and exemption

Qualified royalty owners were allowed a credit (or refund) of up to $1,000 against the windfall profit tax imposed on their royalty oil during calendar year 1980.

The Act makes the royalty owner credit available for calendar year 1981 and increases it from $1,000 to $2,500.

For 1982 and subsequent years, the Act provides a limited exemption from the windfall profit tax for specified amounts of royalty production. For 1982 through 1984, the exemption is 2 barrels a day; starting in 1985 the exemption is 3 barrels a day.

2. Producer exemption

Independent producers are eligible for reduced windfall profit tax rates on up to 1,000 barrels a day of tier 1 and tier 2 oil. The reduced rate applicable to an independent producer's tier 2 oil (including stripper oil) is 30 percent rather than 60 percent.

The Act exempts from the windfall profit tax, starting in 1983, stripper oil production of independent producers. The Act also provides that stripper oil cannot qualify for this exemption if it is produced from a stripper well property which has been transferred on or after July 23, 1981, by a producer other than an independent producer.

3. Reduced tax rate on newly discovered oil

Under present law, newly discovered oil is taxed at a 30-percent rate on the difference between its removal price and a severance tax adjustment plus a base price of $16.55 adjusted for grade, quality, location and inflation plus 2 percent.

The Act reduces the tax rate on newly discovered oil from 30 to 15 percent, over 5 years, in accordance with the following schedule:

Year	Rate (%)
1983	25.0
1984	22.5
1986 and thereafter	15.0

4. Exemption for qualified charities

Under present law, oil production attributable to certain qualifying charitable interests is exempt from the windfall profit tax. A charitable organization for the residential placement, care, or treatment of delinquent, dependent, orphaned, neglected, or handicapped children is not within this exemption.

The Act extends the existing windfall profit tax exemption for qualified charities to oil production attributable to economic interests held by charitable organizations, described in code sec. 170(c)(2), which are organized and operated primarily for the residential placement, care, or treatment of delinquent, dependent, orphaned, neglected, or handicapped children.

5. Production credit for certain gases

Present law allows a credit for the production of specified alternative fuels, including several types of natural gas which are eligible for incentive prices under the Natural Gas Policy Act of 1978 (NGPA). The credit phases out as the price of uncontrolled domestic oil rises from $23.50 to $29.50 a barrel, adjusted for inflation. Because of the phase out based on the price of oil, the credit generally was not available during 1980.

Sec. 107(d) of the NGPA provides that gas production is not eligible for an incentive price if any special tax provision applies and if the producer does not file a price election with the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission within 30 days of enactment of the special tax provision.

The Act provides that no production credit is available unless the taxpayer elects it on the appropriate tax return. This has the effect of allowing the producer to elect the incentive price under the NGPA after the 30-day period has elapsed.

The Act does not change any provision of the NGPA or deal with the FERC's administration of that Act. It is intended, however, that the amendment be administered by Treasury and, to the extent appropriate, by FERC so as to prevent any producer from obtaining the benefits of the production credit and the incentive price

G. CORPORATE RATE REDUCTIONS AND OTHER BUSINESS PROVISIONS

1. Corporate rate reduction

The corporate income tax has been imposed on taxable income under the following schedule:

Taxable income	Rate (%)
Less than $25,000	17
$25,000—$50,000	20
$50,000—$75,000	30
$75,000—$100,000	40
Over $100,000	46

The Act reduces the tax rate on taxable income below $50,000 in two steps.

Taxable income	Rate (%)
In 1982
Less than $25,000	16
$25,000—$50,000	19
1983 and later years
Less than $25,000	15
$25,000—$50,000	18

2. Incentive stock options

Under present law, the taxation of stock options granted by an employer to an employee as compensation is governed by sec. 83. The value of the option constituted ordinary income to the employee when granted only if the option itself has a readily ascertainable fair market value at that time. If the option does not have a readily ascertainable value when granted, it does not constitute ordinary income at that time. Instead, when the option is exercised, the difference between the value of the stock at exercise and the option price constitutes ordinary income to the employee. Ordinary income on grant or on exercise of a stock option is treated as personal service income and, hence, generally is taxed at a maximum rate of 50 percent.

An employer who grants a stock option generally is allowed a business expense deduction equal to the amount includible in the employee's income in its corresponding taxable year (sec. 83(h)).

The Act provides for "incentive stock options," under which there will be no tax consequences when an incentive stock option is granted or when the option is exercised, and the employee will be taxed at capital gains rates when and if he sells the stock received on exercise of the option. Similarly, no business expense deduction will be allowed to the employer with respect to an incentive stock option.

The term "incentive stock option" means an option granted to an individual, for any reason connected with his or her employment, by the employer corporation or by a parent or subsidiary corporation of the employer corporation, to purchase stock of any of such corporations.

To receive incentive stock option treatment, the Act provides that the employee must not dispose of the stock within 2 years after the option is granted, and must hold the stock itself for at least 1 year. If all requirements other than these holding period rules are met, the tax will be imposed on sale of the stock, but gain will be treated as ordinary income rather than capital gain, and the employer will be allowed a deduction at that time.

In addition, for the entire time from the date of granting the option until 3 months (12 months if disabled) before the date of exercise, the option, a parent or subsidiary of that corporation, or a successor corporation. This requirement and the holding period requirements are waived in the case of the death of the employee.

For an option to qualify as an "incentive stock option", the following conditions must be met:

1. The option must be granted under a plan specifying the number of shares of stock to be issued and the employees or class of employees to receive the options. This plan must be approved by the stockholders of the corporation within 12 months before or after the plan is adopted.

2. The option must be granted within 10 years of the date the plan is adopted or the date the plan is approved by the stockholders, whichever is earlier.

3. The option must by its terms be exercisable only within 10 years of the date it is granted.

4. The option price must equal or exceed the fair market value of the stock at the time the option is granted. This requirement will be deemed satisfied if there has been a good faith attempt to value the stock accurately, even if the option price is less than the stock value.

5. The option by its terms must be nontransferable, other than at death and must be exercisable during the employee's lifetime only by the employee.

6. The employee must not, immediately before the option is granted, own stock representing more than 10 percent of the voting power or value of all classes of stock of the employer corporation or its parent or subsidiary. However, the stock ownership limitation will be waived if the option price is at least 110 percent of the fair market value (at the time the option is granted) of the stock subject to the option and the option by its terms is not exercisable more than 5 years from the date it is granted.

7. The option by its terms is not to be exercisable while there is outstanding any incentive stock option which was granted to the employee at an earlier time. For this purpose, an option which has not been exercised in full is outstanding for the period which under its initial terms it could have been exercised. Thus, the cancellation of an earlier option will not enable a subsequent option to be exercised any sooner. Also, for this purpose an option is considered to retain its original date of grant even if the terms of the option or the plan are later amended to qualify the option as an incentive stock option.

8. In the case of options granted after 1980, the terms of the plan must limit the amount of aggregate fair market value of the stock (determined at the time of the grant of the option) for which any employee may be granted incentive stock options in any calendar year to not more than $100,000 plus the carryover amount. The carryover amount from any year after 1980 is one-half of the amount by which $100,000 exceeds the value (at time of grant) of the stock for which incentive stock options were granted in such prior year. Amounts may be carried over 3 years. Options granted in any year use up the $100,000 current year limitation first and then the carryover from the earliest year.

The Act provides that stock acquired on exercise of the option may be paid for with stock of the corporation granting the option. The difference between the option price and the fair market value of the stock at the exercise of the option will not be an item of tax preference.

Additional cash or other property may be transferred to the employee at the time the option is exercised, so long as such property is subject to inclusion in income under the provisions of sec. 83.

An option will not be disqualified because of the inclusion of any condition not inconsistent with the qualification requirements.

The Act will apply to options granted after Jan. 1, 1976, and exercised after Dec. 31, 1980, or outstanding on such later date.

However, in the case of options (including qualified options) granted before Jan. 1, 1981, an option is an incentive stock option only if the employer elects such treatment for an option. The aggregate value (determined at time of grant) of stock for which any employee may be granted incentive stock options prior to 1981 shall not exceed $50,000 per calendar year and $200,000 in the aggregate.

In the case of an option granted after Jan. 1, 1976, and outstanding on the date of enactment, the option terms (or the terms of the plan under which the option was granted) may be changed, or shareholder approval obtained, to conform to the incentive stock option rules, within 1 year of the date of enactment, without the change giving rise to a new option requiring the setting of an option price based on a later valuation date.

All such changes relate back to the time of granting the original option. For example, if the option price of a 10-year option granted in 1978 is increased during the 1 year after date of enactment to 100 percent (110 percent, if applicable) of the fair market value of the stock on the date the option was granted in 1978, the price requirement will be met. Likewise, if the term of an option held by a 10-percent shareholder is shortened to 5 years from the date the option was granted, the 10-percent stock ownership limitation will not apply.

3. Extension and modification of targeted jobs tax credit

Under present law, the targeted jobs tax credit, which applies to eligible trade or business wages paid before Jan. 1, 1982, is available on an elective basis for hiring individuals from one or more of seven target groups. In general, the credit is equal to 50 percent of the first $6,000 of first-year wages and 25 percent of the first $6,000 of second-year wages. Qualified first-year wages are limited to 30 percent of FUTA wages (the first $6,000 per calendar year) for all employees.

In the case of trade or business employment, taxpayers are allowed a WIN tax credit equal to 50 percent of qualified first-year wages and 25 percent of qualified second-year wages paid to WIN registrants and AFDC recipients. For employment other than in a trade or business, the credit is 35 percent of qualified first-year wages.

The Act extends and modifies the targeted jobs credit as follows:

Extension and eligible wages. The Act provides that the full credit is available for targeted employees who begin work before Jan. 1, 1983. The provision limiting qualified first-year wages to 30 percent of FUTA wages is repealed.

Targeted groups. AFDC recipients and WIN registrants are added as a targeted group, and the WIN credit is terminated. Eligible cooperative education students are limited to those who are economically disadvantaged, effective for wages paid after Dec. 31, 1981. The age limitation for Vietnam veterans (under age 35) is eliminated, the employees laid off from public service employment funded by CETA are made eligible for the credit.

Changes in certification requirements. Certifications issued or requested after the individual begins work are invalid, and certifications based on false information provided by the employee are revoked prospectively. These requirements generally apply to all individuals, regardless of the date they begin work for their employer. However, for an individual, other than a cooperative education student, who began work earlier than 45 days before the date of enactment, the certification has to have been requested or received before July 23, 1981. For an individual who begins work for the employer during the 90-day period beginning with the date 45 days before the date of enactment or for a cooperative education student who begins work before the end of this period, the certification must be requested or received before the last day of this 90-day period.

In addition, certifications that individuals are members of economically disadvantaged families are valid for a period of 45 days; certification and marketing are to be performed by State employment security agencies; and the credit is not allowed for rehires.

Hiring of relatives. The credit is denied for hiring relatives of the employer.

Authorization for administrative expenses. For fiscal year 1982, $30 million of appropriations is authorized for program administration, of which $5 million is to be used for a quality control program.

4. Motor carrier operating rights

Taxpayers are not allowed a loss deduction for the diminution in the value of a license or permit if the license or permit continues to have value as a right to carry on a business.

Under the Act, an ordinary deduction is allowed ratably over a 60-month period for the adjusted bases of motor carrier operating authorities held by the taxpayer on July 1, 1980. The Act provides a special stock acquisition rule for cases in which a corporation acquired the stock of another corporation that directly or indirectly held an operating authority. The provision applies to taxable years ending after June 30, 1980.

5. Bad debt deduction of commercial banks

Under present law, commercial banks compute their bad debt deductions under either the experience method or the percentage of outstanding loans method (sec. 585). Under the Tax Reform Act of 1969, the percentage of outstanding loans method is phased out over an 18-year period. Under the phase-out of the method, bad debt deductions generally are permitted to the extent necessary to increase the bad debt reserve to the following percentages of eligible outstanding loans: 1969 to 1975, 1.8 percent; 1976 to 1981, 1.2 percent; and 1982 to 1987, 0.6 percent. After 1987, the bad debt deduction of commercial banks is to be computed under the experience method.

The Act provides that the applicable percentage under the percentage of eligible loans method is to be 1.0 percent for taxable years beginning in 1982. For years after 1982, and before 1988, the applicable percentage will continue to 0.6 percent.

6. Reorganizations involving financially troubled thrift institutions

Under present law, a tax-free merger or other reorganization is permitted only if shareholders of the acquired corporation acquire stock in the acquiring corporation in the transaction. This restriction is a nonstatutory requirement generally described as the "continuity of interest" requirement. Net operating losses of the acquired corporation in a reorganization are restricted where the shareholders of the acquired corporation are not shareholders of the surviving corporation (sec. 382(b)). Distributions by a domestic building and loan association from its bad debt reserve are recaptured as ordinary income (sec. 593(a)). Contributions to a corporation are excluded from income (sec. 118) but, when made by a nonshareholder, require a reduction in the basis of the corporation's property (sec. 362(c)).

The Act amends the reorganization provisions to permit, in the case of a mutual savings bank, a domestic building and loan association, or a cooperative bank (i.e., a thrift institution to which sec. 593 applies), a transaction to qualify as a reorganization even though the shareholders of the transferor do not receive stock or securities in the acquiring corporation. The Act applies only to thrift institutions and only after certification by the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation, or, where neither has supervisory authority, an equivalent State authority that one of the grounds in sec. 1464(d)(6)(A), (i), (ii), or (iii) of 12 U.S.C. exists with respect to the transferor or, without action by the appropriate agency, will exist in the near future. The Act requires that substantially all the assets of the transferor be acquired by the transferee and that substantially all of the liabilities of the transferor, including deposits, before the transfer become liabilities of the transferee.

The Act provides that in applying sec. 382(b) to operating loss carryovers to the surviving corporation after a reorganization of a thrift institution which has been certified by the appropriate agency as described above, deposits in the acquired corporation which become deposits in the transferee are treated as stock of both corporations. Deposits in the transferee are also treated as stock for this purpose.

The Act provides that distributions out of excess bad debt reserves in redemption of the principal amount of an interest of the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation in the distributing domestic building and loan association received in exchange for financial assistance is not subject to recapture under sec. 593(e).

The Act excludes from income of a building and loan association all money or property contributed to the association by the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation under its financial assistance program without any reduction in the basis of property.

7. Tax treatment of mutual savings banks that convert to stock associations

Under present law, building and loan associations, cooperative banks, and nonstock mutual savings banks compute their bad debt deduction under a special set of rules (sec. 593). Under one of these rules, called the percent of taxable income method, these institutions are allowed a bad debt deduction equal to 40 percent of the institution's taxable income (computed without regard to the bad debt deduction). However, in order to qualify for the full amount of this deduction, at least 82 percent of its assets in the case of a building and loan association or cooperative bank, or 72 percent of its assets in the case of a mutual savings bank, must be invested in certain assets (hereafter called "qualified assets").

Present law also provides rules which recapture excess bad debt deductions of building and loan associations when there are dividends in excess of post-1951 earnings and profits or when there are liquidations or redemptions of stock (sec. 593(e)). Finally, present law permits mutual savings banks to compute the tax on their life insurance business as if the life insurance business was in a separate corporation subject to the special rules applicable to life insurance companies (sec. 594).

The Act makes two changes which are designed to facilitate the conversion of mutual savings banks into stock associations. First, the Act provides that a stock association which is subject to the same regulation as a mutual savings bank is to be treated as a mutual savings bank and, thus, is eligible to compute its bad debt deduction under sec. 593. However, consistent with the treatment of building and loan associations which may be organized as stock associations, such stock associations would compute their bad debt deduction under the percentage of eligible loan method under the same rules applicable to building and loan associations (i.e., 82 percent of their assets would have to be invested in qualified assets in order to receive the full 40-percent deduction). Similarly, the Act requires recapture of excess bad debt deductions by such stock associations in the same manner as building and loan associations (sec. 593(e)).

Second, the Act extends the special rule under which mutual savings banks can compute their tax on life insurance business as if it were a separate corporation to stock associations which are regulated as mutual savings banks. The Act also clarifies that amounts paid to depositors of such stock associations are deductible to the same extent as mutual savings banks (sec. 591).

H. SAVINGS INCENTIVES PROVISIONS

1. Partial dividend and interest exclusion

Under present law, individuals may exclude from income up to $200 ($400 on a joint return) of dividends and interest earned from domestic sources in 1981 and 1982. After 1982, only the $100 per taxpayer dividend exclusion of prior law will be available.

The Act repeals present law after 1981 and reinstates the $100 dividend exclusion of prior law for 1982 and subsequent years; however, the $100 per taxpayer limitation for the reinstated dividend exclusion is replaced by a limitation of $100 per separate return and $200 per joint return.

Effective in 1985, the Act provides for a 15-percent net interest exclusion on up to $3,000 of net interest ($6,000 on a joint return). For taxpayers who itemize deductions, interest is eligible for the percentage exclusion only to the extent it exceeds the taxpayer's qualified interest expense. Qualified interest expense is interest allowed other than interest paid on a home mortgage or in connection with a trade or business.

2. Tax-exempt savings certificates

Individuals may exclude $200 ($400 on a joint return) of interest and dividends from income in 1981 and 1982 under present law.

The Act provides tax exemption for an aggregate of $1,000 ($2,000 on a joint return) for interest received on a qualified savings certificate. Certificates are 1-year obligations and may be issued between Oct. 1, 1981, and Dec. 31, 1982, by qualified depository institutions (banks, thrift institutions, and credit unions). The certificates must pay interest at rates equal to 70 percent of the rate on the most recently issued 52 weeks Treasury bill. Seventy-five percent of the proceeds must be used for residential financing and agricultural loans, except for credit unions which are limited in the amount of savings certificates they may issue. Residential financing includes 2, 3, and 4 family residences and loans on stock of a cooperative housing corporation.

Interest (other than a qualified savings certificate) will not be eligible for exclusion after 1982, and the dividend exclusion will be limited to $100 ($200 on a joint return). (See, however, the description of the net interest exclusion under item 1, above.)

3. Individual retirement accounts

In the case of an individual who is not an active participant in an employer-sponsored plan, the annual contribution limit is raised from the lesser of $1,500 or 15 percent of compensation to the lesser of $2,000 or 100 percent of compensation. The limit for a spousal IRA is increased from $1,750 to $2,250, and the present-law requirement that contributions under a spousal IRA be equally divided between the spouses is deleted.

In the case of an employee who is an active participant is a plan, a deduction is allowed of up to $2,000 for contributions to an IRA or for voluntary contributions to the plan. The voluntary contributions and earnings thereon under a plan are subject to IRA-type rules, except that (1) distributions starting at age 70½ are not mandated and (2) rollovers may be made to an IRA with regard to the present law rule limiting rollovers to one per year.

Under the Act, benefits under a qualified plan (including deductible employee contributions and earnings thereon) are taxed only when paid to the employee or a beneficiary and are not taxed if merely made available. As under present law, if benefits are paid with respect to an employee to a creditor of the employee, a child of the employee, etc., the benefits paid would be treated as if paid to the employee.

Under present law, individuals generally may self-direct IRA investments or investments under an account in a qualified plan. Under the Act amounts invested in collectibles (antiques, art, gems, stamps, etc.) under an IRA or a self-directed account in a qualified plan are treated as distributions for income tax purposes.

Under the Act, the proceeds of a redeemed U.S. retirement bond which is distributed under a qualified bond purchase plan may be rolled over, tax-free, to an IRA. U.S. retirement bonds purchased for an employee may be redeemed only after the employee attains age 59½, dies or becomes disabled. Also, the Act clarifies the treatment of IRA retirement bonds acquired in a tax-free rollover.

In addition, the Act provides that a divorced spouse is allowed a deduction for contributions to a spousal IRA established by the individual's former spouse at least 5 years before the divorce if the former spouse contributed to the IRA under the spousal IRA rules for at least 3 of the 5 years preceding the divorce. If these requirements are met, the limit on the divorced spouse's IRA contributions for a year is not less than the lesser of (1) $1,125, or (2) the sum of the divorced spouse's compensation and alimony includible in gross income.

4. Self-employed retirement savings (Keogh plans)

The deduction limit for employer contributions to a defined contribution Keogh plan, to a defined contribution plan maintained by a subchapter S corporation, or to a simplified employee pension (SEP) is increased from $7,500 to $15,000. The 15-percent limit on contributions is not changed. To provide a similar increase in the level of benefits permitted under a defined benefit Keogh or subchapter S corporation plan, the compensation taken into account in determining permitted annual benefit accruals is increased from $50,000 to $100,000.

The Act also increases the amount of compensation which may be taken into account to determine contributions to a Keogh plan, to a subchapter S plan, or to a SEP. Under the Act, the includible compensation limit is increased from $100,000 to $200,000. However, if annual compensation in excess of $100,000 is taken into account, the rate of employer contributions for a plan participant who is common-law employee cannot be less than the equivalent of 7½ percent of that participant's compensation.

The Act also extends to all partners the present-law rule under which a loan from a Keogh plan to an owner-employee or his use of an interest in the plan as security for a loan is treated as a distribution.

In addition, the Act permits (1) the penalty-free correction of an excess contribution to a Keogh plan if the excess is withdrawn before the return filing due date and (2) early withdrawals from a terminated Keogh plan by an owner-employee without regard to the 5-year ban on Keogh plan contributions for the owner-employee.

5. Employee stock ownership plans (ESOP's)

Present law provides an investment tax credit for contributions to employee stock ownership plans (ESOP).

The Act terminates, after 1982, the present law investment-based tax credit for ESOP contributions and replaces it with a payroll-based tax credit. The payroll-based credit is allowed for wages paid in the calendar years 1983 through 1987. For calendar years 1983 and 1984, the credit is limited to 0.5 percent of compensation paid to employees under the plan, and to 0.75 percent of such compensation for 1985, 1986, and 1987.

For profit-sharing plans, the present law rule requiring a flow through of voting rights is deleted, effective Jan. 1, 1980. This requirement continues to apply to other defined contribution plans.

6. Dividend reinvestment plans

Under present law, stock dividends received as part of a pro rata distribution to all shareholders are taxable when the dividend is disposed of or sold. Stock distributions that are not on a pro rata basis are taxable at fair market value when the shares are initially received. Distributions are taxable at fair market value when received if the shareholder has the option to receive cash or stock.

The Act provides that shareholders in a domestic public utility corporation who choose to receive a dividend in the form of a common stock dividend, instead of cash or other property, may exclude up to $750 ($1,500 on a joint return) from income.

These shares will have a zero basis, and the full amount will be taxed as a capital gain if sold after a year. If sold within a year, the stock will be taxed as ordinary income. Only individual shareholders are eligible for dividend reinvestment.

The stock must be common stock newly issued for this purpose and valued between 95 and 105 percent of the stock's value immediately before the distribution date. Penalties will be applied to a corporation which purchases its stock for distribution under this plan.

I. ESTATE AND GIFT TAX PROVISIONS

1. Increase in unified credit and reduction in rates

Under present law, estate and gift taxes are unified so that a single progressive rate schedule is applied to cumulative gifts and bequests. Estate and gift tax rates range from 18 percent for the first $10,000 in taxable transfers to 70 percent on taxable transfers in excess of $5 million. Generally, the estate or gift tax liability is determined by first computing the gross estate or gift tax and then subtracting the unified credit to determine the amount of estate of gift tax. The amount of the present unified credit is $47,000. With a unified credit of $47,000, there is no estate or gift tax owed on transfers up to $175,625.

The Act increases the unified credit as follows:

Year of death	Amount of credit	Equivalent amount
1982	$62,800	$225,000
1983	79,300	275,000
1984	96,300	325,000
1985	121,800	400,000
1986	155,800	500,000
1987 and thereafter	192,800	600,000

The Act also reduces the maximum estate and gift tax rate by 5 percentage points a year over a 4-year period from 70 percent to 50 percent beginning in 1982.

2. Marital deduction

The Act eliminates the present quantitative limits on both the gift and estate tax martial deductions so that one spouse can transfer an unlimited amount of property tax-free to the other spouse. In addition, transfers of community property and transfers of certain terminable interests will qualify for the marital deduction. With regard to property held in joint tenancy by spouses with right of survivorship, only one-half of the property will be included in the estate of the first spouse to die. A transition rule will continue present law for marital deduction clauses in wills executed before 30 days after the date of enactment and not subsequently amended to specifically indicate an intent to adopt an unlimited marital deduction.

3. Changes to current use valuation provision

The Act expands the current use valuation provision in several ways:

(1) The present $500,000 limit by which the fair market value of farms, and other business real property can be reduced for estate tax purposes is increased over 3 years to $750,000, as follows:

1983 and thereafter	750,000

(2) The required trade or business use during predeath periods can be that of a member of the decedent's family as well as that of the decedent. This change is retroactive to Jan. 1, 1977.

(3) The material participation requirement for retired and disabled decedents is measured before the beginning of the disability or retirement.

(4) "Active management" by a surviving spouse of a decedent whose estate was eligible for current use valuation with respect to property is treated as material participation in determining whether the spouse's estate qualifies for the provision.

(5) Replacement property acquired in a like-kind exchange within 5 years before death is not automatically ineligible for current use valuation.

(6) Replacement property acquired following an involuntary conversion occurring within 5 years before death is not automatically ineligible for current use valuation.

(7) The election to specially value property can be made on a late return as long as the return is the first return filed. As under present law, the election is irrevocable.

(8) Net share rentals can be used in the formula valuation method for farm real property when no cash rentals are available.

(9) Property transferred to a discretionary trust is eligible for current use valuation, provided all trust beneficiaries are qualified heirs. The change is retroactive to Jan. 1, 1977.

(10) The definition of family member is expanded to include lineal descendants of the surviving spouse who are not descendants of the decedent.

(11) Family membership is redefined to include lineal descendants of an individual's parents rather than his grandparents.

(12) Property purchased from a decedent's estate by a qualified heir can be specially valued in certain circumstances. This change is retroactive to Jan. 1, 1977.

(13) The recapture period is reduced to 10 years (from 15 years).

(14) A 2-year grace period immediately after the decedent's death is provided during which failure by a qualified heir to commence the qualified use does not trigger recapture. The change is retroactive to Jan. 1, 1977.

(15) Active management by surviving spouses, minor and disabled heirs, and full—time students is treated as material participation.

(16) Like-kind exchanges of specially valued real property do not automatically result in imposition of a recapture tax. This change applies to exchanges occurring after Dec. 31, 1981.

(17) The requirement of an election to avoid imposition of the recapture tax in the case of an involuntary conversion of specially valued property is repealed. This change applies to conversions occurring after Dec. 31, 1981.

(18) If a recapture tax is imposed, an election can be made to stepup (to fair market value as of the decendent's death) the heir's income tax basis in specially valued property. The heir is required to pay interest on the amount of the recapture tax.

(19) Standing timber can be specially valued as an interest in the underlying real property. A recapture tax is imposed when such timber is severed or disposed of within 10 years of death.

4. Gifts made within 3 years of death

In general, the Act provides that sec. 2035(a) (which generally requires that gifts made by a decedent within 3 years of death be included in the decedent's gross estate at their value as of the date of death or alternate valuation date) does not apply to decedents dying after Dec. 31, 1981. However, present law continues to apply to certain types of property covered by sec. 2036, 2037, 2038, 2041, and 2042. In addition, all gifts made within 3 years of death are included for purposes of qualifying for current use valuation, deferred payment of estate tax, qualified redemptions of stock to pay estate tax, and estate tax liens.

5. Installment payment of estate tax attributable to closely held business

The Act combines the more liberal provisions of present law secs. 6166 and 6166A, relating to the deferred payment of estate taxes attributable to interests in closely held businesses, into one provision. The new provision permits deferred payment if interests in closely held businesses exceed 35 percent of the adjusted gross estate. Conforming changes are made to sec. 303, which permits redemption of stock in a closely held business to pay estate taxes, funeral expenses, and administration expenses. The Act also provides that any remaining unpaid estate tax balance will not be accelerated upon the death of the decedent's heir or a subsequent transferee, provided the interests in closely held businesses passes to a member of the heir's family.

6. Disclaimers

The Act provides that a timely transfer of property to the person who would have received it had an effective disclaimer been made under the applicable local law is considered an effective disclaimer for purposes of Federal estate and gift taxes where the other Federal requirements of qualified disclaimers are met.

7. Basis of property received within 1 year of death

The Act provides that the basis of appreciated property acquired by gift within 1 year of death is not adjusted to its fair market value at date of the decedent's death (as is done under present law) if it is returned to the donor (or donor's spouse).

8. Certain charitable contributions

The Act provides that a charitable estate and gift tax will be allowed for a transfer of a copyrightable work of art to a qualified charitable organization, whether or not the copyright itself is simultaneously transferred to the charitable organization.

9. Certain bequests, etc., to minor children

The provision of present law which allows deduction from a parent's gross estate of $5,000 for each year that an orphaned child is below age 21 is repealed.

10. Annual gift tax exclusion

Under the Act, the annual gift tax exclusion is increased from $3,000 to $10,000 per donee ($20,000 in the case of a married couple who elect to split gifts). In addition, an unlimited gift tax exclusion is provided for amounts paid directly to the service provider for the benefit of the donee for medical expenses and school tuition. A transition rule allows present law to continue to apply to existing trusts, which contain provisions referring to the maximum annual exclusion amount.

11. Annual filing of gift tax returns

Under the Act, gift tax returns are required to be filed only on an annual basis, rather than quarterly as is required in some cases under present law.

12. Generation-skipping transfer tax

The Tax Reform Act of 1976 imposed a tax on generation-skipping transfers. A transitional rule exempts from the tax generation-skipping trusts created by wills or revocable trusts in existence on June 11, 1976, if (1) such wills and trusts were not amended after that date to create or increase the amount of a generation-skipping transfer, and (2) the testator or trust grantor dies before Jan. 1, 1982. Under the Act, the Jan. 1, 1982, date contained in the present transitional rule is extended 1 additional year to Jan. 1, 1983.

13. Effective dates

Except as indicated otherwise in the discussion of specific provisions, the changes to the estate tax are effective for estates of decedents dying after Dec. 31, 1981, and the changes to the gift tax are effective for gifts made after Dec. 31, 1981.

J. TAX STRADDLES

1. Gains or losses on straddles

In Revenue Ruling 77-185, the Internal Revenue Service denied deductions for losses on certain partial dispositions of straddles on the grounds that the transactions were incomplete, tax-motivated and not reflective of true economic position. The theory of this ruling is currently in litigation.

The Act marks all commodity futures contracts to market at year end and treats them as if 60 percent of the capital gains and losses on them were long-term and 40 percent were short-term. Net losses under the mark-to-market rule may be carried back 3 years against mark to market gains. Taxpayers may elect to mark their futures to market for the entire 1981 year as if 1982 rates were in effect. Tax due on gains rolled forward from prior years into 1981 may be paid in five annual installments with interest. The first installment payment is due with the taxpayer's 1981 taxes.

In the case of straddles involving property other than futures which are mark-to-market, the Act allows straddle losses only to the extent such losses exceed the unrealized gains on offsetting positions. Disallowed losses are deferred. The wash sale and short sale principles of present law are extended to straddles by regulation. The loss deferral rule applies to actively-traded personal property but not to such property as real estate, stock and short-term stock options. Hedging transactions are excepted from this provision. The provision applies to property acquired and positions established by the taxpayer after June 23, 1981.

2. Interest and carrying charges

Present law allows a current deduction for interest and carrying charges for purchasing or carrying commodity investments. The Act requires that such charges be added to the basis of the commodity if it is part of a straddle. Hedging transactions are excepted from the capitalization rule.

This rule applies to property acquired and positions established by the taxpayer after June 23, 1981.

3. Hedging exception

The Act excepts hedging transactions from the mark-to-market, loss deferral, and capitalization rule. Syndicates are not entitled to the hedging exemption.

4. Characterization of Treasury bills

Under present law, gain and loss on certain governmental obligations (including Treasury bills) issued at discount and payable at a fixed maturity date less than 1 year from issue date are treated as ordinary income and loss. The Act treats such obligations as capital assets and the discount on these obligations as ordinary income.

5. Dealer identification of securities held for investment

Present law required dealers to identify securities held as investments within 30 days of the date of acquisition. The Act requires identification of securities by the close of business on the date of acquisition. Securities acquired after the date of enactment and before Jan. 1, 1982, must be identified by the close of business on the first day after the date of acquisition. Floor specialists are allowed 7 business days to designate stock for which they are registered specialists.

6. Sale or exchange of capital assets

Under present law, for gain or loss to be capital gain or loss, it must result from the sale or exchange of a capital asset. The Act provides that taxable dispositions of capital assets which are commodity-related property are treated as sales or exchanges. This change applies to property acquired after June 23, 1981.

K. ADMINSTRATIVE PROVISIONS

1. Interest on deficiencies and overpayments

Under present law, the interest rate applicable to deficiencies and overpayments is set by Treasury regulations at 90 percent of the adjusted prime rate for September, and is effective on February 1 of the immediately succeeding year. The interest rate, however, cannot be changed more frequently than every 23 months.

The Act provides that the interest rate is to be set annually at the prime rate. Starting in 1983, changes in the interest rate are to be effective on January 1, rather than on February 1, of the year immediately succeeding that in which the rate is established.

2. Penalties for false withholding allowance certificate

Under present law, a civil penalty of $50 may apply for claiming withholding allowances based on false information. The criminal penalty for willfully failing to supply information, or for willfully supplying false or fraudulent information, in connection with wage withholding is a fine of up to $500 and/or up to one year imprisonment.

The Act increases to $500 the civil penalty for filing false information with respect to wage withholding. The penalty, however, may be waived by the Secretary.

The Act also increases the criminal penalty for willfully failing to supply information, or for willfully supplying falsified information, in connection with wage withholding to $1,000.

These provisions are effective for acts and failures to act after Dec. 31, 1981.

3. Penalty for failure to file information returns

Present law requires taxpayers to file a variety of information returns with the Secretary. Generally, such returns relate to payments to, and transactions with, other persons. The penalty for failure to file most information returns is $1 per return, subject to a maximum of $1,000 for any calendar year. Present law generally does not require a taxpayer who must file an information return to furnish a copy to the person to whom the payment relates. However, such a requirement is imposed as to some information returns.

The provision generally requires that information returns be furnished to the person to whom the payments on the return relate.

The Act also increases the penalty for failure to file most information returns with the Secretary.

The increased penalty is $10 for each return, subject to a maximum penalty of $25,000 for any calendar year. As under present law, the penalty does not apply if the failure is due to reasonable cause and not to willful neglect.

The provision is effective as to returns and statements required to be furnished after Dec. 31, 1981.

4. Penalty for overstated tax deposits

Present law requires periodic deposits of various taxes prior to the close of the taxable year. Taxpayers who fail to comply with these depository requirements may be subject to a penalty of 5 percent of any underdeposit amount not deposited on or before the prescribed date, unless it is shown that the failure is due to reasonable cause and not due to willful neglect. In addition, criminal penalties may apply with respect to taxpayers who make a false return claiming to have made deposits of tax or who fail to collect, account for, or pay over collected taxes.

The Act contains a specific penalty applicable to persons who make an overstated deposit claim. The penalty is 25 percent of the overstated deposit claim, and applies in addition to any other applicable penalty. However, the overstated deposit claim penalty does not apply if the overstated deposit claim is due to reasonable cause and not due to willful neglect.

5. Penalty for valuation overstatement

Present law imposes an addition to tax, or penalty, with respect to certain tax underpayments due to negligence or civil fraud. The penalty for negligence is 5 percent of any under payment that is due to negligent or intentional disregard for rules and regulations. The civil fraud penalty is 50 percent of any underpayment.

The Act provides a graduated addition to tax applicable to certain income tax "valuation overstatements." The addition to tax applies only to the extent of any income tax underpayment which is attributable to such an overstatement, and only if the taxpayer is an individual, a closely held corporation, or a personal service corporation.

If there is a valuation overstatement, the following percentages are used to determine the applicable addition to tax:

If the valuation claimed is the following percent of the correct valuation—	The applicable percentage is—
150 percent or more but not more than 200 percent	10
More than 200 percent but not more than 250 percent	20
More than 250 percent	30

The penalty is effective for returns filed after Dec. 31, 1981.

6. Addition to negligence penalty

Present law imposes an addition to tax, or penalty, with respect to certain tax underpayments due to negligence or civil fraud. The penalty for negligence is 5 percent of any underpayment that is due to negligent or intentional disregard for rules and regulations. The civil penalty is 50 percent of any underpayment.

The Act imposes a nondeductible addition to tax equal to 50 percent of the interest attributable to that portion of an underpayment which is attributable to negligent or intentional disregard for rules or regulations.

7. Confidentiality of certain IRS information

Under the present law provisions that restrict the disclosure of tax returns and return information, it is unclear whether the IRS legally can refuse to disclose information that is used to develop standards for auditing tax returns. The Act provides that the IRS can refuse to disclose such information if the Secretary determines that disclosure will seriously impair assessments, collection, or enforcement under the internal revenue laws. The Act applies to disclosures after July 19, 1981.

8. Tax Court filing fee

Under present law, the Tax Court is authorized to impose a fee of up to $10 for the filing of any petition. The comparable filing fee for the U.S. district courts is $60.

The Act authorizes the Tax Court to impose a filing fee of up to $60 for petitions filed after Dec. 31, 1981.

9. Cash management: corporate estimated tax payments

Under present law, corporations whose taxable income exceed $1 million in any of the 3 preceding taxable years must pay estimated tax of at least 60 percent of current year's tax liability regardless of their prior year's tax liability.

The Act increases the amount of estimated tax that a large corporation must pay currently, without regard to prior year's tax liability, from 60 percent to 80 percent. This increase is phased in over a 3 year period. In 1982, large corporations will have to be at least 65 percent current with estimated tax payments. This will increase to 75 percent in 1983, and to 80 percent for 1984 and subsequent years. The provision is effective for taxable years beginning after Dec. 31, 1981.

10. Declaration and payment of estimated taxes by individuals

In general, present law provides that individuals, whose tax liability is less than $100 over amounts withheld during the year, are not required to file a declaration of estimated taxes.

The Act increases the tax liability threshold for payment of estimated taxes from $100 to $500 over a 4-year period, as follows:

Taxable year beginning in——	Threshold amount
1982	$200
1983	300
1985 and thereafter	500

Individuals whose tax liability, in excess of withholding, does not exceed the threshold amount would not be required to declare or pay estimated tax nor would they be penalized for underpayment of estimated tax.

The increase in the tax liability threshold begins in taxable years beginning after Dec. 31, 1981.

11. Railroad retirement taxes

Present law imposes an industry pension (tier-II) tax on railroad employers of 9.5 percent of the taxable compensation of their employees. Payments by railroad employers of employee railroad taxes are excluded from compensation for purposes of the railroad retirement tax. The law is unsettled as to whether, or in what circumstances, the Railroad Retirement Tax Act applies to compensation when paid or when earned.

The Act increases the employer tier-II tax to 11.75 percent and imposes a new 2-percent tax on the income of railroad employees. In addition, the Act amends the definition of compensation to include employer-paid railroad employee payroll taxes. Furthermore, the Act provides special rules defining the term "compensation" for the purposes of the Railroad Retirement Tax Act. The amendments, effective for taxable years beginning after Dec. 31, 1981, established that compensation paid in one calendar month but which would be payable in a prior or subsequent taxable month but for the fact that the prescribed payment date falls on a weekend or legal holiday shall be deemed to have been paid in the prior or subsequent month. The Act also provides that employee compensation made through the employer's payroll shall be presumed, absent contrary evidence, to be compensation in the period with respect to which the payment is made.

Finally, the Act provides for limited advance transfers to the Railroad Retirement Account of amounts anticipated to be transferred for the fiscal year to the account under the financial interchange with the social security trust funds.

L. MISCELLANEOUS PROVISIONS

1. State legislators business travel expenses

For taxable years before 1981, State legislators were allowed an election to treat their residences within the district represented as their tax home for purposes of computing business deductions for expenses while away from home. If such an election is made, the allowable deduction is equal to the sum of the legislator's legislative days multiplied by the Federal per diem for the State capital.

The Act extends, and modifies, the State legislator provision for all taxable years beginning on or after Jan. 1, 1976. Under the Act, an electing State legislator is deemed to have expended for business purposes an amount equal to the individual's legislative days multiplied by the greater of the Federal per diem or the State per diem (but not over 110 percent of the Federal per diem). This amount is deductible without regard to the away-from-home rule. The State legislator rule does not apply to legislators living within 50 miles of the capitol building.

2. Fringe benefit regulations

Prior to June 1, 1981, the Treasury was prohibited from issuing final regulations, under code sec. 61, relating to the income tax treatment of fringe benefits. The Act extends this prohibition until Dec. 31, 1983.

3. Qualified group legal services plans

Employer contributions to, and benefits provided under, a qualified group legal services plan are excluded from an employee's income. This income exclusion was scheduled to expire on Dec. 31, 1981.

Under the Act, the income exclusion for qualified group legal services plans is extended through Dec. 31, 1984.

4. Campaign funds

Under present law, candidates for election to Congress must designate one "principal campaign committee" to receive contributions and make expenditures on the candidate's behalf (2USC 432(e)). A campaign committee may be designated as a "principal campaign committee" by only one candidate, and such a designated committee may not support any other candidate. A statement of designation must be filed with the Federal Election Commission (FEC) and, as appropriate, with the Clerk of the House or the Secretary of the Senate. A congressional candidate's principal campaign committee must coordinate the submission of FEC reports of affiliated campaign committees.

Under code sec. 527, a candidate's campaign organization generally is exempt from taxation. However, "political organization taxable income," e.g., interest on account balances, etc., is subject to the highest rate, rather than the graduated rates, of the corporate income tax.

The Act, for taxable years beginning after Dec. 31, 1981, applies the generally applicable corporate income tax rates to political organization taxable income of a congressional candidate's "principal campaign committee," as defined under present law (2 USC 432(e)). Under regulations prescribed by the Secretary, candidates have to furnish the Secretary with the principal campaign committee's designation. No change is made to the present law rules applicable to other campaign or political organizations.

5. Tax-exempt bonds for purchase of mass transit equipment

A State or local government may issue tax-exempt industrial development bonds to provide certain exempt facilities, which include mass commuting facilities. These facilities do not include the equipment used for commuting in a mass transit system.

Under the Act, a State or local government may issue tax-exempt obligations, if the proceeds are used to provide qualified mass commuting vehicles that are leased to a mass transit system which is wholly owned by one or more governmental units. A qualified mass commuting vehicle is defined to mean any bus, subway car, rail car, or similar equipment used in a mass transit system for mass commuting purposes. Tax-exempt obligations may be issued for this purpose after the date of enactment and before Jan. 1, 1985.

6. Tax-exempt bonds for volunteer fire departments

In general, obligations issued by States or their political subdivisions are exempt from Federal income tax. Volunteer fire departments are not considered to be political subdivisions and, thus, cannot issue tax-exempt bonds on their own behalf.

The Act permits volunteer fire departments to issue tax-exempt obligations on their own behalf if certain requirements are met. A volunteer fire department, for this purpose, is an organization (1) that is organized and operated to provide firefighting or emergency medical services in an area that is not provided with any other firefighting services, and (2) that is required, by written agreement, to furnish such services. An obligation issued by a qualified volunteer fire department is tax-exempt if the obligation is issued as part of an issue substantially all of the proceeds of which are to be used for acquiring, constructing, reconstructing, or improving a firehouse or firetruck used or to be used by the fire department.

The provision generally applies to obligations issued after Dec. 31, 1980. However, the provision has retroactive effect with respect to certain obligations held by the First Bank and Trust Co. of Indianapolis, Ind., which were issued after Dec. 31, 1969, and before Jan. 1, 1981.

7. Payout requirement of private foundations

Under present law, private foundations (other than operating foundations) are required to distribute annually the greater of their minimum investment return or their adjusted net income, less certain taxes (sec. 4942). The minimum investment return basically is 5 percent of the foundation's net investment assets. Under the definition of an operating foundation, the foundation is required (among other requirements) to spend for charitable purposes substantially all of its adjusted net income (sec. 4942(j)).

The Act reduces the required payout for private foundations so that they must distribute only their minimum investment return. The Act, also provides a comparable amendment to the definition of an operating foundation. The Act is effective for taxable years beginning after Dec. 31, 1981.

8. Charitable contributions by corporations

Under present law, a corporation's deduction for charitable contributions may not exceed 5 percent of its taxable income.

The Act increases the limitation on a corporation's charitable contributions deduction to 10 percent of taxable income, effective for taxable years beginning after Dec. 31, 1981.

9. Unemployment tax status for certain fishing boat services

Under present law, certain crew members of fishing boats are treated as self-employed individuals rather than as employees for purposes of the Federal Insurance Contributions Act (FICA) and income tax withholding. However, services which are not subject to FICA taxes are not exempt for purposes of the Federal Unemployment Tax Act (FUTA) if the services are related to catching halibut or salmon for commercial purposes or if the services are performed on a vessel of more than 10 net tons.

The Act provides that, during 1981, wages paid to fishing boat crew members who are self-employed for purposes of FICA and income tax withholding will not be subject to FUTA taxes.

10. Two-year extension of telephone excise tax at 1 percent

Under present law, the excise tax imposed on communication services (local telephone, toll telephone, and teletypewriter services) for 1981 is 2 percent of amounts paid for services. The tax was scheduled to be 1 percent for 1982 and to expire as of Jan. 1, 1983.

Under the Act, the telephone excise tax will be extended at a 1-percent rate for 2 additional years, or for 1983 and 1984, and will expire as of Jan. 1, 1985.

11. Modification of foreign investment company provisions

Under present law, gain on the sale or exchange of stock in a foreign investment company is taxed as ordinary income to the extent attributable to earnings and profits derived after 1962. Once a foreign corporation becomes a foreign investment company, the ordinary income treatment applies even to earnings and profits derived before the foreign corporation became a foreign investment company.

Under the Act, gain on the disposition of stock in a foreign investment company attributable to earnings and profits derived before the foreign corporation became a foreign investment company will not be subject to tax under sec. 1246 of the code. Gain not covered by sec. 1246 is covered by sec. 1248 where that section is otherwise applicable, and the provisions only apply to companies that become foreign investment companies because they meet the requirements of sec. 1246(b)(2) of the code.

The provision is effective for sales or exchanges after the date of enactment of the Act in taxable years ending after that date.

12. Foreign investment in U.S. real property

Under present law, foreign persons selling U.S. real estate after June 18, 1980, are subject to U.S. taxation on that sale. Foreign persons selling stock in a U.S. corporation having 50 percent or more of its gross asset value comprised of U.S. real property interests are subject to taxation. Finally, the distributions (liquidating or nonliquidating) of U.S. real property interests by a foreign corporation generally are subject to tax. The taxation of dispositions of U.S. real property interests apply to transactions covered by a treaty, but, in general, not until Jan. 1, 1985, if such taxation would be contrary to the applicable treaty.

The Act makes certain technical changes in the foreign investment in U.S. real property provisions generally clarifying present law.

Virgin Islands corporations. A U.S. real property interest includes an interest in real property located in the United States or the Virgin Islands. Double taxation by both the United States and the Virgin Islands is prevented by providing that a person subject to tax because of sec. 897 pays that tax and files the necessary returns only with the jurisdiction (the United States or the Virgin Islands) where the underlying property is located. Disposition of an interest in real property located in the Virgin Islands is foreign source income to the U.S. taxpayers.

Partnership assets. For purposes of determining whether a corporation is a U.S. real property holding corporation, a corporation partner takes into account its proportionate share of all assets (not only U.S. real property interests) of the partnership. The same rules apply to trusts and estates in which a corporation has an interest.

Taxation in carryover basis cases. The Act makes clear the Treasury's authority to provide for nonrecognition of gain by a foreign corporation on a distribution where a carryover basis transaction is entered into for purposes of avoiding Federal income tax on the transaction. Taxation is specifically provided for if, at the time of receipt of the property, the distributee would not be subject to tax on a later disposition of the property by the recipient, or if the basis of the property in the hands of the distributee is greater than the basis of the property before the distribution increased by any gain recognized by the distributing corporation.

Nondiscrimination. The Act makes clear that under present law any foreign corporation may make an election to be treated as a domestic corporation for purposes of sec. 897 of the code and the related reporting requirements if the corporation owns a U.S. real property interest and under any treaty obligation of the United States the foreign corporation is entitled to nondiscriminatory treatment with respect to that interest. It is made clear that the election provided by this provision is the exclusive remedy for any person claiming discriminatory treatment because of the foreign investment in real property taxation provisions or the reporting requirements or both of them.

Indirect holdings. For purposes of determining whether a foreign corporation has substantial U.S. real property investors, a foreign corporation must look through to the assets of any U.S. corporation in which the foreign corporation has an interest.

Contributions to capital. The Act specifically makes clear that gain is recognized by a nonresident alien individual or a foreign corporation on the transfer of a U.S. real property interest to a foreign corporation, if the transfer is made as paid in the surplus or as a contribution to capital. Taxation applies to the extent the fair market value of the property transferred exceeds the adjusted basis of the property plus any gain recognized by the transferor.

Liquidation of foreign corporations. Foreign corporations that were acquired during the period that began after Dec. 31, 1979, and before Nov. 26, 1980, may elect to be treated as a U.S. corporation for purposes of liquidating under sec. 334(b)(2). For all other purposes, the foreign corporation will be treated as a foreign corporation.

The Act relieves the double tax burden that applies to a U.S. person that purchases the stock of a foreign corporation which holds U.S. real property by giving those shareholders who acquire their interest between Dec. 31, 1979 and Nov. 26, 1980, to the effective date of the Foreign Investment in Real Property Tax Act, a credit against any tax imposed on them on the surrender of their stock in the liquidating foreign corporation. The credit is equal to the tax imposed on the liquidating foreign corporation on the sale of the U.S. real property. The rule applies only if the U.S. persons continuously held the stock since June 18, 1980, the effective date of the foreign investment in U.S. real property legislation.

Application of treaties. It is made clear that in order for a new treaty to begin the 2-year period provided for in current law during which an old treaty will remain applicable, it must have been signed on or after Jan. 1, 1981, and before Jan. 1, 1985. The Act also makes clear that the old treaty with that country will take precedence over the legislation for 2 years after the new treaty is signed, even if that 2-year period ends after Dec. 31, 1984.

13. Amortization of construction period interest and taxes

Under prior law, taxpayers other than most corporations, in general, were required to capitalize and amortize construction period interest and taxes (sec. 189). This rule is not applicable to low-income housing until after Dec. 31, 1981.

The Act repeals the rules relating to capitalization of construction period interest and taxes for low-income housing.

14. Amortization of low-income housing rehabilitation expenditure

Under prior law, the taxpayer could elect to amortize qualified low-income housing rehabilitation expenditures over a 60-month period. The amount of expenditures was limited to $20,000 per dwelling unit (sec. 167(k)).

The Act increases the amount of expenditures eligible for amortization under sec. 189 to $40,000 per unit if the rehabilitation is conducted pursuant to a program under which tenants who demonstrate home ownership responsibilities may purchase their units at a price that limits the profit to the seller. The program must be certified by the Secretary of Housing and Urban Development or by a State or local governmental unit and the tenants must occupy the units as their principal residence. The program must provide that the sum of the taxable income and the amount realized on sale must not exceed the excess of (1) the taxpayer's basis in the property (without adjustment for deductions under sec. 167) over (2) the net tax benefits from the sec. 167 deduction less tax on the taxable income from leasing.

The provision applies to amounts paid or incurred after Dec. 31, 1980.

15. Maximum rate of imputed interest for sales of land between related persons Present law requires that a minimum portion of payments under an installment sales contract be treated as interest. The current rate used for this purpose is 10 percent in the case of contracts that do not provide for at least 9 percent interest.

Under the Act, the maximum rate of imputed interest on qualified sales of land is 7 percent. An installment sale of land qualifies for this lower rate if the installment sale takes place between members of the same family (within the meaning of sec. 267(c)(4) and if the sale price of property sold or exchanged between the same family members during the calendar year does not exceed $500,000. If the $500,000 limit is exceeded, the lower rate is available only as to the first sales or exchanges up to the limit.

16. Deductibility of gifts and awards

Present law generally disallows deductions for business gifts to the extent that the cost of all gifts to the same individual during the taxable year exceeds $25. This general rule does not apply, however, to items costing $100 or less which are awarded to an employee by reason of length of service or for safety achievement.

The Act increases the ceiling on the deductibility of employee awards, and expands the purposes for which they may be given. The Act allows employee awards for length of service, productivity, or safety achievement, and increases the ceiling from $100 to $400 per item. The Act also allows a deduction for such awards to the extent that the item is awarded as part of a qualifying, permanent, written plan or program that meets specified rules. The provision is effective for taxable years ending after the date of enactment.

17. Restricted property

Under present law, property transferred to an employee as compensation for services is taxable at the time the property is not subject to a substantial risk of forfeiture or is transferable. The Tax Court has ruled that the provisions of sec. 16(b) of the Securities and Exchange Act of 1934 do not restrict transferability for this purpose.

Under the Act, the provisions of sec. 16(b) are taken into account to postpone taxation until the provisions no longer may apply. A similar rule applies to certain restrictions under the SEC accounting rules. The Act is effective for taxable years ending after Dec. 31, 1981.

18. Deduction for certain adoption expenses

Under present law, expenses that are paid or incurred in connection with the adoption of a child are nondeductible, personal expenses.

The Act permits itemizers to deduct up to $1,500 of expenses paid or incurred in connection with the adoption of certain children (generally, children with respect to whom adoption assistance payments are made under the Social Security Act). The provision is effective for taxable years beginning after Dec. 31, 1980.

Grand Total All Provisions	−1,565	−37,656	−92,732	−149,963	−199,311	−267,627

[1] These figures include the increase in outlays attributed to the earned income credit which results from reduction in tax rates. These outlays are: $4 million in fiscal year 1982, $31 million in 1983, $44 million in 1984, $41 million in 1985, and $38 million in 1986.
[2] Loss of less than $5 million.
[3] Negligible.
[4] Loss of less than $10 million.
[5] This estimate is based on limited information about reorganizations that were planned even without this provision. If such reorganizations would have increased markedly without this provision, the revenue loss could be substantial.
[6] Includes a portion of the $36 million in tax liabilities for calendar year 1980.
[7] These estimates were made using the rate schedule proposed by the bill. This approach results in a lower revenue loss than one that would have been obtained if the present law rates had been used.
[8] Gain of less than $5 million.
[9] Revenue effects do not reflect transactions entered into after Dec. 31, 1981. Total revenue effects of subsequent years might be affected by judicial decisions interpreting present law.
[10] Loss of less than $1 million.

H.R. 4331 (Mr. Bolling); Public Law 97-123; app. Dec. 29, 1981.

H.R. 4331 was referred to the Committee on Ways and Means upon introduction on July 30, 1981. This bill was considered by H.Res. 203, which also waived points of order against the conference report on H.R. 3982, the omnibus budget reconciliation bill (Public Law 97-35).

As passed by the House, H.R. 4331 repealed that section of the omnibus budget reconciliation bill which eliminated the minimum social security benefit. This bill had the effect of restoring the minimum social security benefit for all beneficiaries. As amended and passed by the Senate on Oct. 15, 1981, H.R. 4331 would restore the minimum benefit for certain persons who were eligible to receive the benefit before November 1981. In addition, the Senate incorporated a number of unrelated amendments including provisions to enact a lower family maximum on payments made to families of retired workers and survivors of deceased workers, levy FICA (social security) taxes on certain forms of sick pay, reallocate the percentages of the FICA tax which are earmarked for each of the three trust funds, allow borrowing between the OASI and the DI trust funds until January 1991, and several other miscellaneous amendments.

The conference report on H.R. 4331 was passed by the Senate on Dec. 15, 1981, passed by the House on Dec. 16, 1981, and signed by the President on Dec. 29, 1981, as Public Law 97-123.

As enacted, Public Law 97-123 will:

(1) Restore the minimum benefit for all those eligible to receive the benefit prior to Jan. 1, 1982 (all persons first becoming eligible for benefits after this date will have their benefit computed without regard to the minimum benefit);

(2) Permit interfund borrowing prior to Jan. 1, 1983, among the three trust funds (OASI, DI, and HI) which are financed by the FICA tax;

(3) Extend social security coverage to the first 6 months of all forms of sick pay, except workmen's compensation benefits;

(4) Increase penalties for all unlawful acts for the misuse of social security numbers and cards and adding new acts which are considered to be a misuse of social security cards and numbers;

(5) Require the Secretary of Health and Human Services to meet the Jan. 1, 1982, deadline for entering into agreements with States for the purpose of conducting demonstration projects to train AFDC recipients as homemaker-home health aides;

(6) Require State and local government agencies to furnish the name and social security number of any prisoner convicted of a felony when the Secretary of Health and Human Services makes a written request to the agency for the information;

(7) Require the Secretary of Health and Human Services to report to Congress within 90 days after enactment on actions being taken to prevent payments to deceased social security beneficiaries.

H.R. 4566 (Mr. Gibbons with cosponsors); Public Law 97-446; app. Jan. 12, 1983.

The conference report on H.R. 4566 was passed by the House on Dec. 21, 1982, and the Senate on Dec. 22, 1982, and was subsequently signed into law by the President on Jan. 12, 1983, as Public Law 97-446. H.R. 4566 as amended by the Committee on Ways and Means and the Senate Finance Committee, and as agreed to in the committee on conference is an omnibus trade and tariff bill which incorporates 51 miscellaneous tariff bills involving permanent duty elimination or reductions, the extension of certain duty suspensions, increased tourist duty-free exemptions and the lifting of an embargo; certain provisions affecting U.S. Customs administration; provisions extending the implementation of the International Coffee and Sugar Agreements and provisions implementing the Convention in the Means of Prohibiting and Preventing the Illicit Import, Export, and Transfer of Ownership of Cultural Property. H.R. 4566 contains similar provisions of H.R. 4566 and H.R. 6867 submitted to the House by reports dated Sept. 25, 1981, and Sept. 17, 1982, respectively, and subsequently passed by the House on Oct. 13, 1981, and Sept. 22, 1982, respectively. Also contained in the final bill are certain provisions found in the Senate Finance Committee's report on H.R. 4566 to the Senate dated Sept. 21, 1982.

As enacted, Public Law 97-446, will achieve the following:

Title I—Tariff provisions

Sec. 102 (introduced as H.R. 3075) amends the article description for TSUS item 112.30, which provides for a tariff-rate quota on imports of tuna not packed in oil, (1) to indicate clearly that shipments from the U.S. insular possessions are not to be included in determining the extend to which the quota has been filled, and (2) to reflect that the agency responsible for the administration of the quota is now the National Marine Fisheries Service.

Sec. 103 (introduced as H.R. 5707) repeals an existing embargo on the importation of seven types of furskins from the People's Republic of China. The current embargo, which applies both to the Republic of China and the U.S.S.R. bans the U.S. import of mink, fox, muskrat, martin, weasel, ermine, and kolinsky furskins.

Sec. 104 (introduced as S. 2560) amends the tariff schedules to ensure that potatoes imported as seed potatoes are not diverted for human consumption.

Sec. 105 (introduced as H.R. 4221) amends the tariff schedules with respect to corduroy and velveteen which would effectively classify imported fabrics of pile construction, whether or not the pile threads are cut, under TSUS items 346.05 and 346.65 and would classify velveteen fabric, whether or not the filling flats are cut, under TSUS items 346.15 and 346.24.

Sec. 106 (introduced as H.R. 4494) establishes a new tariff item, providing permanent duty-free treatment on Fourdrinier wire with 240 or more wires to the linear inch, suitable for use in capacitor papermaking machines. Other Fourdrinier wire would continue to be dutiable.

Sec. 107 (introduced as H.R. 2563) establishes a new tariff item, TSUS item 535.13 which reduces the column 1 (MFN) tariff treatment for ceramic insulators used in the production of spark plugs for natural gas-fueled stationary, internal combustion engines to 3.6 percent ad valorem and further provides for a reduction to 3.5 percent ad valorem on Jan. 1, 1984. Item 909.20 of the appendix to the TSUS was repealed. This section provides for retroactive duty-free treatment upon the filing of a proper request with customs within 90 days of enactment.

Sec. 108 (introduced as H.R. 2269) establishes a new tartiff item, TSUS item 668.05, for yankee dryer cylinders providing permanent column 1 (MFN) duty-free treatment. Item 912.06 of the appendix to the TSUS was repealed. This section provides for retroactive duty-free treatment upon the filing of a proper request with customs within 90 days of enactment.

Sec. 109 (introduced as H.R. 3874) exempts from duty certain U.S. aircraft components and materials installed in an aircraft previously exported from the United States and subsequently returned without having been advanced in value or improved in condition while abroad.

Sec. 110 (introduced as H.R. 5758) modifies the appropriate headnotes of schedule 7, part 2, subpart E of the TSUS encouraging the production of watches in the insular possessions (Virgin Islands, Guam, and American Samoa) of the United States. The existing limit of 70 percent foreign content is eliminated and an annual limit on the duty-free entry of watches in 1983 is set at 4,800,000 units with the authority to establish subsequent year annual limits being given to the Secretary of Commerce and Interior jointly. Specific parameters for the establishment of the annual limits are provided. Allocations to the specific insular possessions are also given. Additionally, this section provides for a rebate of duties paid on watch imports for the industry on a by-company basis which would reflect the amount of each insular possessions labor content in the watches.

Sec. 111 (introduced as H.R. 2082) provides the same column 1 (MFN) duty-free treatment to parts of pipe organs as presently afforded finished pipe organs.

Sec. 112 (introduced as H.R. 2162) establishes a new tariff, TSUS item 737.73, column 1 (MFN) duty-free treatment for toy tea sets made of ceramic ware made to the scale of 1 to 10 or larger. This section eliminates the need for Customs Service laboratory tests, and restricts the net size to preclude duty-free entry on miniature hobby sets.

Sec. 113 (introduced as H.R. 5764) establishes four new headnotes to schedule 7, part 5, subpart E providing definition to the clarification of certain toy figures and dolls included in this subpart. Items 737.45 and 737.50 of the TSUS were reclassified as 737.42 and 737.43, respectively, and three new items were added under the headnote of "toy figures of inanimate objects not having a spring mechanism" as follows:

737.47 - stuffed or filled

737.51 - skins for toy figures of animate or inanimate objects

These new categories will have an MFN column 1 rate of 13.6 percent ad valorem and will be subject to the staged rate reductions for 737.95. When column 1 rates are reduced to the corresponding LDDC rate for each item, the LDDC column rate will be deleted.

Sec. 114 (introduced as H.R. 5080) provides permanent duty-free treatment to button blanks of casein by establishing a new tariff item and by appropriately amending subpart A headnote of part 7 of schedule 7 of the tariff schedules.

Sec. 115 (introduced as H.R. 1987) increases the value limitations for duty-free entry of personal articles by returning U.S. residents in order to reduce the administrative burden on the U.S. Customs Service to speed the entry process for returning U.S. citizens and tourists.

Sec. 116 (introduced as H.R. 4844) establishes a new tariff item TSUS 837.00 to provide duty-free treatment to articles for NASA (and other articles launched into space under launch services agreements with NASA) if NASA certifies that such articles to be launched into space are spare parts, or are necessary and uniquely associated support equipment for use in connection with a launch into space. In addition, it provides that materials being returned from space by NASA would not be considered an importation and thereby entry of such materials would not be required. These provisions would be effective for materials entered between 15 days after enactment and Dec. 31, 1994.

Sec. 117 (introduced as H.R. 833) establishes a new tariff item TSUS 854.30 which eliminates the column 1 (MFN) rate of duty on prayer shawls, bags for the keeping of prayer shawls, and certain headwear used in religious services. The provision would allow commercial enterprises to import these articles for religious use under the same duty-free treatment provided religious institutions.

Sec. 118 (introduced as H.R. 2206) increases the value limitation applicable to informal entries of imported merchandise from $600 to $1,000 in aggregate fair retail value. The purpose of this provision is to facilitate the clearance of noncommercial imports of low value and to achieve reductions in the cost of customs administration.

Sec. 119 (introduced as H.R. 2479) establishes new tariff items, TSUS items 870.50, 870.55, and 870.60 to provide for column 1 (MFN) duty-free treatment on certain metal waste and scrap, unwrought metals and other articles of metal to be used in remanufacture by melting or to be processed by shredding, shearing, compacting, or similar processing which renders them fit only for the recovery of metal content. A new headnote is added to schedule 8, part 7 which qualifies the duty-free treatment of items 870.50 and 870.55 in the event the market price of copper is below 51 cents per pound. This section provides for retroactive duty-free treatment upon the filing of a proper request with customs within 90 days of enactment.

Sec. 120 (introduced as S. 1588) provides temporary duty-free treatment on the first 20,000 tons of cull carrots entered in bulk containers each holding 100 pounds or more during the period between August 15 and February 15 of the following year until Dec. 31, 1984.

Sec. 121 (introduced as H.R. 2705 provides a temporary extension of duty-free treatment on mixtures of mashed or macerated hot red peppers and salt through June 30, 1985. This section also provides for retroactive duty-free treatment for articles entered between the termination of the prior suspension and the date of enactment upon the filing of a proper request with Customs within 90 days of enactment.

Sec. 122 (introduced as H.R. 5790) provides until May 15, 1985, column 1 (MFN) duty-free treatment of fresh cantaloupes during the period from January 1 to May 15 of each year.

Sec. 123 (introduced as H.R. 1988) temporarily suspends the column 1 (MFN) rate of duty on carob flour until Dec. 31, 1984.

Sec. 124 (introduced as H.R. 5386) temporarily provides column 1 (MFN) duty-free treatment on hatters fur and suspends until Dec. 31, 1985, the 15 percent ad valorem column 1 rate of duty.

Sec. 125 (introduced as H.R. 2516) provides for the temporary suspension of the column 1 (MFN) rate of duty on wood excelsior which expired on June 30, 1981, for an additional 2 years until June 30, 1983. This section provides for the retroactive duty-free treatment for articles entered between the termination of the prior suspension and the date of enactment upon the filing of a proper request with Customs within 90 days of enactment.

Sec. 126 (introduced as H.R. 6396) provides for the temporary suspension of the column 1 (MFN) rates of duty treatment until June 30, 1985, on imports of needlecraft display models which are replicas of needlecraft kits and on aprons and baby bibs.

Sec. 127 (introduced as H.R. 5498) provides for the temporary suspension of the column 1 (MFN) rate of duty treatment until Sept. 30, 1985, on imports of p-Hydroxbenzoic acid.

Sec. 128 (introduced as H.R. 5730) provides for the temporary suspension of the column 1 (MFN) rate of duty treatment until Sept. 30, 1985, on imports of triphenyl phosphate, a chemical used chiefly as a plasticizer.

Sec. 129 (introduced as H.R. 5499) extends until June 30, 1984, suspension of the column 1 (MFN) rate of duty on Bis (4-aminobenzoate)-1,3 propanediol (trimethylene glycol di-p-aminobenzoate). The duty on this article is currently suspended until June 30, 1983.

Sec. 130 (introduced as H.R. 2786) suspends temporarily the column 1 (MFN) rate of duty on 4-chloro-3-methylphenol until June 30, 1984. the chemical is used primarily as a biocide and antioxidant in the manufacture of machine cutting oils.

Sec. 131 (introduced as H.R. 6943) provides for the extension of the temporary suspension of the column 1 (MFN) rate of duty treatment until Sept. 30, 1985, on color couplers and color intermediates. Current law provided a duty suspension which expired June 30, 1982. This section provides for the retroactive duty-free treatment for articles entered between the termination of the prior suspension and the date of enactment upon the filing of a proper request with Customs within 90 days of enactment.

Sec. 132 (introduced as H.R. 4642) temporarily suspends until June 30, 1985, the column 1 (MFN) rate of duty on isomeric mixtures of ethylbiphenyl. The LDDC and column 2 rates of duty would be unaffected.

Sec. 133 (introduced as H.R. 4913) reduces the duty on Dicofol, and insecticide used on many fruit, vegetable, ornamental, and field crops. The provision would, until Sept. 30, 1985, reduce the column 1 (MFN) rate of duty from 18.4 (1982) percent ad valorem to 10.3 (1983) percent, the LDDC rate from 12.5 percent to 6.9 percent, and the column 2 rate from $0.07 per pound plus 64.5 percent ad valorem to $0.07 per pound plus 41 percent. Additionally, it provides for reductions in the rate of duty effective on Jan. 1, 1984, and Jan. 1, 1985. The section also provides that if a request is filed with a customs officer within 90 days of enactment, prior entries which were unliquidated or with respect to which the liquidation is not final, shall be reliquidated as if entry had been made under the terms of the provision.

Sec. 134 (introduced as H.R. 4806) temporarily suspends the column 1 (MFN) rate of duty until Sept. 30, 1984, on uncompounded allyl resins.

Sec. 135 (introduced as H.R. 7027) provides temporary duty-free treatment of sulfapyridine entered between the date of enactment and Dec. 31, 1985.

Sec. 136 (introduced as H.R. 4890) provides a temporary reduction in the duty for sulfathiazole. The provision would, until Dec. 31, 1983, reduce the column 1 (MFN) rate of duty from 26.5 percent (1983) ad valorem to 13.3 percent and the LDDC rate from 15 percent to 8 percent. The provision also provides for a further reduction in the column 1 rates for the period Dec. 31, 1983, to Jan. 1, 1985, and the period Dec. 31, 1984, to Jan. 1, 1986.

Sec. 137 (introduced as H.R. 1931) continues the existing temporary suspension of the column 1 (MFN) rate of duty on doxorubicin hydrochloride from June 30, 1982, until June 30, 1988. The section is subject to retroactive duty treatment upon the filing of a proper request with customs within 90 days of enactment.

Sec. 138 (introduced as H.R. 5811) provides a reduction in the column 1 (MFN) rate of duty on caffeine from the current level of 8.5 percent to 6 percent until Dec. 31, 1983.

Sec. 139 (introduced as H.R. 1910) suspends temporarily the duties on tartaric acid and certain tartaric chemicals until June 30, 1984.

Sec. 140 (introduced as H.R. 5041) extends the temporary suspension of the column 1 (MFN) rate of duty on natural graphite which expired on June 30, 1981, until Dec. 31, 1984. This section is subject to retroactive duty treatment upon the filing of a proper request with customs within 90 days of enactment.

Sec. 141 (introduced as H.R. 4641) provides for the temporary suspension of the column 1 (MFN) rate of duty on copper scale until Dec. 31, 1985.

Sec. 142 (introduced as H.R. 2485) provides for a step reduction in the column 1 (MFN) duty on chipper knife steel to be effective for a period from Oct. 1, 1982 through Mar. 31, 1985. The annual stage reduction begins by reducing the column 1 rate for the period from Oct. 1, 1982, to Jan. 1, 1983, from 4.6 percent to 4.4 percent. The effective rates would be reduced in annual stages to a level of 3.9 percent for the period from Jan. 1, 1985, to Apr. 1, 1985. This section is subject to retroactive duty treatment upon the filing of a proper request with customs within 90 days of enactment.

Sec. 143 (introduced as H.R. 2454) provides for duty-free treatment on certain freight containers entered between the date of enactment and Dec. 31, 1986, when the articles will become permanently duty-free under current law.

Sec. 144 extends the temporary suspension of the column 1 (MFN) rate of duty on certain unwrought alloys of cobalt which expired on June 30, 1982, until June 30, 1983. This section is subject to retroactive duty treatment upon the filing of a proper request with customs within 90 days of enactment.

Sec. 145 (introduced as H.R. 5554) provides until Sept. 30, 1984, temporary suspension of the column 1 (MFN) rate of duty on clock radios valued not over $40 each which have solid-state clocks and the radio portion of other clock radios. Clock radios cannot be in combination with any other unit and not designed for motor vehicle installation.

Sec. 146 (introduced as H.R. 5823) provides until June 30, 1986, a continued suspension of the column 1 (MFN) rate of duty on certain bicycle parts.

Sec. 147 (introduced as H.R. 5884) provides for column 1 (MFN) duty-free treatment until Dec. 31, 1985, on certain textile machines designed for heat set, stretch texturing of continuous man-made fibers.

Sec. 148 (introduced as H.R. 5839) temporarily suspends until Sept. 30, 1985, the column 1 (MFN) rate of duty on single cylinder, fine gauge hosiery knitting machines and double cylinder jacquard hosiery knitting machines.

Sec. 149 (introduced as H.R. 4155) temporarily suspends the column 1 (MFN) rate of duty on double-headed latch needles until June 30, 1985.

Sec. 150 (introduced as H.R. 4602) temporarily suspends, until Sept. 30, 1984, the column 1 (MFN) rate of duty on externally-powered electric prosthetic devices and their parts.

Sec. 151 (introduced as H.R. 6268) temporarily suspends until Dec. 31, 1986, the column 1 (MFN) rate of duty on small toy and novelty items valued not over 5 cents per unit and jewelry valued not over 1.6 cents per piece.

Sec. 152 (introduced as H.R. 5764) temporarily suspends until Dec. 31, 1985, the column 1 (MFN) rate of duty on stuffed dolls, skins for stuffed dolls, skins for stuffed toy figures of animate and inanimate objects, and stuffed or filled toy figures of inanimate objects not having a spring mechanism.

Sec. 153 (introduced as H.R. 6281) extends Public Law 96-236, an act providing for the implementation of the International Sugar Agreement, 1977, for 2 years from the expiration of the current authority, which expires Jan. 1, 1983.

Sec. 154 (introduced as H.R. 6280), extends Public Law 96-599, an act providing for the implementation of the International Coffee Agreement, for 1 year from the expiration of the current authority, which expired Oct. 1, 1982.

Sec. 155 amended sec. 103(f)(3) of the Agricultural Act of 1949 effective for the 1982–85 upland cotton crops. This amendment provided that upland cotton imported into the United States when the special quota was in effect shall be deemed to be an import under such special quota until the special quota is filled and any such cotton shall be free of duty.

Sec. 156 established that unless otherwise provided, the amendments provided under this act would be effective 15 days after the date of the act, and provided for retroactivity in certain specific cases which are listed.

Title I—Subtitle B

Secs. 161–167 of the subtitle entitled the Educational, Scientific and Cultural Materials Importation Act of 1982 (introduced as H.R. 6093) implements the Nairobi Protocol to the Florence Agreement. The protocol provides for duty-free treatment for a broader range of educational, scientific, cultural materials and articles for the handicapped with a view to contributing to the cause of peace through free exchange of ideas and knowledge across national boundaries.

Title Ii—Miscellaneous customs provisions

Sec. 201 (introduced as H.R. 5170) allows business documents to enter the United States in a no-entry-required status as "intangibles." This section also repeals TSUS item 870.10 and sec. 483 of the Tariff Act of 1930. Further, sec. 484 of the Tariff Act of 1930 is amended to prohibit nominal consignees from conducting customs business on behalf of any other person unless the consignee is a licensed customhouse broker. The provision was further amended in reference to consignees to state that "when a consignee declares on entry that he is the owner or purchaser of merchandise, the appropriate customs officer may, without liability, accept the declaration" and to provide a necessary conforming amendment.

Sec. 202 (introduced as H.R. 4690) amends sec. 311 of the Tariff Act of 1930 to allow articles to be delivered into successive customs bonded storage warehouses as long as the ultimate purpose remains that of export. Under current law, articles withdrawn from a bonded manufacturing warehouse may be delivered only to a bonded storage warehouse at an exterior port for the sole purpose of immediate export.

Title III—Implementation of Convention in Cultural Property

Secs. 201–215 (introduced as S. 1723) implements the Convention on the Means of Prohibiting and Preventing the Illicit Import, Export, and Transfer of Ownership of Cultural Property and is entitled the Convention in Cultural Property Implementation Act. Provisions authorize the President to enter into agreements to restrict imports of illicitly traded artifacts when the major importing nations are implementing similar controls. The provisions also authorize the President to impose import controls unilaterally in an emergency, and they bar the importation of certain items identified as having been stolen from museums or similar institutions abroad. Additionally, the provisions provide for the establishment of a Cultural Property Advisory Committee to review the effectiveness of sections of this act.

H.R. 4577 (Mr. Coelho); reported to the Senate Nov. 15, 1982.

H.R. 4577 was favorably reported by the Committee on Ways and Means Sept. 16, 1982. It passed the House on Sept. 21, 1982. The bill permits certain individuals who received stock in 1973, pursuant to the exercise of employee stock options, to elect to have sec. 252 of P.L. 97–34 apply retroactively in certain limited circumstances. Under the bill, any reduction in tax pursuant to such election could not exceed $100,000 with respect to any one employee. The statute of limitations is amended by the bill to permit refunds or credits, or assessments, attributable to the provisions of the bill.

The Senate Finance Committee H.R. 4577 favorably reported with several amendments, on Sept. 29, 1982. As reported, the bill provides that withdrawal liability generally will be imposed under the Multiemployer Pension Plan Amendments Act of 1980 only with respect to an employer's withdrawal from a multiemployer plan occurring after Sept. 25, 1980. Except in certain cases of multiemployer plans covering employees in the seagoing industry, liability for withdrawals occurring before Sept. 26, 1980, generally will be imposed if the plan terminates before the earlier of Sept. 26, 1985, or the expiration of 5 years after the date of withdrawal, with insufficient assets.

In addition, the Senate Finance Committee amendment excludes from the definition of "artificial bait" any substance which contains 85 percent (or more) by weight of plant or animal material which can be ingested by fish. The provision is identical to H.R. 617, which was referred to the Subcommittee on Select Revenue Measures on Sept. 24, 1981, and before which a hearing was held on July 12, 1982.

Also, the bill as amended by the Senate Finance Committee includes a provision that excludes from an employee's income, amounts deferred pursuant to a salary reduction arrangement under a money purchase pension plan if the plan was in existence on June 27, 1974, and contributions by employees and the employer do not exceed the levels permitted under the plan's contribution formula on that date. In addition, for plan years beginning after 1981, the plan will be subject to rules added by the Revenue Act of 1978 with respect to employee participation and prohibited discrimination in favor of officers, shareholders, or highly compensated employees. The provision is identical to H.R. 4948 as passed by the House on Sept. 20, 1982.

Finally, the bill as amended by the Senate Finance Committee contains provisions liberalizing the treatment under the private foundation rules for the following foundations: The Otto Bremer Foundation, the El Pomar Foundation, the Houston Endowment, the Public Welfare Foundation, the Sand Springs Home, the B. Altman Foundation, the Ahmanson Foundation, and the New London Day Trust. With the exception of the B. Altman Foundation, identical provisions were included in the Senate-passed version of H.R. 4961. These provisions were not agreed to in conference, however, and were not included in P.L. 97-248.

H.R. 4577 was reported to the Senate on Nov. 15, 1982. At the adjournment of the 97th Congress, H.R. 4577 was pending on the Senate calendar.

H.R. 4613 (Mr. Conable with cosponsors); Public Law 97-365; app. Oct. 25, 1982.

H.R. 4613, the Debt Collection Act of 1982, was reported by the Committee on Ways and Means on Apr. 28, 1982, and passed the House on May 5, 1982 The bill, as it passed the House, contains the following major provisions:

Screening potential debtors.—Upon written request, the IRS would be permitted to disclose to a Federal agency whether a loan applicant under certain Federal loan programs has a tax delinquent account. The Federal loan programs covered by this provision are those which make, insure, or guarantee loans where OMB has determined (and has published in the Federal Register) that screening applicants for outstanding tax liabilities will prevent or reduce future delinquencies. Federal agencies administering these designated loan programs could also require loan applicants to furnish their taxpayer identifying number (e.g., for individuals, this would be their social security number).

Disclosure of mailing addresses.—Upon written request of an agency head, the IRS would be permitted to disclose taxpayer mailing addresses to the agency or its agents (e.g., third-party debt collectors) for use in locating taxpayers to collect Federal debts. Any unauthorized redisclosure by agency employees or their agents would be subject to the penalties of present law. Any agency receiving addresses from the IRS and disclosing any address to any agent would be required to comply in full with the safeguards established in sec. 6103(p)(4) of the Internal Revenue Code for return information, as would any agent who received such an address.

Provisions of the bill would apply to loan applications made after Sept. 30, 1982.

As passed by the Senate on Sept. 28, 1982, S. 1249, with amendments, was substituted for the provisions of H.R. 4613. As returned to the House, the bill contained tax-related provisions as reported by the Senate Finance Committee on Dec. 3, 1981, amendments to the Federal Claims Collection Act, and other provisions regarding the use of salary offsets and administrative offsets as debt collection methods, the interest and penalties to be charged on outstanding debts, the reports required by agencies on debt collection activities, and agency contracts for debt collection services.

On Sept. 30, 1982, the House concurred in the Senate amendment to H.R. 4613, with an amendment. The amendment replaced the tax-related provisions of the bill as passed by the Senate with the House version of these provisions, generally as described above. In addition, the amendment provided that the other provisions of the bill as passed by the Senate, would not apply to claims or debts arising under the Internal Revenue Code, the Social Security Act, or the tariff laws. The Senate concurred with the House amendment on Oct. 1, 1982, clearing the measure for the President.

H.R. 4613 was signed into law by the President on Oct. 25, 1982, as Public Law 97-365.

H.R. 4717 (Mr. Jenkins); Public Law 97-362; app. Oct. 25, 1982.

As reported by the Committee on Ways and Means on Dec. 14, 1981, and passed by the House on Dec. 15, 1981, H.R. 4717 contained the following three provisions:

(1) Delay in Provisions Recognizing Gain on Certain Dispositions of LIFO Inventories: Delays the effective date for 1 year, through Dec. 31, 1982, of provisions adopted in the Crude Oil Windfall Profit Tax Act of 1980 which require the recapture of LIFO reserves in certain corporate liquidations.

(2) Net Operating Loss Treatment of the Federal National Mortgage Association (FNMA): Provides a 10-year carryback and a 5-year carryover for certain operating losses of the FNMA.

(3) Safe Harbor Leasing Information Returns: Requires an information return to be filed with the Internal Revenue Service in order for a transaction to qualify as a safe harbor lease under the provisions of the accelerated cost recovery system enacted in the Economic Recovery Tax Act of 1981. The information return must be filed with the national office of the IRS not later than 30 days after the date the lease is executed or Jan. 31, 1982, whichever is later.

The Senate passed H.R. 4717 on Dec. 16, 1981, with amendments approved by the Senate Finance Committee and with additional Senate floor amendments. The Senate Finance Committee amendments include the following provisions of H.R. 4961 (Miscellaneous Revenue Act of 1981) which passed the House of Representatives on Dec. 15, 1981:

(1) Awards of Attorney Fees: Permits the award of attorney fees and reasonable court costs, up to a maximum of $25,000, under certain circumstances in civil tax actions.

(2) Treatment of Certain Lending or Finance Businesses for Holding Company Purposes: Amends the definition of "lending or finance business" and modifies the business expense test for purposes of the tax on personal holding companies.

(3) Refunds on Repeal of Bus Excise Tax: Liberalizes conditions for eligibility to receive a refund of bus excise taxes on a bus sold after Apr. 19, 1977, and before Nov. 10, 1978.

In addition, the Senate approved the following Senate Finance Committee amendments:

(1) Annuities for Survivors of Tax Court Judges: Increases annuities for survivors of Tax Court judges and provides a cost of living adjustment for the future and for increases since 1963.

(2) Tax Court Procedures: Revises procedural rules to permit commissioners to hear and decide regular cases if the deficiency is not over $5,000, expands small tax cases, and allows oral opinions.

(3) Deferred Compensation Plans for State Judges: Subjects participants in a qualified State judicial plan covering elected judges to the rule requiring participants in an otherwise ineligible plan to include all accrued plan benefits in gross income in the year in which there is no substantial risk that the benefits are forfeitable (generally, the year the participant vests).

(4) Business Development Companies: Permits business development companies to elect to be treated as regulated investment companies under the Small Business Incentive Act of 1980.

(5) Withholding Statements (W-2) to Terminated Employees: Allows Form W-2 for terminating employees to be provided by the following January 31 or 30 days after a written request.

(6) Voluntary Withholding of State Tax for Certain Fishermen: Permits seamen or fishermen employed in a coastwide trade between ports in the same State to request an employer to withhold State income taxes.

(7) FUTA Exemption for Certain Fishermen: Extends for an additional year, through 1982, the exemption from Federal unemployment taxes for certain fishermen.

(8) Rollover of Gain on FCC-Ordered Disposition of Broadcast Property: Expands present nonrecognition of gain rules in FCC-ordered divestitures to proceeds which are reinvested in a newspaper.

(9) Exclusion of Certain R. & D. Expenditures From Small Issue IDB Restrictions: Excludes R. &. D. wages or supplies expenses under code sec. 174 from the $10 million capital expenditure limitation on small issue IDB's.

(10) Reforestation Trust Fund: Changes the source of financing for the Reforestation Trust Fund from tariffs on timber to revenues received from the sale of timber and forest products on Federal lands.

(11) Estate Tax Revisions: Provides for Tax Court review of Treasury Department determinations of the fair market value of specially valued property. Also provides a declaratory judgment procedure for determining whether an estate qualifies for the installment payment of estate taxes. Eliminates the requirement that installment payments of estate taxes be accelerated if the interest in a closely-held business passes to a nonfamily member of the heir or subsequent transferee.

(12) Expansion of Oil Shale Credits for 1981 and 1982: Expands for 1981 and 1982 the definition of shale oil equipment for purposes of the energy tax credit to include certain upgrading equipment.

(13) Subsidized Energy Financing: Excludes from the definition of subsidized financing for residential energy credits for purposes of the anti-double-dipping rules, financing provided by a lending institution which receives a State tax credit for making a loan.

(14) Study of Petroleum Supply Disruptions: Requires a study to be submitted to Congress on June 15, 1982, by an interagency task force on alternatives for mitigating the economic effects of an oil supply disruption.

(15) Eligibility for Trade Adjustment Assistance: Defers the effective date of a change relating to a group eligibility under trade adjustment assistance made in the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1981 until the end of fiscal year 1983.

The Senate also added the following floor amendments:

(1) Bankruptcy Tax Act Delay: Postpones for 90 days, until Apr. 1, 1982, the effective date of the discharge of indebtedness provisions enacted in the Bankruptcy Tax Act of 1980.

(2) Small Issue Industrial Development Bonds: Denies tax-exempt status for bonds issued after date of enactment, the proceeds from which are used for a designated list of private or commercial recreational facilities, including golf courses, country clubs, massage parlors, tennis clubs, ski resorts, skating facilities, racquet sports facilities, hot tub facilities, suntan facilities, or racetracks.

(3) Mortgage Subsidy Bonds: Amends the Mortgage Subsidy Bond Tax Act of 1980 (1) to permit the maximum amount by which the interest rate on mortgages financed with tax-exempt mortgage bonds exceeds the interest rate on the bonds to be up to 1⅛ percentage points; (2) to not require the disposition of reserve assets at a loss in excess of undistributed arbitrage profits on nonmortgage investments at such time; (3) to define "low or moderate income" for purposes of the targeting provisions of the act by an 80 percent or less of area median income test; and (4) to establish as the period of time during which 20 percent (15 percent in targeted areas) of rental housing units financed with tax-exempt bonds must be occupied by families with low or moderate incomes at the later of (a) 10 years after over one-half the project is first occupied, (b) a date when half the term to maturity of the longest bonds issued for the project has been reached, or (c) the date on which any section 8 housing assistance terminates.

(4) Taxes on Wagering: Reduces the present 2 percent wagering tax to 0.25 percent and the $500 occupational tax to $50 for wagering authorized under State law.

(5) Medicare Enrollment for Certain Merchant Seamen: The Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1981 (P.L. 97-35, 95 Stat. 357) repealed provisions of prior law (42 U.S.C. 201, 249) that entitles merchant seamen to receive free care through Public Health Service hospitals and clinics, effective Oct. 1, 1981. Certain elderly merchant seamen had foregone medicare enrollment when otherwise eligible because of the repealed entitlement. The amendment provides these individuals with a medicare enrollment period without application of premium level penalties beginning Apr. 1, 1982, through Dec. 31, 1982.

On Dec. 16, 1981, the Senate insisted on its amendments and requested a conference with the House.

On Mar. 16, 1982, the House concurred in the Senate amendment to H.R. 4717 with an amendment in the nature of a substitute and requested a conference with the Senate. The provisions of the bill assigned into law by the President on Oct. 25, 1982, as Public Law 97-362.

The act includes a 1-year deferral of the LIFO reserve recapture rule, for plans of liquidations adopted before Jan. 1, 1983, for the first $1 million of LIFO reserves where the liquidation is completed before Jan. 1, 1984.

The act includes the provision in both House and Senate bills adjusting the carryback and carryforward rules for net operating losses of the Federal National Mortgage Association.

The act includes the Senate provision, with amendments, which expands the nonrecognition treatment for gain on an FCC-ordered disposition of broadcast property to a reinvestment in a newspaper under specified conditions.

The act expands the definition of shale oil equipment for purposes of the energy investment tax credit. The expanded definition would include equipment used in hydrogenation or other processes subsequent to retorting which is applied in the vicinity of the property from which the shale was extracted and which is applied to bring the shale oil to a grade and quality suitable for transporting to and processing in a refinery.

The act includes the Senate provisions increasing annuities for survivors of Tax Court judges and revising the procedural rules of the Tax Court, with technical amendments.

The act includes the Senate provisions on providing withholding statements to terminating employees and permitting voluntary withholding of State income taxes for certain seamen.

The act includes the Senate floor amendment reducing the 2 percent excise tax on certain wagers to 0.25 percent for wagers authorized by State law and similarly reducing the $500 occupational tax to $50. The reduction in the excise tax is effective on Jan. 1, 1983, and that on the occupational tax is effective July 1, 1983.

The act substitutes for the requirements enacted in P.L. 97-35 new Federal unemployment compensation eligibility requirements for individuals separated from the military.

Under the law prior to the act, individuals who left the military at the end of a term of enlistment were ineligible for Federal unemployment benefits if they had the opportunity to reenlist.

Under the act, up to 13 weeks of Federal unemployment benefits, following a 4-week waiting period after separation, could be provided to unemployed ex-service members who (1) had completed the initial term of active service they agreed to serve, (2) were separated under honorable conditions, and (3) meet the qualifying requirements of the State in which they file for benefits.

Ex-service members who were separated prior to completing their initial term of active service could qualify for unemployment benefits if they were separated early, under honorable conditions, (a) for the convenience of the Government under an early release program, (b) because of medical disqualification, pregnancy, parenthood, or any service-incurred injury or disability, (c) because of hardship, or (d) if they had served for at least 365 continuous days, because of personality disorders or inaptitude. The provision is effective for separations on or after July 1, 1981, but only for benefits payable after the date of enactment.

Also, effective Oct. 1, 1983, the act requires that Federal unemployment benefits paid to ex-service members be charged to the Department of Defense in the same manner as Federal benefits paid to former civilian Federal employees are charged to other Federal agencies.

The act extends for 1 year (through 1982) the Federal unemployment tax exemption for wages paid to certain fishermen whose remuneration is exempt from the social security tax. The provision applies to remuneration paid during 1982.

Under prior law, workers could be certified eligible to apply for benefits under the trade adjustment assistance program if increased imports "contributed importantly" to worker layoffs and production/sales declines of the firm. Pursuant to P.L. 97-35, the causation standard was strengthened to require that increased imports be a "substantial cause" of such layoffs and declines, defined as a cause which is "important and not less than any other cause." The new test applied to petitions filed on or after Feb. 9, 1982.

The act amends P.L. 97-35 to restore the "contributed importantly" standard through Sept. 30, 1983, the statutory termination date of the program. The provision id effective on date of enactment.

Note: The other tax provisions of the bill were either deleted or adopted in other legislation.

H.R. 4800 (Mr. Rostenkowski and Mr. Conable); reported to House May 12, 1982. (See P.L. 97-248 (H.R. 4961).)

As reported to the House by the Committee on Ways and Means, on May 12, 1982, H.R. 4800 extends and reinstates various aviation excise taxes and transfers the revenues from those taxes to the Airport and Airway Trust Fund for the period July 1, 1982, through Dec. 31, 1983. The committee intends to offer this legislation on the House floor as a revenue title to H.R. 2643, the Airport and Airway Improvement Act of 1982, reported by the Committee on Public Works and Transportation.

H.R. 4800 as reported contains the following provisions:

Tax rates.—The domestic air passenger ticket tax would continue at its present 5-ercent rate and the air freight waybill tax would be reinstated at its prior rate of 5-percent. The international departure tax would be reinstated at a rate of $5 per person. The fuels tax for noncommercial aviation would be imposed at 12 cents per gallon for both gasoline and jet fuel, and the aircraft tire and tube taxes would continue as under present law. The prior law aircraft use tax would be repealed for both commercial and general aviation. The air freight tax, the international departure tax, and the non-commercial aviation fuels tax would apply for the 18-month period, July 1, 1982, through Dec. 31, 1983.

Other modifications.—The requirement that the ticketed fare and tax be shown by trip segments would be repealed. The requirement for separately showing the fare and tax would be retained.

The 6-hour layover rule under the international departure tax would be increased to 12 hours for purposes of determining whether the flight will be treated as uninterrupted travel subject only to the departure tax.

The Secretary of the Treasury would be granted the authority to waive the 225-mile zone rule if either Canada or Mexico enter into a "qualified agreement" regarding the ticket tax to be applied to persons traveling by air between the United States and that country.

Finally, the prohibition against charging aircraft for overtime costs associated with services provided by the U.S. Customs Service personnel during regularly scheduled hours (i.e., 8 a.m.-5 p.m.) on Sundays and holidays would be repealed, effective July 1, 1982.

Provisions similar to H.R. 4800 were included in Public Law 97-248 (H.R. 4961), which was signed into law by the President on Sept. 3, 1982.

H.R. 4948 (Mr. Matsui); passed House Sept. 20, 1982. (See also H.R. 4577.)

H.R. 4948 would exclude from an employee's income amounts deferred pursuant to a salary reduction arrangement under a money purchase plan if the plan was in existence on June 27, 1974, and contributions by employees and the employer do not exceed the levels permitted under the plan's contribution formula on that date. In addition, for plan years beginning after 1981, the plan will be subject to rules added by the Revenue Act of 1978 with respect to employee participation and prohibited discrimination in favor of officers, shareholders, or highly compensated employees.

H.R. 4948 was favorably reported by the Committee on Ways and Means on Sept. 16, 1982. The bill as passed by the House was included as a committee amendment to H.R. 4577, as ordered reported by the Committee on Finance on Sept. 29, 1982.

H.R. 4961 (Mr. Stark with cosponsors); Public Law 97-248; app. Sept. 3, 1982. (See also H.R. 4717 for related action.)

As reported by the Committee on Ways and Means on Dec. 14, 1981, and as passed by the House on Dec. 15, 1981, H.R. 4961, the Miscellaneous Revenue Act of 1981, would make a number of miscellaneous changes in the tax laws and in the Federal-State unemployment compensation program, the supplemental security income (SSI) program, the child support enforcement (CSE) program, and the social services program established under title XX of the Social Security Act.

Title I of the bill contains changes in the tax law relating to: (1) rental of residences to family members and other business use of residences (sec. 102); (2) awarding of reasonable attorneys' fees to taxpayer where the taxpayer prevails and the position of the United States was unreasonable (sec. 103); (3) limitation on acceleration of accrual of taxes not to apply to certain taxpayers (sec. 104); (4) treatment of certain lending or finance businesses for purposes of the tax on personal holding companies (sec. 105); (5) additional 2 year delay in application of the net operating loss rules added by the Tax Reform Act of 1976 (sec. 106); and (6) additional refunds relating to the repeal of the excise tax on buses (sec. 107).

Title II makes changes in the unemployment compensation, supplemental security income, child support enforcement, and social services programs relating to:

(1) Extension of the Reed Act (sec. 201); (2) exclusion of student intern wages from FUTA (sec. 202); (3) exclusion of wages paid to certain alien farmworkers from FUTA (sec. 203); (4) unemployment compensation benefits for ex-servicemembers (sec. 204); (5) one-month prospective budgeting for SSI benefits (sec. 205); (6) negotiability of SSI checks (sec. 206); (7) child support enforcement—cost of collection and other services (sec. 207); (8) technical amendments to the child support enforcement program (sec. 208); and (9) technical amendments to social services programs under title XX of the Social Security Act.

On Dec. 14, 1981, the Senate Finance Committee reported a committee amendment to H.R. 4717 incorporating secs. 103, 105, and 107 of H.R. 4961 with amendments. On Dec. 16, 1981, a Senate floor amendment to H.R. 4717 incorporated secs. 201, 202, and 203 of H.R. 4961, as passed by the House. H.R. 4717 was then passed by the Senate on Dec. 16, 1981, with amendments. The Senate requested a conference with the House and appointed conferees.

Sec. 102 with an amendment, and sec. 106 of H.R. 4961 were added as Senate floor amendments to H.R. 5159, the Black Lung Benefits Revenue Act of 1981, which was subsequently enacted into law on Dec. 29, 1981, as Public Law 97-119.

A description of H.R. 4961 provisions as passed the House follows:

TITLE I: TAX PROVISIONS

Section 102: Rental of residences to family members and other business use of residences.—Code sec. 280A restricts the ability of taxpayers to take deductions in connection with homes and other dwelling units that are used for personal purposes. A taxpayer has used a dwelling unit for personal purposes if the unit was used by the taxpayer or any member of his family or by a co-owner or a member of the co-owner's family. These personal use rules apply even if the family member using the unit is paying a fair rental value. Under this provision, a taxpayer will not be treated as having used a residence for personal purposes if the unit is rented to another person at fair rental and the person renting the unit is using it as his principal residence. The bill also contains a provision coordinating the application of sec. 280A with the deductions allowable under sec. 162(a)(2) and other provisions of the Internal Revenue Code in situations where taxpayers are away from home in pursuit of a trade or business. These provisions take effect in 1982.

Section 103: Awarding of reasonable litigation costs to taxpayer where taxpayer prevails and the position of the United States was unreasonable.—This provision of the bill amends the present law rules relating to the awarding of attorney's fees in tax litigation by substituting a new set of rules to be applied in tax cases. Under the new provision a taxpayer could be awarded reasonable litigation costs up to $50,000 if the position of the United States in the tax litigation was unreasonable. This provision will discourage any possible overreaching by the Internal Revenue Service in its handling of tax litigation. The bill also allows the Tax Court to impose a penalty of up to $5,000 on taxpayers who institute litigation for the purpose of delay or who maintain a frivolous or groundless position before the Court. The new provisions generally apply to civil tax proceedings in U.S. courts other than the Tax Court as of Oct. 1, 1981, and to proceedings commenced in the U.S. Tax Court after Dec. 31, 1982.

Section 104: Limitation on acceleration of accrual of taxes not to apply to certain taxpayers.—This provision relates to the present law rule that requires accrual basis taxpayers to continue to use the old assessment date when a taxing jurisdiction changes the assessment date for a deductible tax. This present law rule prevents taxpayers from claiming two deductions in a single year. Under the committee bill, accrual method taxpayers will be allowed to use the new assessment date if their first accrual of tax occurs after the change in the assessment date or if they elect to switch to the new date and to establish a suspense account which will prevent deduction of two taxes in a single year.

Section 105: Treatment of certain lending or finance businesses for purposes of the tax on personal holding companies.—This provision relates to the treatment of "lending or finance businesses" for purposes of the personal holding company tax. Generally, present law imposes a tax on the undistributed personal holding company income of a personal holding company. A corporation actively engaged in a lending or finance business is exempt from the personal holding company tax if the corporation meets a specific minimum business expense requirement. Under the committee bill, the definition of a lending or finance business is modified to include the business of making loans with maturities up to 144 months.

This change would be effective starting in 1981. In addition, starting in 1982, the bill increases the qualified business expense requirement for businesses with ordinary gross income in excess of $1 million.

Section 106: Additional 2-year delay in the application of the net operating loss rules added by the Tax Reform Act of 1976.—The provision delays for 2 years the application of the net operating loss rules added by the Congress in the Tax Reform Act of 1976. The committee believes that there are a number of technical problems with respect to the provisions added in 1976 and that further study of these provisions is necessary before they can be allowed to take effect.

Section 107: Additional refunds relating to the repeal of the excise tax on buses.—The Energy Tax Act of 1978 provided for refunds of bus excise tax paid after Apr. 19, 1977, and before Nov. 10, 1978. Some taxpayers were unable to meet the procedural requirements necessary to obtain a refund of the excise tax. This provision liberalizes these conditions for eligibility to allow for additional refunds consistent with the intent of the 1978 act. The provision does not provide for the payment of interest on these refunds.

TITLE II: UNEMPLOYMENT COMPENSATION AND WELFARE PROVISIONS

A. Unemployment compensation amendments

Section 201: Use of certain amounts transferred to State unemployment funds (Reed Act).—This provision extends for 10 years the authority for States to use for administrative purposes certain funds credited to individual State unemployment trust funds in 1956, 1957, and 1958 and allows States that have used such funds to pay unemployment benefits to reestablish a Reed Act account.

Section 202: Exclusion of student intern wages from FUTA.—This provision excludes from Federal unemployment taxes wages paid to certain student interns, regardless of age, for work that is an integral part of their academic program. Currently, only interns under age 22 are excluded.

Section 203: Exclusion of wages paid to certain alien farmworkers from FUTA.—This provision extends for 2 years the exclusion of wages paid to aliens admitted to the United States to perform agricultural work, pursuant to the Immigration and Nationality Act, from Federal unemployment taxes.

Section 204: Unemployment compensation benefits for ex-servicemembers.—This provision limits unemployment benefits to ex-servicemembers who have served 730 or more continous days in the military; requires a 4-week waiting period between the week in which the individual is separated from the service and the week in which he or she first becomes entitled to compensation; and limits an eligible ex-servicemember's benefits to 13 weeks. This provision is effective for separation on or after July 1, 1981, but only for benefits payable after the date of enactment.

B. Supplemental security income, child support enforcement, and social services amendments

Section 205: Accounting period.—This provision substitutes a 1-month "prospective" accounting period in SSI for the "retrospective" accounting period in current law.

Section 206: Negotiability of SSI checks.—This provision clarifies that new provisions establishing a process for dealing with unnegotiated SSI checks apply to "State supplement-only checks" as well as SSI/State supplement checks.

Section 207: Child support enforcement—Cost of collection and other services.—This provision repeals provisions in current law that require States to charge the absent parent an amount equal to 10 percent of any child support collected for a non-AFDC recipient. It allows States to charge a fee of up to $20 and to retain from any non-AFDC collection an amount equal to administrative costs not covered by the fee, or to collect this amount from the parent who owes child or spousal support.

Section 208: Child support enforcement—Technical amendments.—This provision corrects several inaccurate references contained in the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act.

Section 209: Social services—Technical amendments.—This provision conforms the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act provisons to allow the Territories to continue to spend unused public assistance funds for social services; makes a technical correction to ensure that all title XX funds are available for allotment to States and territories; clarifies provisions in current law so the definition of "State" for title XX purposes is the same as under prior law; conforms the title IV-E foster care program to changes contained in the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act.

On July 12, 1982, the Senate Finance Committee reported the bill to the Senate with amendments. On July 22, 1982, the bill passed the Senate with further amendments. The House and Senate met in conference and on Aug. 19, 1982, they both agreed to the conference report. The bill was signed into law by the President on Sept. 3, 1982, as Public Law 97-248. A summary of the act follows.

TITLE I: SPENDING REDUCTIONS

A. MEDICARE

1. Medicare payments secondary for older workers choosing to be covered under group health plans.—The act includes a provision which would require employers to offer employees aged 65 through 69 and their dependents the same health benefit plan offered to younger workers and would make medicare the secondary payor to those plans for such employees and their aged spouses. The decision whether to take this private coverage or select medicare as primary payor would be voluntary for the individual. Medicare payments would be reduced for any item or service furnished to an employee or spouse if the combined payment under medicare and the employer's health plan would otherwise exceed, for items or services reimbursed on a cost basis, their reasonable cost, or, for items or services reimbursed on a charge basis, the higher of medicare's reasonable charge or the amount allowable under the employer health benefits plan. In no case would medicare pay more than it would otherwise have paid. Employers with less than 20 employees would be exempt from the provision. The measure would become effective Jan. 1, 1983.

2. Reimbursement for inpatient radiology and pathology services.—Under current law, medicare part B pays 100 percent of the reasonable charges of radiologists and pathologists who furnish radiology and pathology services to hospital inpatients and who accept assignment in all cases for these services.

The act includes a provision which eliminates the special 100 percent reimbursement rate thereby providing that medicare will pay for such services on the same basis as other physicians' services; i.e., 80 percent of reasonable charges after the part B deductible has been met.

The provision is effective with respect to services furnished on or after Oct. 1, 1982.

3. Elimination of the inpatient routine nursing salary cost differential.—The act includes a provision which eliminates the routine nursing salary cost differential.

The provision would be effective Oct. 1, 1982.

4. Reimbursement of provider-based physicians.—The act includes a provision which directs the Secretary of Health and Human Services to prescribe regulations, effective no later than Oct. 1, 1982, which will distinguish between (1) professional medical services which are personally rendered to an individual patient, which contribute to the patient's diagnosis or treatment, and are reimbursable only under part B on a charge basis; and (2) professional medical services which are of benefit to patients generally and which can be reimbursed only on a reasonable cost basis. Reasonable cost reimbursement for provider-based services could not exceed a reasonable compensation equivalent established by the Secretary in regulations.

5. Part B premium as constant percentage of costs.—Individuals who elect to be covered under medicare part B are required to pay a monthly premium. The amount of the premium, which is set annually, is $12.20, effective July 1, 1982.

Currently, annual increases in the premium are limited to the percentage by which cash social security benefits have most recently been increased. The act includes a provision which would suspend this limitation and increase premiums on July 1, 1983, and on July 1, 1984, to a level which will result in premium revenues for each period beginning on such date equal to 25 percent of program costs for aged beneficiaries. The normal part B premium calculation and limitation would resume on July 1, 1985.

The measure will result in a projected monthly premium of $13.70 beginning July 1, 1983 (rather than the $13.10 projected under current law), and a monthly premium of $15.30 beginning July 1, 1984 (rather than $14.00 under current law).

6. Medicare reimbursement to hospitals.—

(a) Expansion of sec. 223 limits to include ancillary costs.—(i) The current sec. 223 limitation would be extended to include ancillary costs, applied on an average cost-per-case basis, and adjusted for case mix. In no case would reimbursement on a cost-per-case basis be reduced below the current allowable cost per case. The new limitation would be applicable to hospital cost reporting periods beginning on or after Oct. 1, 1982. For the 1st year, the limitation would be set at 120 percent of the mean for hospitals of the same type; for the 2nd year, the limitation would be 115 percent of the mean; and for the 3rd and subsequent years, the limitation would be 110 percent of the mean.

(ii) Appropriate adjustments would be required for the special needs of psychiatric hospitals and hospitals serving a significantly disproportionate number of low-income or medicare patients. Rural hospitals with less than 50 beds would be excluded. Other appropriate exemptions, exceptions, and adjustments would be required.

(b) Three-year rate of increase provision.—(i) A "target" reimbursement system would be established. The target rate would be the previous year's allowable operating costs per case (or, after 1 year, the previous year's target amount) increased by the percentage increase in the hospital wage and price index plus one percentage point. A hospital with operating costs below the target rate would be paid its costs plus a bonus of 50 percent of the savings (not to exceed 5 percent of the target rate); a hospital with costs above the target rate would be allowed 25 percent of its costs in excess of the target for the first 2 years; none of the excess would be reimbursed in the 3rd year. Provider payments under the target reimbursement system could not exceed the amount payable under the new sec. 223 limitations.

(ii) The Secretary of HHS would be required to provide for appropriate exemptions, exceptions, and adjustments.

(iii) The target reimbursement system would be applicable to a hospital's first three cost reporting periods beginning on or after Oct. 1, 1982, but cease upon implementation of a prospective payment system.

(c) Nonprofit hospitals that drop social security coverage for employees.—The act also provides that in the case of a hospital that terminates social security coverage for its employees on or after Aug. 16, 1982, the Secretary is directed to reduce medicare payments to the extent such payments would have been reduced had the hospital been subject to FICA taxes. If the hospital so requests, the Secretary would be authorized to offset against this reduction an amount equal to any pension and health costs the hospital demonstrates to the satisfaction of the Secretary that it has assumed in lieu of the FICA taxes it no longer pays with respect to its employees.

(d) Prospective payments for hospitals and skilled nursing facilities.—The Secretary would be required to develop, in consultation with the Senate Committee on Finance and the House Committee on Ways and Means, medicare prospective reimbursement proposals for hospitals, skilled nursing facilities and, to the extent feasible, other providers, and to report to the committees on the proposals within 5 months of the date of enactment.

(e) Recognition of State hospital cost control systems.—The Secretary would be authorized to provide, at the request of a State, that medicare hospital payments could be made under a hospital reimbursement control system in the State if, and so long as: (1) the system applies to substantially all non-Federal hospitals and at least 75 percent of hospital inpatient revenues in the State; (2) the system treats payors, hospital employees, and patients equitably; and (3) the Secretary is satisfied that it will not result in greater medicare expenditures over a 3-year period. In making this determination, the Secretary could recognize previous cost savings under the system. With respect to the authority provided to the Secretary under current law to establish and continue medicare demonstration projects, the Secretary would be prohibited from terminating a project for 6 months after he notifies the State of his decision to terminate.

7. Elimination of private room subsidy.—Medicare currently determines its payments to hospitals on the basis of the average costs for all its accommodations, including the additional costs of private rooms even though medicare generally is intended to cover only the costs of semi-private room accommodations. The act includes a provision that requires the Secretary to publish regulations which would eliminate the subsidy for the extra cost of private rooms.

8. Single reimbursement limits for skilled nursing facilities and home health agencies.—The act includes a provision which requires the Secretary to establish a single payment limit for hospital-based and freestanding skilled nursing facilities and a single payment limit for home health agencies on the basis of the cost experience of freestanding facilities.

The amendment would be effective with respect to home health agency cost reporting periods beginning on or after the date of enactment and for skilled nursing facility cost reporting periods beginning on or after Oct. 1, 1982.

9. Elimination of duplicate payments for outpatient services.—The act includes a provision which requires the Secretary of Health and Human Services to issue requlations that would eliminate the duplicate payment of overhead expenses from the charges of a physician who performs services in a hospital's outpatient department.

The amendment would be effective with respect to charges for services rendered on or after the date of enactment.

10. Audit and medical claims review.—The act includes a provision which requires that the medicare contractor budgets for fiscal years 1983, 1984, and 1985 be supplemented by $45 million in each year to be spent for contractor audit and medical review activities.

11. Temporary delay in periodic interim payments.—Under present law, hospitals may receive payments for services rendered to beneficiaries on the basis of periodic interim payments (PIP) that result in an average 3-week lag between the rendering of service and the receipt of payment.

The act includes a provision which temporarily changes the periodic interim payment procedure by providing for a delay in the flow of PIP payments during September 1984. A similar deferral is authorized during September 1984.

12. Reimbursement of assistants at surgery.—The act includes a provision which prohibits reasonable charge reimbursement for an assistant at surgery in hospitals where an approved training program exists in the specialty, except under the following exceptional circumstances: (1) the service is complex and requires performance by a team of physicians; (2) the patient has multiple conditions which require the presence of and active care by a physician of another specialty during an operation; (3) exceptional medical circumstances; and (4) other exceptional circumstances as determined by the Secretary.

The provision is effective with respect to services performed on or after Oct. 1, 1982.

13. Prohibition of payment for ineffective drugs.—The act includes a provision implementing sec. 2103 of the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1981 which prohibits the use of Federal funds under medicare part B and under medicaid to pay for certain less-than-effective drugs.

14. Health maintenance organizations and other competitive medical plans.—Health Maintenance Organizations (HMO's) are reimbursed by medicare according to the authority established in sec. 1876 of the Social Security Act. Sec. 1876 defines an HMO and provides for interim monthly capitation payments according to cost or, for mature HMO's, on a risk basis.

The act amends sec. 1876 by authorizing prospective reimbursement under risk-sharing contracts for competitive medical plans at a rate equal to 95 percent of the adjusted average per capita costs. Eligible plans (defined as either federally qualified HMO's or plans meeting specified requirements) would be required to provide all medicare services; additional nonoptional services would have to be approved by the Secretary. HMO's or plans eligible for risk-based reimbursement would be required to have at least 5,000 members (although the Secretary could waive the requirement for rural entities). Further, the Secretary would have to be satisfied that the entity had the capacity to bear the financial risks. Any plan savings must be used for the provision of additional benefits or services or a reduction in premiums, deductibles, or copayments. The act also requires the enrollment of two medicare beneficiaries who are not members of an HMO in order to convert one medicare beneficiary to risk-based reimbursement.

15. Technical corrections relating to medicare.—The act includes a provision making miscellaneous technical corrections to the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1981 (P.L. 97-35).

16. Hospice care.— In general, medicare does not cover hospice care, although certain hospice-type services may be reimbursed when provided by hospitals, physicians, etc.

The act includes a provision which authorizes coverage for hospice care for a terminally ill beneficiary with a life expectancy of 6 months or less. A beneficiary could elect to receive hospice care in lieu of most other benefits except those of the attending physician (if not employed by the hospice). The hospice benefit period would consist of 2 periods of 90 days and 1 period of 30 days. Benefits provided would include nursing care, therapies, medical social services, homemaker-home health aide services, physicians' services, short-term inpatient care, and outpatient drugs for pain relief. Five percent copayments would be levied on respite care services and drugs. Hospices would be established as a separate provider category under medicare. Reimbursement would be based on reasonable costs subject to a limit equal to 40 percent of the average medicare per capita expenditure during the last 6 months of life for beneficiaries dying of cancer. The provision is effective for the period Nov. 1, 1983, through Sept. 30, 1986.

17. Coverage of extended care services without regard to 3-day prior hospitalization requirement.—The act includes a provision which authorizes the Secretary of HHS to eliminate the 3-day prior hospital stay requirement for skilled nursing facility coverage at such time as, through reimbursement changes or other adjustments, he determines that such action will not lead to an increase in program costs and that it will not alter the acute care nature of the benefit.

18. Medicare coverage of, and application of hospital insurance tax to, Federal employment.—The provision included in the act with respect to application of the hospital insurance tax to Federal employment appears under items relating to revenue.

19. Prohibiting recognition of payments under percentage arrangements.—The act includes a provision requiring that, with respect to all providers, no cost incurred under a contract would be considered reasonable if determined as a percentage (or other proportion) of the provider's reimbursement. The provision would not apply where costs incurred under a percentage arrangement were subject to the limitation on reimbursement of provider-based physicians established elsewhere in the act.

Further, the provision would not apply to a percentage contract that is reasonable and where such contract is a customary commercial business practice or provides incentives for the efficient and economical operation of the provider of services. The provision generally applies upon enactment.

20. Interest charges on overpayments and underpayments.—The act includes a provision which requires interest payments with respect to medicare overpayments. Similarly, the medicare program would be required to pay providers interest on underpayments.

The provision would be effective with respect to a final determination made on or after the date of enactment.

21. Prohibiting payment for Hill-Burton free care.—The act includes a provision which requires the Secretary to provide, by regulation, that the cost incurred by a hospital or SNF in complying with its free care obligation under the Hill-Burton Act would not be considered reasonable for purposes of medicare reimbursement.

The provision is effective for costs incurred on or after the date of enactment.

22. Prohibiting payment for anti-unionization activities.—The act includes a provision which prohibits medicare reimbursement for costs incurred for activities directly related to influencing employees respecting unionization. The provision would apply to costs incurred on or after the date of enactment.

23. Eliminating "lesser of cost or charges" provision.—Under present law, payment for services furnished by providers is limited to the lower of the provider's customary charge or the reasonable cost of the service. The act includes a provision which requires that the lesser of cost or charges provision of current law would not apply to a class of providers if the Secretary determines and certifies to Congress that elimination of the provision will not increase medicare payments to that class of providers.

The provision would be effective on the date the Secretary specifies in his certification to Congress.

24. Extending medicare proficiency examination authority.—The act includes a provision that would extend to Sept. 30, 1983, the authority of the Secretary of HHS to conduct a program to determine the proficiency of health care personnel, including clinical lab personnel, who do not meet certain formal education requirements.

25. Retroactivity of regulations regarding access to books and records.—Sec. 952 of P.L. 97-499, the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1980, allows the Secretary of HHS or the Comptroller General to have access to the books and records of subcontractors who supply hospitals or other providers with goods and services valued at $10,000 or more over a 12-month period. The act includes a provision requiring the Secretary to prescribe in regulations the procedures and criteria to be used in obtaining access to the appropriate books, documents, and records. The regulations have yet to be proposed.

The provision includes language which would prohibit the regulations from being applied retroactively unless such regulations are issued in final form prior to Jan. 1, 1983, preceded by a comment period of not less than 60 days.

26. Private sector utilization review.—The act includes a statutory provision which would require the Secretary of HHS to undertake an initiative to improve medical review by intermediaries and carriers under medicare and to encourage similar review efforts by private insurers and other private entities. The initiative would include the development of specific standards for measuring the performance of intermediaries and carriers with respect to the identification and reduction of unnecessary utilization of health services.

27. Special part B enrollment without penalty.—The act includes a provision requiring a special open enrollment period under medicare during which time merchant seamen, whose free health care coverage under the Public Health Service Act was eliminated in 1981, could enroll without being required to pay a late penalty.

28. Establishment of utilization and quality control peer review program.—The act includes a provision which repeals the existing Professional Standards Review Organization (PSRO) program and requires the Secretary to enter into contracts for utilization and quality control peer review. The Secretary would also be required to consolidate geographic areas previously established for PSRO's.

The provision requires the Secretary to enter into contracts with peer review organizations for an initial period of 2 years, renewable biennially. The organizations must be composed of, or have available to them, a substantial number of licensed doctors of medicine or osteopathy actually practicing in the area. Priority consideration must be given to physician-sponsored organizations who are representative of the physicians in the area. Payor and provider organizations would be excluded from consideration during the first 12 months that contract applications are considered.

Review organizations, which can be proprietary or nonprofit, may review the professional activities of physicians, other practitioners and institutional and noninstitutional providers in providing services to medicare beneficiaries subject to the provisions of these contracts. The review will focus on (1) the necessity and reasonableness of care, (2) quality of care, and (3) the appropriateness of the setting.

The provision includes language which (a) prohibit contracts with provider or provider-affiliated organizations; and (b) provide that contract termination procedures would not apply to contract nonrenewals.

The provision exempts review organizations from the Freedom of Information Act and establishes disclosure rules for such organizations with a modification which would: (a) Require the review organization to disclose to the appropriate State agency information identifying a particular practitioner or provider when, in the organization's judgment, there is reason to believe that a risk to the public health exists; and (b) require the review organization to disclose information to a State or Federal fraud or abuse agency or an authorized State licensure or certification agency, at the request of such agency on a case-by-case basis. This information could include institution or practitioner-specific data.

The provision includes language which prohibits the Secretary from terminating an operating PSRO until such time as the Secretary has entered into a contract with a review organization under this provision.

The provision requires the Secretary to report to the Congress annually information on the efficiency of payment methodologies used by the Secretary in contracting with review organizations.

B. MEDICAID

1. Copayments by medicaid recipients.—States would be authorized to impose nominal copayments on all services and all beneficiaries. The following would be exempted from all copayments: (a) children under 18 (States at their option could exempt children up to 21); (b) pregnant women for services related to pregnancy (or, at State option, all services); (c) patients in skilled nursing and intermediate care facilities and other medical institutions; (d) cash assistance recipients enrolled in an HMO (and, at State option, all medicaid enrollees in an HMO); (e) emergency services; and (f) family planning services.

The Secretary would be authorized to waive the requirement that copayments be nominal in the case of nonemergency services delivered at emergency rooms, but only if alternative sources of care were actually available and accessible to the beneficiaries subject to such charges. Providers participating in the program would not be allowed to deny care or services due to inability of a beneficiary to pay the copayment.

2. Modifications in lien provisions.—The act allows States to impose liens on the homes of medicaid beneficiaries who the State determines, after notice and opportunity for hearing, are reasonably likely to remain in a nursing home for the rest of their lives. However, the States

(a) may not impose a lien so long as the beneficiary's spouse, or disabled or dependent child, is living in the home;

(b) may not impose a lien so long as the beneficiary's sibling is living in the home, if the sibling has any equity interest in the home and if the sibling has been living in the home continuously since at least 1 year prior to the beneficiary's admission to the nursing home; and

(c) may not execute the lien and foreclose on the property so long as the beneficiary's adult child or sibling (without equity interest) is living in the home. In order to qualify for this protection, the adult child must have lived in the home continuously since at least 2 years prior to the beneficiary's admission to the nursing home and show that he or she provided care that helped the beneficiary postpone nursing home admission. The sibling with no equity interest must have lived in the home continuously since at least 1 year prior to the beneficiary's institutionalization.

A related amendment to the SSI program has the effect of exempting burial spaces and certain burial policies, up to $1,500, from an individual's resources for purposes of determining medicaid eligibility in most States.

3. Limitation on Federal matching payments for erroneous medicaid expenditures.—The act establishes a 3 percent target error rate for State medicaid expenditures, effective Apr. 1, 1983. States with eligibility error rates above this level will be subject to matching penalties for the excess errors. In computing erroneous payments, the Secretary is instructed to exclude all technical errors and, in the case of errors relating to resources, to count only the smaller of the amount of medical assistance provided or the amount by which the miscalculation of the resource exceeded the allowable resource level. The Secretary is given the discretion to waive fiscal penalties, in whole or in part, to States which have made good faith efforts to meet the target.

4. Medicaid coverage of home care for certain disabled children.—States are allowed to provide medicaid coverage to disabled children under 18 who would be eligible for SSI, and therefore medicaid, if he or she were in a nursing home or hospital, or other medical institution. This medicaid coverage is only available where: (a) the child requires the level of care provided in an institution; (b) it is medically appropriate to provide the care at home; and (c) the estimated cost of care at home is not greater than the cost of care in the institution.

5. Medicaid funding in American Samoa.—Federal medicaid matching payments, up to a maximum of $750,000 per year, are authorized for the territory of American Samoa. The matching rate is set at 50 percent of the territory's expenditures. The Secretary is authorized to waive all program requirements that are inconsistent with the unique circumstances of the health system in American Samoa other than those relating to covered services.

6. Nursing home deregulation moratorium.—The Department of HHS is prohibited from implementing any changes in current regulations relating to participation and certification requirements for nursing homes under medicare and medicaid for 6 months from the date of enactment. This will give the Secretary the opportunity to review proposed changes in protections for nursing home residents with the Congress and other interested parties.

C. AID TO FAMILIES WITH DEPENDENT CHILDREN

Rounding of AFDC eligibility and benefit amounts.—The act requires States to round both their AFDC standards and actual monthly benefit amounts to the lower whole dollar.

Prorate first month's benefit based on date of application.—The act requires States to pay benefits beginning no earlier than the date an application is filed. The benefit amount would be prorated based on the date of application.

Eliminate military service as basis for AFDC eligibility.—The act excludes parental absence based solely on military duty as a basis for need. However, if the parent has left the home for other reasons and is not providing support, the family may still be eligible for assistance. In this case, as provided in present law, the custodial parent would have to assign to the State any rights to child support which have accrued.

Job search.—The act permits States to require AFDC applicants and recipients to participate in a program of employment search beginning at the time of application. States exercising this option may limit participation to certain groups or classes of individuals who are required to register for WIN and the provision permits the State to shorten the duration of the sanction period. Transportation and other necessary costs incurred by participants must be paid and States would receive 50 percent Federal matching funds for transportation and other services. An initial 8-week search period is allowed plus an additional 8-week period in each year (which could add up to 16 weeks in the 1st year). States may not use the job search requirement as a reason for delaying eligibility determinations or making payments to those otherwise eligible.

Prorating shelter and utilities for AFDC families which share households.—The act allows States to adjust the AFDC benefit when the AFDC family shares a household with other individuals. (States could not prorate in the case of an SSI recipient to whom a one-third benefit reduction applies.) States would be authorized to prorate, on a reasonable basis, the portion of the AFDC grant which the State designates for shelter and utilities. In States which elect this option, the State would be free to design the method of proration and the circumstances in which proration would be applied. The Secretary is authorized to prescribe broad guidelines for States which use this option.

Reduce Federal match for errors.—The act limits the Federal match for erroneous benefit payments in the AFDC program to 4 percent in fiscal year 1983, and 3 percent in fiscal years 1984 and 1985. The imposition of fiscal sanctions would be applied on a retrospective basis. The Secretary of HHS may exercise waiver authority in cases deemed appropriate.

Retrospective accounting option.—The act allows States the option of excluding from calculations of AFDC benefit amounts any payments made solely from State funds that are designed to compensate for lost income in the period before the new benefits amount can be calculated.

WIN demonstration authority.—The act reopens the option for States to operate work incentive (WIN) demonstration programs. A provision of the 1981 Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act authorized the States, at their option, to operate 3-year work incentive demonstration programs. However, the State had to declare its intention to operate such a demonstration program within 60 days of enactment of the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act. The act would reopen this option for the States for an additional 2 years. The requirements and regulations which applied to the earlier WIN demonstration program would apply to the extension.

Exclusion from income of certain State payments.—The act allows States to continue to exclude from countable income, both in the month of receipt and in future months, certain special payments made by a State to children in AFDC households.

D. SOCIAL SERVICES

Technical amendments to Title XX social services and foster care program.—The act makes technical corrections to social services and foster care provisions of P.L. 97-35.

E. CHILD SUPPORT ENFORCEMENT

Collection of administrative costs for non-AFDC child support enforcement.—The act repeals the provisions enacted in P.L. 97-35 which would require States, in cases involving non-AFDC families, to charge any absent parent who is obligated to pay child support through the State child support enforcement agency a fee equal to 10 percent of the child support payment. The act restores the law in effect prior to P.L. 97-35 which allows States to charge a reasonable fee for a non-AFDC collection and retain from the amount collected an amount equal to administrative costs not covered by the fee. The act also retains, as a State option, the authority to collect from the parent who owed child or spousal support an amount to cover administrative costs, in addition to the child support payment.

Allotments for child and spousal support by members of the Armed Forces.—The act requires allotments from the pay and allowances of any member of the uniformed services, on active duty, when he or she fails to make child (or minor and spousal) support payments. The requirement would arise when the member failed to make support payments in an amount at least equivalent to the value of 2 months' worth of support. Provisions of the Consumer Credit Protection Act would apply so that the percentage of the servicemember's pay subject to allotment would be limited. In addition, the servicemember would be given an opportunity to consult a judge advocate or other law specialist.

Reimbursement of State agency.—The act would allow States to reimburse themselves from the amount of support collected for AFDC that was already paid on the final month of eligibility. Thus, the family would not receive double payment for the same month, first in the form of AFDC and then through receipt of the proceeds of the support collection.

Reduction in Federal matching for State child support costs.—The act reduces the Federal matching rate for State costs of operating the child support enforcement program. Effective Oct. 1, 1982, the rate will be reduced from 75 to 70 percent. Effective Oct. 1, 1983, all matching will be eliminated for costs incurred by State and local courts in connection with the CSE program. In addition, the provision reduces State CSE incentive payments from 15 to 12 percent, effective Oct. 1, 1983.

Technical amendments to child support enforcement program.—The act makes several technical corrections in the child support enforcement provisions contained in P.L. 97-35, including the correction of inaccurate references.

F. SUPPLEMENTAL SECURITY INCOME (SSI)

Prorate 1st month's benefit based upon date of application.—The act prorates the 1st month's SSI benefit from the date of application or the date of eligibility, whichever is later. The provision would also apply to the month in which an individual reapplies after a period of ineligibility.

Round SSI eligibility and benefit amounts.—The act rounds SSI monthly benefit and income eligibility amounts to the next lower dollar. Rounding would take place after the cost-of-living adjustment is made.

Coordination of SSI and OASDI cost-of-living adjustment.—The act coordinates the cost-of-living increases in SSI and social security (OASDI). At the time the cost-of-living adjustment is made, the recipient's SSI benefit would be based on his or her social security payment in the same month, rather than in the second preceding month. In addition, whenever the Secretary determines that there is reliable information on a recipient's income or resources in a given month, the SSI benefit would be based on that information. The Secretary would be required to prescribe by regulation the circumstances in which information concerning a future event could be used to determine the monthly SSI benefit.

Phase out of hold harmless protection.—The act continues the phase out of hold harmless payments as follows: Hold harmless payments would be reduced to 40 percent of what they would otherwise be in 1983, to 20 percent in 1984, with no hold harmless payments made in 1985 and years thereafter.

Exclusion from resources of amounts set aside for burial expenses.—The act, for the purposes of determining SSI eligibility, excludes from countable resources burial spaces for an individual or members of his immediate family (subject to limits prescribed by the Secretary). Burial funds of up to $1,500 each for the individual and his or her spouse would also be excluded if specifically set aside for this purpose. Such funds would reduce the value of excludable life insurance policies. In addition, the $1,500 limit would be reduced by any amounts held by the individual in an irrevocable burial contract or other arrangements made to meet burial expenses. The Secretary would be authorized to periodically raise the $1,500 limit as may be necessary.

SSI passthrough requirement.—The act allows a State to shift from the aggregate spending option to the State supplementation payment level option. A State could not decrease its State supplementation payment below the level in the previous December.

Treatment of unnegotiated SSI checks.—The act clarifies the authority to credit States for unnegotiated SSI benefit checks which are "State supplementation only" checks.

G. UNEMPLOYMENT COMPENSATION

Rounding of unemployment benefits.—The act provides that the Federal 50 percent matching share of extended unemployment benefits would not be available on that part of extended unemployment benefit payments which result from a failure on the part of the State to have a benefit structure in which benefits are rounded down to the next lower dollar.

Reed Act funds.—The act extends for 10 years the authority for States to use Reed Act funds for administrative purposes. The act also permits States that have used such funds to pay unemployment benefits to reestablish a Reed Act account.

Exclusion from FUTA of wages paid to student interns.—The act exempts from FUTA tax any wages paid to a student enrolled full time in a work-study or internship program, regardless of age, for work that is an integral part of the student's academic program. In addition, the act exempts from FUTA, for tax year 1983 only, the wages paid by certain summer camps to employees who are full-time students.

Extension of exclusion from FUTA of wages paid to certain alien farmworkers.—The act extends for 2 years, from Jan. 1, 1982, to Jan. 1, 1984, the provision of prior law that excluded wages paid to certain alien farmworkers from FUTA wages.

Unemployment compensation financing.—The act increases the Federal unemployment tax (FUTA) wage base from $6,000 to $7,000 and increases the FUTA rate from 3.4 to 3.5 percent effective Jan. 1, 1983. (Employers in States with approved State programs will continue to receive the 2.7 percent offset credit under current law, so that the standard net Federal tax would be 0.8 percent.) Effective Jan. 1, 1985, the FUTA tax rate is increased to 6.2 percent (a permanent tax of 6.0 percent and a temporary extended benefit tax of 0.2 percent) with a credit of 5.4 percent. States that, under current State law, allow certain specified industries to pay a nonexperience based State unemployment tax rate that is below 5.4 percent could provide for such industries to gradually reach the new 5.4 standard tax rate. Annual increases in the State unemployment tax rate for such industries to could be limited to no less than 20 percent of the difference between the current rate paid by an employer and 5.4 percent.

The act also:

(a) Allocates 60 percent of total FUTA revenues to the Employment Security Administration (ESAA) and 40 percent to the extended unemployment compensation (EUCA) accounts in the Federal Unemployment Trust Fund. Amounts allocated to EUCA which exceed the Federal share of extended benefit expenditures will be used to repay Federal general revenue advances. Upon repayment of the Federal general revenue advances to EUCA (and elimination of the 0.2 percent temporary tax), 90, percent of FUTA revenues will be allocated to ESAA and 10 percent to EUCA, as under current law;

(b) Permits States to make debt repayments out of their State trust fund accounts in lieu of further FUTA credit reductions provided the payments come from new funds generated through the State experience-rating system and/or benefit reductions;

(c) Drops the present law additional credit reductions in the 5th year of delinquent State loans so that credit reductions continue at an additional 0.3 percent each year; and

(d) Allows a State, under certain conditions, to reduce payments of interest on Federal unemployment loans to 25 percent of the amount due in any year, and thereby extend the payment of the total interest obligation over a 4-year period. (Interest would be charged on any deferral amount.)

Treatment of certain employees of institutions of higher education.—The act allows States to deny unemployment compensation benefits to nonteaching, nonresearch, and nonadministrative employees of colleges and universities during periods between academic years or terms, if there is a reasonable assurance that the individual will be employed by the institution at the beginning of the forthcoming academic year or term. The act makes retroactive unemployment benefits payable to employees of institutions of higher education, elementary, or secondary schools, who were reasonably assured of employment in the new school term, but subsequently were not offered reemployment. Such retroactive benefits may be provided only for weeks during the between-term or recess period for which a timely claim for benefits was filed and, except for the between-terms denial, unemployment benefits would have been payable.

Short-time compensation.—The act directs the Department of Labor to develop model legislation that can be used by States that wish to establish short-time compensation (or worksharing) programs. The Department of Labor is directed to evaluate the operation and impact of any such programs implemented by the States and report its findings to Congress no later than Oct. 1, 1985.

TITLES II, III, AND IV: REVENUE MEASURES

A. INDIVIDUAL INCOME TAX PROVISIONS[1]

1. Individual minimum tax (sec. 201 of the act)

Repeal of add-on tax. Under present law, a 15-percent add-on minimum tax is imposed on the sum of six tax preferences in excess of the greater of one-half the regular income tax paid or $10,000 (code sec. 56). The act repeals the add-on tax for individuals.

Revision of alternative tax. Individuals are also subject under present law to an alternative minimum tax, payable to the extent it exceeds regular tax (sec. 55). The tax applies to taxable income increased by the deduction for long-term capital gains and by excess itemized deductions. The foreign tax credit is allowed, and credits attributable to an active trade or business are allowed to the extent that tax is not attributable to net capital gains or to itemized deductions included in the minimum tax base.

Under present law, the alternative minimum tax base is subject to the following rates: $0 to $20,000, no tax; $20,000 to $60,000, 10 percent; and over $60,000, 20 percent,

The act provides that the alternative minimum tax base will equal adjusted gross income plus specified preferences, minus specified itemized deductions. A flat 20-percent tax is imposed on the excess of this base over an exemption amount. The exemption is $30,000 for unmarried individuals; $40,000 for married persons filing a joint return or a surviving spouse; and $20,000 for a married person filing a separate return, a trust, or an estate. The foreign tax credit, but not other nonrefundable credits, is allowed against the tax.

The specified preferences to be added to adjusted gross income include:

(1) The preferences presently included under the add-on minimum tax (other than the deduction for amortization of child care facilities);

(2) The deduction for long-term capital gains;

(3) Interest and dividend income excluded under the $100 dividend exclusion, the All-Savers exclusion, and the 15-percent net interest exclusion (which takes effect after 1984);

(4) The excess of expensing over 10-year amortization for mining exploration and development costs, research and development costs, and magazine circulation expenditures; and

(5) The "spread" on the exercise of an incentive stock option.

The following "below-the-line" deductions are allowed to the extent allowable against the regular tax:

(1) Charitable contributions;

(2) Medical expenses (in excess of 10 percent of adjusted gross income);

(3) Casualty and wagering losses;

(4) Personal housing interest;

(5) Other interest to the extent of net investment income; and

(6) Estate taxes (sec. 691(c)). The net operating loss deduction is generally reduced by items of tax preference.

Net income taken into account, directly or indirectly, from a limited partnership interest or an interest in a subchapter S corporation (in the case of a person who does not participate in the management of the corporation) is investment income for the purposes of the net investment income limitation on the interest deduction. Interest on indebtedness incurred to acquire or carry such an interest is treated as "below-the-line" interest for purposes of the minimum tax and therefore subject to the net investment income limitation on the interest deduction.

An election is provided for individuals to amortize mining exploration and development costs, circulation expenditures, and research and experimental expenditures, for purposes of the regular tax and minimum tax, over a 10-year period beginning with the year the expenditure occurs. If this election is made, the item will not be treated as an item of tax preference. With respect to tangible drilling costs, limited partners may elect 10-year amortization. For other individuals with intangible drilling costs, an election to take 5-year ACRS and the investment tax credit is provided.

[1] Title VI of the act (Federal supplemental compensation program) contains a provision (sec. 611) which modifies the taxation of unemployment compensation benefits. Under present law, unemployment compensation benefits are subject to Federal income taxation if the sum of adjusted gross income, the deduction for 2-earner married couples, certain disability income, and unemployment compensation exceeds a base amount (sec. 85). If there is an excess, the taxpayer must include in gross income an amount of unemployment compensation equal to one-half of the excess of this sum over the base amount.

Section 611 of the act lowers the base amount from $25,000 to $18,000 for taxpayers filing a joint return, and from $20,000 to $12,000 for other taxpayers. (In the case of married taxpayers who file separately, the base amount remains zero.) This provision is effective for payments of unemployment compensation made after Dec. 31, 1981, in taxable years ending after that date. Taxpayers are not to be penalized for underpayment of estimated taxes attributable to employment compensation which is received during 1982 and which, except for this provision, would not be included in gross income.

The provision generally applies to taxable years beginning after Dec. 31, 1982. Pre-1983 net operating loss preferences continue to be subject to the add-on tax when used, as under present law.

2. Medical expense deduction (sec. 202 of the act)

Under the act, three changes are made in the itemized deduction for medical expenditures (sec. 213).

First, the separate deduction for one-half of health insurance premiums up to $150 is eliminated. Second, the floor for deductible medical expenses is raised from 3 percent to 5 percent of adjusted gross income. These first two provisions are effective for taxable years beginning after Dec. 31, 1982. Third, effective for taxble years beginning after Dec. 31, 1983, the 1-percent floor on deductibility of drug expenditures is eliminated. The only drug expenditures which will be eligible for the deduction will be expenditures for drugs which legally require a prescription or for insulin.

3. Casualty loss deduction (sec. 203 of the act)

Under present law, individuals who itemize deductions may deduct unreimbursed losses of nonbusiness property resulting from fire, storm, shipwreck, or other casualty, or from theft (sec. 165). For any one casualty, the deduction is allowed only to the extent that the amount of the loss exceeds $100.

Under the act, nonbusiness casualty losses are deductible only to the extent total losses sustained during the year exceed 10 percent of adjusted gross income. As under present law, each casualty loss is eligible for deductibility only to the extent it exceeds $100.

This provision applies to taxable years beginning after Dec. 31, 1982, and to the taxpayer's last taxable year beginning before Jan. 1, 1983, for a taxpayer who elects to take into account a disaster loss in such a taxable year.

B. BUSINESS TAX PROVISIONS

1. Corporate tax preferences (sec. 204 of the act)

Under present law, corporations must pay a minimum tax on certain tax preferences (sec. 56), in addition to the corporation's regular tax. The amount of the minimum tax is 15 percent of the corporation's tax preferences in excess of the greater of the regular income tax paid or $10,000.

The tax preference items included in this base of the minimum tax for corporations are:

(1) Accelerated depreciation on real property in excess of straight-line depreciation over the useful life or recovery period;

(2) Amortization of certified pollution control facilities (the excess of 60-month amortization over depreciation otherwise allowable);

(3) In the case of certain financial institutions, the excess of the bad debt deductions over the amount of those deductions computed on the basis of actual experience;

(4) Percentage depletion in excess of the adjusted basis of the property;

(5) 1⅝₆ of the corporation's net capital gain; and

(6) Amortization of child care facilities (the excess of 60-month amortization over depreciation otherwise allowable).

Cutback in certain preferences. The act provides for a 15-percent cutback in certain corporate tax preferences.

The changes, which apply to all corporations other than subchapter S corporations, are as follows:

(a) In the case of iron ore and coal (including lignite), 15 percent of the depletion otherwise allowable in excess of basis is not allowed as a deduction.

(b) The bad debt reserve deduction is reduced by 15 percent of the amount by which the otherwise allowable deduction exceeds the amount which would have been allowable on the basis of actual experience.

(c) In the case of a financial institution, 15 percent of the otherwise allowable interest deduction for debt incurred or continued to purchase tax-exempt obligations acquired after 1982. Other provisions

(d) The deemed dividend distribution by a domestic international sales corporation (DISC) to a corporate shareholder is increased by 15 percent, to 57⅓ percent of certain taxable income.

(e) The amount treated as ordinary income on the sale of section 1250 property (real estate) by a corporation is increased by 15 percent of the additional amount which would be ordinary income if the property were subject to recapture under sec. 1245. Special rules apply to capital gain distributions of REITS.

(f) 15 percent of the basis of pollution control facilities to which an election under sec. 169 applies is treated as if the election did not apply.

(g) In the case of an integrated oil company, 15 percent of the amount otherwise allowable as a deduction for intangible drilling costs under sec. 263(c) is capitalized to the oil, gas, or geothermal property and amortized over a 36-month period.

(h) 15 percent of the deductions for mining exploration and development costs otherwise allowable under secs. 616(a) and 617 to a corporation are capitalized and treated as recovery property assigned to the 5-year class. ACRS deductions and the investment tax credit are made available. The deductions and the credit are subject to recapture in accordance with the usual recapture rules.

(i) The preference for child care facilities is deleted.

Only 71.6 percent of the items subject to a cutback will be treated as items of tax preference under the add-on minimum tax for corporations.

Effective dates. The provisions generally apply to taxable years beginning after Dec. 31, 1982. However, the provision relating to deductions under secs. 263(c), 616, and 617 applies to property placed in service after that date; the provision relating to sec. 1250 property applies to dispositions after that date; and the provision relating to depletion applies to taxable years beginning after Dec. 31, 1983.

2. Basis adjustment for investment tax credits (sec. 205(a) of the act)

Cost recovery deductions under present law are allowed for 100 percent of the cost of a depreciable asset, including property for which the regular, energy, or historic structure rehabilitation investment tax credits are allowed. Basis is reduced by the full amount of rehabilitation credits except that no basis reduction is required for the credit for qualified rehabilitation of historic structures. Lessors may elect to pass through investment credits to lessees, in which case lessees are treated as having purchased the asset for fair market value for purposes of computing the credit.

Basis adjustment. The act provides that a taxpayer is required to reduce the basis of assets by 50 percent of the amount of regular, energy, and certified historic structure investment tax credits. This applies to credits claimed on qualified progress expenditures as well as on ordinary credits. A deduction also is allowed for one-half of unused credits in the year in which they expire. The reduction in basis is subject to recapture as ordinary income under the usual depreciation recapture rules (secs. 1245 and 1250). The basis adjsutment is not taken into account in determining earnings and profits.

Taxpayers are given an election under the act with respect to the regular investment credit on recovery property to elect a 2-percentage point reduction in the credit. The election is made property-by-property. A taxpayer who makes this election does not have to make a basis adjustment. In the case of partnerships, the election is made at the partnership level.

Treatment of lessees. When lessors elect to pass through the investment credit to lessees under sec. 48(d), the lessor does not have to make a basis adjustment. Instead, the lessee includes in income ratably over the ACRS recovery period for the property an amount equal to one-half of the credit allowable. Lessees are eligible to elect the 2-percentage point reduction for the regular investment credit, in which case they are not required to include this in income. If the credit is recaptured, the income inclusions will be adjusted, in accordance with Treasury requlations, to take account of the amount of the credit recaptured.

Effective date. The provision applies to property placed in service after Dec. 31, 1982, other than property (which is not public utility property, property subject to a safe-harbor lease, or a rehabilitated building) placed in service before Jan. 1, 1986, for which a contract was entered into after Aug. 13, 1981, and was binding on July 1, 1982, and at all times thereafter. For property placed in service after 1982 which is not covered by the transition rule, qualified progress expenditures and expenditures for property constructed by the taxpayer incurred before 1983 are not subject to the new rules.

In the case of an integrated manufacturing facility where there were binding contracts, or where construction by the taxpayer was carried out with respect to more than 20 percent of the cost of the facility between Aug. 13, 1981, and July 2, 1982, and where the on-site construction began before July 1, 1982, property eligible for the credit in the facility will qualify for the transition rule if the property is placed in service before Jan. 1, 1986.

The basis adjustment does not apply for rehabilitation of certified historic structures if there is a contract to rehabilitate the property which was entered into after Dec. 31, 1980, and was binding on July 1, 1982, and at all times thereafter or if rehabilitation began between Dec. 31, 1980, and July 1, 1982, as long as the building is placed in service before Jan. 1, 1986. Rehabilitations of certified historic structures placed in service before July 1, 1984, are exempt if Securities and Exchange Commission filings and HUD sec. 8 applications with respect to those structures were made before July 1, 1982.

3. Investment tax credit limitation (sec. 205(b) of the act)

The investment tax credit earned by a taxpayer can be used under present law to reduce tax liability up to certain limits. Except for the energy tax credit, the limit for taxable years ending after 1981 is $25,000 plus 90 percent of the tax liability in excess of $25,000. Unused credits for a taxable year may be carried back to each of the 3 taxable years preceding the unused credit year, and then carried forward to each of the 15 following taxable years.

Under the act, the amount of income tax liability (in excess of $25,000) that may be offset by the investment tax credit (other than the energy tax credit) is reduced from 90 percent to 85 percent, effective for taxable years beginning after Dec. 31, 1982.

4. Accelerated depreciation—1985 and 1986 (sec. 206 of the act)

For 1981-84, cost recovery schedules for equipment reflect the 150-percent declining balance method with a switch to the straight-line method. Under present law, the schedules would accelerate in 1985 to reflect the 175-percent declining balance method with a switch to the sum-of-the-years-digits method. In 1986, they would accelerate further to reflect the 200-percent declining balance method with a switch to the sum-of-the-years-digits method.

Under the act, the 1985 and 1986 acceleration of depreciation schedules is repealed.

5. Construction period interest and taxes (sec. 207 of the act)

Under present law, corporations other than personal holding companies and subchapter S corporations are permitted to deduct currently construction period interest and taxes. However, individuals, personal holding companies, and subchapter S corporations are required to capitalize construction period interest and taxes for the construction of real property other than low-income housing (sec. 189).

Under the act, all corporations are required to capitalize construction period interest and taxes for nonresidential real property.

The act applies to interest and taxes incurred in taxable years beginning after 1982 with respect to construction begun after 1982. The act does not apply, however, to the Alaska Natural Gas Transportation System. In addition, the act does not apply to the construction of hotels, motels, hospitals, or nursing homes if construction begins before 1984 pursuant to a written plan of the the taxpayer existing on July 1, 1982, and if the taxpayer has requested in writing approval for construction from a governmental body.

6. Leasing rules (secs. 208–210 of the act)

a. Non-safe harbor leases—Overview.— Prior to the enactment of the Economic Recovery Tax Act of 1981 (ERTA), the law contained rules to determine who owns an item of property for tax purposes when the property is subject to an agreement which the parties characterize as a lease. These rules, which evolved over the years through a series of court cases and revenue rulings and revenue procedures issued by the Internal Revenue Service, still apply to transactions that are not governed by the safe-harbor rules. Essentially, outside the safe harbor provided by ERTA, the law is that the economic substance of a transaction, not its form, determines who is the owner of the property for tax purposes. Lease transactions cannot be used solely for the purpose of transferring tax benefits.

Rev. Proc. 75–21 and subsequent revenue procedures provide the following objective guidelines for determining non-safe harbor lease treatment of leveraged leases of equipment.

1. Lessor's minimum investment.—The lessor must have a minimum 20 percent unconditional at-risk investment in the property.

2. Lessee's investment.—Neither the lessee nor a party related to the lessee may furnish any part of the cost of the property.

3. Lessee loans or guarantees.—The lessee may not lend to the lessor any of the funds necessary to purchase the property or guarantee any lessor loan.

4. Purchase options.—The lessee may not have an option to purchase the property at the end of the lease term unless the option can be exercised only at fair market value (determined at the time of exercise). In addition, the lessor cannot have a contractural right to require the lessee or any other party to purchase the property, even at fair market value (i.e., a put).

5. Lessor profit and cash flow.—The lessor must expect to receive a profit and positive cash flow from the transaction independent of tax benefits.

6. Limited use property.—Under Rev. Proc. 76–30, property that can be used only by the lessee (limited use property) is not eligible for lease treatment.

The act generally retains these present law rules. However, the act modifies these rules for agreements that are referred to as finance leases under the act. For finance leases entered into after Dec. 31, 1983, the fact that the lessee has a fixed price purchase option of at least 10 percent of the original cost of the property or that the property is usable only by the lessee will not be taken into account in determining whether the lessor is the owner of the property or the agreement is a lease. A lessor cap, a lessee cap, and a spread of the investment credit apply to finance leases but not to other non-safe harbor leases. Finance lease treatment is not elective. For example, if an agreement characterized by the parties as a lease contains a fixed price purchase option and the eligibility requirements are met, these limitations apply. Finance lease treatment is allowed for leases entered into after July 1, 1982, for up to $150,000 of a lessee's farm property without limitation by the lessor cap, lessee cap, or investment credit spread.

In addition to the changes for finance leases, a 90-day window is allowed for all non-safe harbor leases entered into after Dec. 31, 1983. The act also prohibits the IRS from retroactively denying lease treatment for certain motor vehicle operating leases by reason of the fact that those leases contain rental adjustment clauses.

Finance leases.—

Definition of finance lease.—In general, a finance lease is an agreement characterized by the parties as a lease that contains a 10-percent fixed price purchase option or that involves limited use property.

Eligibility requirements.—To be eligible, the lessor generally must be a corporation. In addition, finance lease treatment applies only if, without regard to the fact the lease contains a fixed price purchase option or that the property is limited use property, the lessor would be treated as the owner and the transaction would be a lease.

Eligible property.—In general, property eligible for finance lease treatment is new property eligible for ACRS and the investment credit. Eligible property does not include (1) rehabilitated buildings, (2) public utility property, (3) property used by former tax-exempt organizations (other than a farmer's cooperative or unrelated trade or business property the income from which is not taxed), or (4) property used by a foreign person not subject to U.S. tax. Mass commuting vehicles financed by tax-exempt bonds also are not eligible.

10-percent fixed price purchase option.—A 10-percent fixed price purchase option means an option of the lessee (i.e., a call option) to purchase the property at the end of the lease term for a price that is fixed at the beginning of the lease term at an amount that is 10 percent or more of the original cost of the property.

Limited use property.—Limited use property is property that is not readily usable by any person other than the lessee.

Investment tax credit.—Under the act, 20 percent of any investment credit earned for finance lease property is allowable in the first taxable year and 20 percent of the credit is allowable in each of the 4 succeeding taxable years. In computing cost recovery allowances for finance lease property, the regular ACRS periods and methods apply. The basis adjustment for half of the full investment credit occurs in the first taxable year. This spreading of the investment credit does not apply to property placed in service after Sept. 30, 1985.

Lessor limitations.—In taxable years ending after Dec. 31, 1983, a lessor is not allowed deductions or credits allocable to finance lease property to the extent those deductions or credits reduce its income tax liability (including any liability under the add-on minimum tax) by more than 50 percent. Deductions or credits not allowed by operation of this limitation may be carried forward. This lessor limitation does not apply to taxable years beginning after Sept. 30, 1985.

Lessee limitations.—The act places a 40-percent limit on the amount of a lessee's property that may be leased during each of the calendar years 1984 and 1985 under a finance lease.

The act requires a lessee to compute its percentage depletion deduction for property subject to a finance lease as if it owned the property. The lessee must use the regular ACRS deductions allowed under the law in effect at the time of the lease agreement in making this determination.

Related party transactions.—The finance lease rules do not apply to transactions between related corporations.

Farm finance leases.—Leases of new section 38 property used for farming purposes entered into after July 1, 1982, may qualify for finance lease treatment if the cost basis of the leased property when added to the cost basis of all other farm property subject to a finance lease that was entered into by the lessee (or a related person) during the calendar year does not exceed $150,000. These leases of farm property are not subject to the lessor cap, the lessee cap, or the spread of the investment credit. However, those limitations apply for leases entered into after Dec. 31, 1983, of property exceeding the $150,000 amount. The limitations on related party transactions and percentage depletion of a lessee apply to farm finance leases for all years.

Other non-safe harbor leases unaffected.—The act does not alter the present law treatment of leases other than finance leases or safe-harbor leases. Thus, a lease that meets the requirements of Rev. Proc. 75-21 is not subject to the lessor cap, the lessee cap, the investment credit spread, the percentage depletion rule, or the related party rule.

Effective dates.—The provison permitting a 90-day window applies to leases entered into after Dec. 31, 1983. The finance lease provisions also generally apply to property placed in service after Dec. 31, 1983. However, the farm finance lease provisions apply to leases entered into after July 1, 1982. The motor vehicle provisions apply to any open taxable years.

b. Safe-harbor leasing—Overview.—The safe-harbor leasing provisions enacted in the ERTA permit owners of property to transfer the tax benefits of ownership (depreciation and the investment credit) to other persons without having to meet the prior law requirements for characterizing the transaction as a lease. The safe-harbor leasing provisions operate by guaranteeing that for Federal tax purposes qualifying transactions will be treated as leases, and that the nominal lessor will be treated as the owner of the property, even though the lessee is in substance the owner of the property and the transaction otherwise would not be considered a lease.

The act modifies the safe-harbor provisions with respect to eligibility requirements, eligible property, ACRS deductions, investment credits, lessee and lessor limitations, and certain other matters. These modifications generally apply to leases entered into or property placed in service after July 1, 1982. However, transitional rules exclude certain property from these modifications. The act repeals safe-harbor leasing for leases entered into after Dec. 31, 1983.

Eligibility requirements.—Under prior law, the term of a safe-harbor lease could not exceed the greater of 90 percent of the useful life of the property or 150 percent of the ADR midpoint life of the property. Under Treasury regulations, the maximum interest rate on lessee obligations to the lessor generally could not be more than 3 percentage points above the rate on tax underpayments and overpayments.

Eligible property.—Property must be qualified leased property, which, in general, means that the property must be new equipment eligible for both ACRS and the investment credit. Qualified leased property includes mass commuting vehicles (i.e., any bus, subway car, rail car or similar equipment that is leased to a governmentally owned mass transit system and used in providing mass commuting services) that are financed in whole or in part by tax-exempt bonds.

Under prior law, public utility property was eligible for safe-harbor leasing, and property used by a foreign person was not made ineligible by virtue of the fact that the user's income from the property is not subject to U.S. tax. Property (other than mass commuting vehicles) used by a tax-exempt organization or a U.S. Federal, State, or local government unit generally was ineligible. Ferries used to provide mass transportation services were not designated as mass commuting vehicles.

Under the act, public utility property is ineligible for safe-harbor leasing, and property used by a foreign person is ineligible if the user's income from the property is not subject to U.S. tax. Property (other than mass commuting vehicles) leased to a person that was a tax-exempt organization (or whose predecessor was a tax-exempt organization engaged in substantially similar activities as the lessee) within the 5-year period preceding the date of the lease agreement is ineligible. However, the act does not exclude from eligible property any property used by a tax-exempt organization in an unrelated trade or business the income from which is subject to tax. Also, property used by certain farmers cooperatives is eligible for safe-harbor leasing whether or not the cooperative is tax exempt. The act designates ferries used to provide mass transportation services as mass commuting vehicles.

ACRS deductions.—Under prior law, the taxpayer could elect the regular ACRS recovery period and method for property in a safe-harbor lease.

Under the act, recovery periods for property in a safe-harbor lease are 5 years for 3-year property, 8 years for 5-year property, and 15 years for 10-year property. Cost recovery allowances are computed by applying prescribed percentages to the unadjusted basis of the property, after taking into account in the first year any required reduction in basis for investment credits. These percentages are based on the 150-percent declining balance method, changing to the straight-line method, and using a half-year convention in the first recovery year.

Investment tax credit.—Under prior law, 100 percent of any investment tax credit for property in a safe-harbor lease was allowable when the property was placed in service.

Under the act, only 20 percent of an investment tax credit is allowable in the first taxable year and 20 percent of the credit is allowable in each of the 4 succeeding taxable years, whether or not the taxpayer elects a reduced credit. The entire amount by which basis is reduced for investment credits takes effect in the first taxable year.

Lessee limitations.—Under the act, a lessee may apply the safe-harbor rules with respect to no more than 45 percent of his qualified base property placed in service in each of the calendar years 1982 and 1983. A lessee's qualified base property includes the cost basis of (1) all qualified leased property leased by the lessee under a safe-harbor lease and placed in service during the calendar year, (2) all other new section 38 property of the lessee that is placed in service during the calendar year, and (3) new property eligible for the investment credit that is used by the lessee under a long-term agreement qualifying as a lease under non-safe harbor rules and placed in service during the calendar year. Qualified leased property not subject to this 45-percent limitation by virtue of the general effective date or transitional rules counts toward the limitation, but safe-harbor lease treatment is not denied for that property.

The act also requires that the lessee compute its 50- and 65-percent taxable income limitations on percentage depletion deductions as if it were the owner of the leased property. For this purpose, the lessee must take into account ACRS deductions for the property and must disregard lease rentals and interest on lessee financings. In computing the imputed ACRS deductions for the property, the lessee must use the recovery period and method applicable to the lessor under the new safe-harbor rules.

Lessor limitations.—In taxable years ending after July 1, 1982, a lessor is not allowed deductions or credits allocable to qualified leased property to the extent those deductions or credits reduce its income tax liability (including any liability under the add-on-minimum tax) by more than 50 percent. Deductions or credits not allowable by operation of this rule may be carried forward under regulations to be prescribed by the Secretary. No deferral of tax benefits is required with respect to deductions or credits arising from safe-harbor leases not covered by the general effective date or transition rules, but such deductions or credits count first in determining whether the 50-percent limitation applies to safe-harbor leases covered by these rules. A lessor cannot use tax benefits obtained as a safe-harbor lessor to generate a net operating loss carryback or investment tax credit carryback to a prior taxable year. The act does not prohibit a carryforward of these amounts.

Related party transactions.—The act prevents the lessee from entering into a safe-harbor lease with a related person.

ITC strip.—The act allows safe-harbor lease treatment for transactions referred to as lease-leasebacks or ITC strips entered into before Oct. 20, 1981.

Closely held lessors.—Under present law, closely held lessors, in general, do not apply to losses or credits of closely held corporations (other than personal service corporations) with respect to qualified leased property subject to safe-harbor election. The at-risk rules continue to apply to closely held lessors with respect to finance leases and other non-safe-harbor leases. This change applies (1) to property placed in service after the date of enactment and (2) to property placed in service before the date of enactment if the lessor first became a closely held corporation after the date of enactment.

Effective date.—The modifications to the safe-harbor leasing rules generally apply to leases entered into or property placed in service after July 1, 1982, except that the limitation on related party transactions apply to leases entered into after Feb. 19, 1982.

The act provides a general transitional rule, under which the modifications to the safe-harbor leasing provisions do not apply for property placed in service before Jan. 1, 1983, if after Dec. 31, 1980, and before July 2, 1982, either (1) the property was acquired by the lessee or construction of the property was commenced by or for the lessee, or (2) a binding contract to acquire or construct the property was entered into by the lessee. A contract is not binding unless the lessee's failure to perform would subject him to liability for damages in an amount equal to or greater than 5 percent of the cost of the property.

The act also provides additional transitional rules, under which the modifications to the safe-harbor leasing provisions do not apply to—

(a) A mass commuting vehicle placed in service before Jan. 1, 1988;

(b) A mass commuting vehicle placed in service after Dec. 31, 1987, if (1) the property was not placed in service before Jan. 1, 1988, solely because of conditions not within the control of the lessor or lessee and (2) the property is placed in service pursuant to a binding contract or commitment entered into before Apr. 1, 1983;

(c) Commercial passenger aircraft (other than helicopters) placed in service before Jan. 1, 1984, if after June 25, 1981, and before Feb.

20, 1982, either (1) the property was acquired by the lessee or construction or reconstruction was commenced by or for the lessee, or (2) a binding contract to acquire or construct the property was entered into by the lessee. For this purpose, construction is considered to have commenced if construction or reconstruction of a subassembly was commenced or the stub wing join occurred;

(d) Certain automobile manufacturing property placed in service before July 1, 1982, and leased before Aug. 15, 1982, and automobile manufacturing property that would meet the requirements of the general transitional rule if Oct. 1, 1983, were substituted for Jan. 1, 1983;

(e) Boilers and turbines of certain cooperatives placed in service before July 1, 1983, if after Dec. 31, 1980, and before July 2, 1982, at least 20 percent of the cost of the boiler or turbine was paid by the taxpayer; and

(f) Property used in the production of steel that would meet the requirements of the general rule if Jan. 1, 1984, were substituted for Jan. 1, 1983.

For purposes of the transitional rules, construction is considered to have commenced when physical work on construction of the property commences. The transitional rules are applied for each separate item of property. The general transitional rule applies to property placed in service before Jan. 1, 1983, where the lessee ordered the components to be used in construction of the property before July 2, 1982 (pursuant to binding contracts entered into after Dec. 31, 1980) and employees of the lessee installed the components after July 1, 1982.

Repeal.—The act repeals the safe-harbor lease provisions for leases entered into after Dec. 31, 1983.

7. Foreign tax provisions

a. Limitations on amount of foreign oil and gas extraction taxes allowed as foreign tax credits (sec. 211 of the act).—Under present law, for purposes of computing the amount of creditable oil and gas extraction taxes, extraction losses from one foreign country cannot reduce oil and gas extraction income from another foreign country (sec. 907(a) and (c)(4)). Carryovers and carrybacks of excess extraction taxes paid are limited to 2 percent of foreign oil extraction income. The foreign tax credit limitation is computed separately for oil related income and all other foreign income.

The act provides that a net extraction loss in one country offsets extraction income from other countries for the purpose of computing the amount of creditable foreign oil and gas extraction taxes. The act also repeals the 2-percent limit on carryovers and carrybacks and the separate foreign tax credit limitation for oil related income. The act provides for the disallowance of credits to the extent that foreign countries impose abnormally higher taxes on oil activities than on other activities.

The provision applies generally to taxable years beginning after Dec. 31, 1982.

b. Current taxation of foreign oil and gas non-extraction income (sec. 212 of the act.—Under current law, foreign-source income of controlled foreign corporations is generally not taxed currently. However, U.S. shareholders are currently taxed on income from certain tax haven and tax advoidance transactions by their foreign corporations (secs. 951–964).

The act generally subjects U.S. shareholders to tax on the foreign oil nonextraction income of their controlled foreign corporations if the related group has extraction production of at least 1,000 barrels per day. There is no current taxation of income earned by a subsidiary in the country where the oil and gas is extracted or consumed.

This provision applies to taxable years of foreign corporations beginning after Dec. 31, 1982, and to taxable years of U.S. shareholders in which or with which such taxable years of foreign corporations end.

c. Possessions and Virgin Islands corporations (sec. 213 of the act).—Under present law, to qualify for effective tax exemption, a U.S. corporation must derive at least 50 percent of its gross income from the active conduct of a trade or business within a U.S. possession.

Possessions corporations (sec. 936) and certain U.S. corporations that are inhabitants of the Virgin Islands (sec. 934) are, in general, effectively tax exempt. This exemption applies to income from intangibles created by such a corporation or acquired from an unrelated party. Taxpayers allege that an intangible asset (a patent, trademark, etc.) created by a related party and transfered to a possessions corporation generates tax-free income of the possessions corporation. The Internal Revenue Service allocates income from such an intangible to the related party. The issue is currently being litigated in the United States Tax Court.[2]

[2] No inference should be drawn from this summary or from the act that the Congress agrees or disagrees with either the taxpayers involved or the Internal Revenue Service about this issue or similar issues in similar proceedings.

The act raises the percentage of income that a corporation must derive from active conduct of a trade or business in a possession to qualify for effective tax exemption from 50 percent to 65 percent. This increase is phased-in over a 3-year period.

The act provides as a general rule that income from intangibles is taxable to the U.S. shareholders of the possessions coroprations. Taxpayers may elect out of the general rule and choose between two options for determining taxation of intangibles income. These two options are a "cost-sharing" option and a "50–50 profit split" option. These options are generally not available for taxable years beginning in 1986 and thereafter unless the taxpayer satisfies a substantial business presence test requiring a certain level of activity in the possession.

Under the cost-sharing option, a possession corporation will be permitted to earn income from manufacturing intangibles of its U.S. parent or other U.S. affiliate (collectively, "mainland affiliate"), provided the possession corporation (1) shares, through a cost sharing payment, in the annual product area reseach expenditures of the mainland affiliates and other affiliates controlled within the meaning of sec. 482 (collectively, "affiliates"), and (2) has a significant business presence in the possession. If these conditions are satisfied, the possession corporation will be deemed to own such manufacturing intangibles and will be entitled to the full return thereon with respect to the products produced or type of services rendered by the possession corporation. The applicable pricing methods provided in the intercompany pricing regulations (sec. 482) will be utilized for this purpose. The possession corporation cannot claim a return on manufacturing intangibles, such as trademarks, trade names, and brand names.

Under the 50–50 profit split option, the possession corporation also makes a cost-sharing payment. Upon this payment, the possession corporation and its U.S. affiliates will split the combined taxable income of the possession corporation and its U.S. affiliates with respect to products produced, in whole or in part, in the possession. 50 percent of such profit will be allocated to the possession corporation; 50 percent will be allocated to its U.S. affiliates.

The act generally subjects to tax sales and other dispositions of intangibles used in a possession. A transfer of a possession related intangible is generally deemed pursuant to a plan having as one of its principal purposes the avoidance of Federal income taxes.

The provision applies generally to taxable years beginning on or after Jan. 1, 1983. The provision relating to sales of intangibles applies to sales made after July 1, 1982. The provision relating to certain transfers applies to transfers made after Aug. 14, 1982.

8. Tax-exempt obligations (secs. 214–221 of the act)

Generally, interest on State and local government obligations is exempt from Federal income tax. However, industrial development bonds (IDBs) are taxable except when issued for certain specified purposes.

Interest on IDBs is tax-exempt if the bonds are issued to finance the following activities: (1) projects for low-income residential rental property, (2) sports facilities, (3) convention or trade show facilities, (4) airports, docks, wharves, mass commuting facilities, and parking facilities, (5) sewage and solid waste disposal facilities, and facilities for the local furnishing of electricity or gas, (6) air or water pollution control facilities, (7) certain facilities for the furnishing of water, (8) qualified hydroelectric generating facilities, and (9) qualified mass commuting vehicles. In addition, the interest on certain IDBs issued for the purpose of acquiring or developing land as a site for an industrial park is exempt from taxation.

Present law also permits tax exemption for certain "small issue" IDBs if the proceeds are used for the acquisition of land or depreciable property. A small issue cannot exceed $1 million ($10 million if certain capital expenditures are counted).

Present law also allows tax-exempt financing for student loans and organizations that qualify for tax-exemption under sec. 501(c)(3), such as private, nonprofit hospitals and private, nonprofit educational institutions.

Present law permits the cost of facilities financed with tax-exempt IDBs to be recovered under the accelerated cost recovery system (ACRS).

a. Restrictions on tax-exempt bonds for private activities.—Under the act, quarterly reports to the IRS are required for issuers of all tax-exempt bonds for private activities (i.e., all IDBs, student loan bonds, and bonds for sec. 501(c)(3) organizations). Additionally, all IDBs can be issued only after a public hearing and approval by an elected official, or a voter referendum. The reporting requirement is effective for all bonds issued after 1982; the public hearing and approval requirement is effective for obligations issued after 1982, with a transitional exception for bonds issued solely to refund certain short-term obligations that were issued before July 1, 1982.

The act restricts cost recovery deductions for property financed with IDBs to amounts determined using the straight-line method over ACRS lives. Full ACRS deductions will still be allowed in the case of low-income rental housing, municipal sewage or solid waste facilities, certain air or water pollution control facilities, and certain facilities with respect to which a UDAG grant is made. This change is generally effective for property placed in service after 1982 which is financed with bonds issued after July 1, 1982; transitional exceptions are provided for certain property for which a binding contract existed on July 1, 1982, or on which constructon commenced before that date.

The act restricts the average term to maturity of all IDBs to a period no greater than 120 percent of the average economic life of the assets financed by the bonds. For this purpose the ADR midpoint lives, or the lives established under Rev. Proc. 62-21 for structures, are to be used, unless the taxpayer establishes a longer life. This provision is effective for bonds issued after Dec. 31, 1982.

The act terminates the small issue exception for IDBs, effective for bonds issued after Dec. 31, 1986. In addition, the act eliminates the use of IDBs to finance certain facilities, effective for bonds issued after Dec. 31, 1982, if (1) more than 25 percent of the proceeds of the issue are used to provide a facility the primary purpose of which is automobile sales or service, retail food or beverage service, or recreation or entertainment, or (2) any portion of the proceeds is used to finance facilities for a golf course, country club, massage parlor, tennis club, skating facility, racquet sport facility, hot tub facility, suntan facility, or racetrack. The act also provides that tax exemption is not available for bonds exempt under the small issue exemption when the bonds are issued as part of a single issue, including other bonds exempt under any other provision. This provision is effective for bonds issued after the date of enactment.

b. Other amendments affecting IDBs.—The act expands the definition of "local furnishing" for facilities supplying gas to include facilities whose service area does not exceed a city and one contiguous county. In addition, the activities for which IDBs may be issued are expanded to include local district heating and cooling facilities and ferries used in providing mass transportation services. These changes are effective for bonds issued after the date of enactment.

The act provides for the exclusion of wages and supplies eligible for the research and development credit from the capital expenditures included under the $10 million limitation for small issue bonds. This provision is effective for expenditures incurred after the date of enactment.

The act permits composite issues of small-issue IDBs provided that all of the facilities financed under the composite issue are located in one State and all of the facilities have different principal users. For this purpose, a principal user includes certain franchisors. This provision is effective for bonds issued after the date of enactment.

The act allows tax-exempt IDBs to be issued under certain circumstances for use by a qualified regional pollution control authority to acquire existing air or water pollution control facilities which the authority itself will operate. The act further provides that certain IDBs of the Port Authority of St. Paul, Minn., may be advance refunded. These changes are effective for bonds issued after the date of enactment.

The rules for IDBs used to finance residential rental property for low- and moderate-income families are changed in two respects. First, the act defines the term "low- and moderate-income" to mean individuals whose income is less than 80 percent of the area median income (regardless of the percentage used under the sec. 8 program). Second, the duration fo the requirement that 20 percent (15 percent in targeted areas) of the housing units in a project be occupied by low- and moderate-income individuals is reduced from 20 years to a period equal to the greatest of (1) 10 years after over one-half of the project is first occupied, (2) a date ending when 50 percent of the maturity of the bonds has expired, or (3) the date on which any section 8 (or comparable) assistance terminates. These changes are generally effective for bonds issued after the date of enactment.

c. Mortgage subsidy bonds.—Under the Mortgage Subsidy Bond Tax Act of 1980, all of the mortgages financed from tax-exempt bond proceeds must be provided to mortgagors each of whom did not have a present ownership interest in his or her principal residence at any time during the three prior years. All of the mortgages (except qualified home improvement loans) must be used to purchase residences whose purchase price does not exceed 90 percent (110 percent in targeted areas) of the average area purchase price.

In addition, each bond issue must meet certain requirements regarding arbitrage as to both mortgage loans and nonmortgage investments. First, the effective rate of interest on mortgages provided under the issue cannot exceed the yield on the issue by more than one (1.0) percentage point. Second, the reserve for future debt service established in connection with the boonds must be reduced as future annual debt service is reduced.

Present law includes no provisions that relate specifically to the treatment of cooperative housing corporations under these rules.

The act modifies several of the rules for qualified mortgage subsidy bonds—

First-time home purchaser limitation.—The act provides that 90 percent of the lendable proceeds of a mortgage subsidy bond must be made available for mortgages to first-time home purchasers.

Purchase price limitation.—The act increases the purchase price limitation to 110 percent (120 percent in a targeted area) of the average area purchase price.

Arbitrage limitations.—The 1.0-percentage point limit is increased to 1⅛ percentage points.

Reserve liquidations.—The act provides that the rule requiring reserve liquidations will not apply to the extent it requires disposition of any nonmortgage investment resulting in a loss in excess of the amount of undistributed arbitrage profits on such investments.

Cooperative housing.—In the case of a cooperative housing corporation, the act provides that each dwelling unit is to be treated as if it were actually owned by the person entitled to occupy that unit by reason of his or her ownership of shares in the cooperative housing corporation. In addition, any indebtedness of the corporation that is allocable to the dwelling unit is treated as if it were indebtedness of the shareholder who is entitled to occupy the dwelling unit.

The act also provides that any issue that provides financing to a cooperative housing corporation that is not located in a targeted area may be combined with one or more other issues which in sum satisfy the requirement that at least 20 percent of the proceeds of an issue will be devoted to owner-financing of residences in targeted areas for a period of at least one year.

These changes are generally effective for bonds issued after the date of enactment. However, the change to the first-time home purchaser limitation also applies to bonds issued before the date of enactment to the extent of the uncommitted funds on that date.

9. Mergers and acquisitions (secs. 222–228 of the act)

a. Partial liquidations.—A distribution in partial liquidation of a corporation is treated by the distributee shareholders as a payment in exchange for their stock (secs. 331, 346). No gain or loss is recognized to the distributing corporation on a distribution of assets in partial liquidation (sec. 336). However, the recapture provisions of present law apply to such distributing corporation.

Under the act, distributions in partial liquidation to corporate shareholders are governed by the provisions of present law other than those relating to partial liquidations. Such distributions now treated as partial liquidations will be treated as dividends if they satisfy the definition of a dividend. Distributions in partial liquidation to noncorporate shareholders will continue to be treated as payments in exchange for their stock.

Gain generally will be recognized to the distributing corporation with respect to appreciated assets distributed in partial liquidation to noncorporate shareholders. However, gain will not be recognized where such distributions are made to shareholders who have held (with attribution) at least 10 percent of the corporation's stock for the 5-year period preceding the distribution.

The revised treatment of partial liquidations applies to distributions made after Aug. 31, 1982. However, present-law partial liquidation rules will continue to apply under certain circumstances.[3]

b. Distribution of appreciated property in redemption of stock.—A corporation, under present law, generally is required to recognize gain on a distribution of appreciated property in redemption of its stock. There are a number of exceptions to this requirement, including distributions terminating the interest of a shareholder who has held at least 10 percent of the [3] These circumstances are: (a) A ruling request as to partial liquidation treatment was pending on July 22, 1982 (or a ruling was granted on or after July 12, 1981, and before July 23, 1982), and a plan of partial liquidation is adopted by Oct. 1, 1982 (or, if later, within 90 days after the ruling is granted). (b) A plan of partial liquidation was adopted before July 23, 1982. (c) Control (as defined in sec. 368(c) of the distributing corporation was acquired after Dec. 31, 1981, and before July 23, 1982, and a plan of partial liquidation is adopted by Oct. 1, 1982. (d) Control was acquired after July 22, 1982, pursuant to a binding contract or tender offer outstanding on such date and a plar of liquidation is adopted by Oct. 1, 1982, or, if later, within 90 days after final approval of the acquisition by a Federal regulatory agency or foreign regulatory body. Further, the acquisition need not be made pursuant to a tender offer or binding contract in effect on July 22, 1982, if at least one-third of the corporation's shares were acquired, and the acquiring corporation notified the Federal Trade Commission of its intent to acquire control, during March and April 1982. (e) Control of an insurance company was acquired after Dec. 31, 1980 and before July 23, 1982, by the distributee or its parent corporation, conduct of the insurance business by the distributee is subject to approval by State regulatory authority, and a plan of partial liquidation is adopted by Oct. 1, 1982.

corporation's stock for 1 year (sec. 311(d)(2)(A)), distributions of stock in a subsidiary corporation, and distributions pursuant to an antitrust judgment.

The act repeals these exceptions, but retains an exception for distributions of the stock of certain active subsidiaries to certain noncorporate stockholders who have held (with attribution) 10 percent of the corporation's stock for 5 years.

The repeal of present-law exceptions generally is effective for distributions after Aug. 31, 1982.[4]

c. Certain stock purchases treated as asset purchases.—Under present law, when 80 percent or more of a corporation's stock is purchased and the acquired corporation adopts a plan of complete liquidation within 2 years of the purchase, the basis of the assets distributed in liquidation is the cost paid for the stock plus assumed liabilities and other items. The tax attributes of the acquired corporation are terminated. If several affiliated corporations are acquired, this treatment applies to corporations liquidated under these rules, but not to acquired entities that are not liquidated.

Under the act, the purchasing corporation may elect, within 75 days after the purchase, to treat the acquired corporation as a new corporation that purchased the assets of the acquired corporation, on the date the stock was purchased. The tax attributes of the acquired corporation are terminated on such date. Gain is not recognized to the acquired corporation but the recapture provisions apply. No actual liquidation is required.

If an affiliated group of corporations is purchased, an election will apply to the entire affiliated group. If there is a qualifying stock purchase and if there is also a direct purchase of assets from the same affiliated group, the purchasing corporation is deemed to have made the election.

The new rules generally will apply to acquisitions after Aug. 31, 1982.[5]

d. Reorganizations constituting changes in form.—A reorganization includes a mere change in identity, form, or place of organization (an "F" reorganization).

The act limits the F reorganization definition to a change in identity, form, or place of organization of a single operating corporation. The amendment applies to reorganizations after Aug. 31, 1982. However, present law continues to apply to transactions before Jan. 1, 1983, pursuant to plans of reorganization adopted on or before Aug. 31, 1982.

e. Use of holding companies and other devices to bail out earnings.—Shareholders who have their stock redeemed in a corporate distribution are entitled to sale or exchange treatment rather than a dividend generally only if the transaction results in a substantial reduction in their proportionate interests in the distributing corporation. Present law (secs. 304 and 306) contains rules to prevent avoidance of this limitation through the use of related corporations. Present law does not adequately deal with transactions involving the formation of holding companies and the use of preferred stock in some cases.

The act extends the anti-bailout rules of present law to the use of holding companies and other companies used to avoid such rules.[6] Such rules are made applicable to a transaction that otherwise qualifies as a tax-free incorporation of assets.

Assumption of shareholder debt by the holding company is treated as property received by the transferor shareholders. However, debt incurred to acquire the stock of an operating company is excepted since assumption of such debt is an alternative to a debt-financed direct acquisition by the holding company.[7]

f. Application of attribution rules for purposes of secs. 306 and 356(a)(2).—In determining whether a shareholder is entitled to a sale or exchange treatment on a stock redemption, stock held by related parties is attributed to the shareholder in determining whether the shareholder's interest in the corporation was terminated or significantly reduced. The attribution rules do not apply to some transactions that are economically equivalent to straight stock redemptions and that offer an equivalent opportunity to bail out earnings. These include the issuance and sale at capital gain rates of preferred stock in some cases and the receipt of property in a reorganization.

The act extends the ownership attribution rules to a determination of whether, for sec. 306, the effect of a transaction is substantially the same as a dividend and in determining whether the receipt of property in a reorganization has the effect of a dividend. The amendment applies to stock received and distributions made after Aug. 31, 1982, in taxable years ending after such date.

g. Waiver of family attribution rules.—In determining whether a shareholder has completely terminated an interest in a corporation on a stock redemption so as to achieve sale or exchange treatment, present law allows the shareholder to waive attribution of ownership from other family members. The waiving shareholder in general may hold no interest in the corporation (except as a creditor), may not acquire any interest for a 10-year period, and must agree to notify the Internal Revenue Service of any such acquisition. The statute of limitations for the year of redemption remains open in the event of such an acquisition. Stock may be attributed by family attribution and reattributed to an entity such as an estate or trust in which the constructive owner has a beneficial interest.

The act permits an entity to waive the family attribution rules if those through whom ownership is attributed to the entity join in the waiver. Thus, a trust and its beneficiaries may waive family attribution to the beneficiaries if, after the redemption, neither the trust nor the beneficiaries hold an interest in the corporation, do not acquire such an interest within the 10-year period, and join in the agreement to notify the IRS of any acquisition. The entity and beneficiaries are jointly and severally liable in the event of an acquisition by any of them within the 10-year period and the statute of limitations is kept open to assess any deficiency. The tax increase is a deficiency in the entity's tax but may be asserted as a deficiency against any beneficiary liable under the rules. The tax will be triggered only against the beneficiary whose acquisition triggers the deficiency where, because it has insufficient funds or gone out of existence, the tax cannot be collected from the entity.

Only family attribution can be waived under the act. The agreement will not be effective to waive the entity attribution rules.

Certain anti-avoidance rules of present law are extended to the entity and affected beneficiaries.

The provision applies to distributions after Aug. 31, 1982, in taxable years ending after such date.

10. Accounting for long-term contracts (sec. 229 of the act)

Under present law, the completed contract method of accounting provides that income from long-term contracts is recognized when the contract is completed. Also, costs allocable to the contract are deducted when the contract is completed. Other costs, known as "period" costs, are deducted when they are paid or incurred.

Under the act, the completed method of accounting for long-term contracts is revised in two respects. First, the income tax regulations are to be amended to prevent abuse of the rules relating to completion of the contract and aggregation of several agreements in one contract. These new rules apply to taxable years ending after 1982. Special rules are provided for contracts that would have been completed in taxable years ending before 1983 solely by reason of the new rules.

Second, the act revises rules relating to the allocation of costs to long-term contracts. Under the new rules, all costs which directly benefit, or are incurred by reason of, the long-term contract activities of the taxpayer are to be allocated to the contract and deducted when the contract is completed. For long-term contracts that are expected to be completed within 2 years, the cost allocation rules are not revised. In addition, construction contracts will continue to use present law cost allocation rules where the construction contract is expected to be completed within 3 years or in the case of construction contracts of taxpayers with no more than $25 million of average annual gross receipts for the previous 3 years.

The new cost allocation rules apply to taxable years beginning after 1982 with respect to contracts entered into after 1982. In addition, the act provides that the new cost allocation rules are phased in over a 3-year period.

11. Accelerated corporate tax payments (sec. 234 of the act)

Under present law, corporations generally must pay 80 percent of the current year's tax liability in quarterly estimated tax payments during the taxable year (sec. 6655). A penalty for underpayment of estimated taxes is imposed unless the corporation meets certain exceptions based on prior

---

[4] However, if a ruling request was filed under sec. 311(d)(2)(A) before July 23, 1982, present law will continue to apply to distributions made within 90 days after the ruling is granted. Sec. 311(d)(2)(A) will also apply to distributions made before Aug. 31, 1983, with respect to stock acquired after 1980 and before May 1982. Finally, sec. 311(d)(2)(A) of present law will continue to apply to distributions of timberland by a forest products company, if such distributions are made pursuant to one or two options under a contract between the shareholder and the company binding on Aug. 31, 1982, and at all times thereafter, and do not, on Aug. 31, 1982, exceed in value $10 million. Present law also continues to apply to distributions prior to 1986 with respect to antitrust judgments rendered before July 23, 1982.

[5] However, if the acquisition took place after Aug. 31, 1980, and the acquired corporation was not liquidated before Sept. 1, 1982, the election may be made with respect to such acquisition on or before Nov. 15, 1982.

Old law will continue to apply if there was a binding contract to acquire control of a financial institution outstanding on July 22, 1982, and a plan of liquidation is adopted within 90 days after final regulatory approval of such acquisition.

[6] The act excepts from the bailout provisions securities in a bank holding company received by certain minority shareholders incident to the formation of such company following a change in control of a bank.

[7] The amendments to the anti-bailout rules apply to transfers made after Aug. 31, 1982. Present law is continued for transfers pursuant to an application to form a bank holding company filed with the Federal Reserve Board before Aug. 16, 1982, provided the bank holding company is formed by the later of (i) the 90th day after the date of the last required approval of any regulatory authority to form such bank holding company, or (ii) Jan. 1, 1983.

year's tax liability, prior year's income, or annualized income. At each installment date, annualized income is projected from the actual taxable income earned by the end of the previous month (or quarter).

Generally, a corporation must pay its final tax payment 2½ months after the end of the taxable year, but it may elect to pay only half of the unpaid tax on this date and the remaining half 3 months later.

Under the act, the amount of estimated tax payments required for all corporations is increased from 80 to 90 percent of current year's tax liability. (A corresponding change will be made in the exception based on annualized income.) The penalty for underpayment of estimated taxes is imposed at three quarters of the full rate on underpayments between 80 and 90 percent of the tax due, but only if the taxpayer makes estimated tax payments of at least 80 percent of the tax due.

The full amount of the unpaid tax is due 2½ months after the end of a taxable year.

Corporate taxpayers with seasonal income have a new rule governing estimated tax payments. These taxpayers may rely on the rule if, in the preceding 3 taxable years, taxable income for any period of 6 successive months averaged 70 percent or more of total income for the taxable year. Income is to be annualized by assuming that the income is earned, in the current year, in the same pattern as in the 3 preceding taxable years. This rule requires that the tax be paid on the annualized income in the same seasonal pattern in which it is earned.

The Treasury Department is directed to amend its regulations regarding the computation of taxable income for the period before the installment due date, and the taxpayers may relay on these regulations in computing taxable income for a period of less than a full taxable year under the annualization and seasonal pattern of income exceptions to the underpayment penalty.

These provisions apply to taxable years beginning after Dec. 31, 1982.

12. Original issue discount bonds (sec. 231 of the act)

Under present law, original issue discount on corporate bonds is included in income by holders in whose hands such bonds are capital assets, and is allowed as a deduction to the issuer, on a linear basis over the life of the bond. The discount is treated as accruing in equal monthly installments over the life of the bond. The OID provisions of the Internal Revenue Code presently do not provide for ratable inclusion of discount income by holders of noncorporate bonds. A portion of gain from the sale or disposition of government bonds is treated as ordinary income to the extent of accrued original issue discount.

The act provides new rules under which the inclusion and deduction of original issue discount correspond to the actual economic accrual of interest. These rules are extended to bonds issued by noncorporate issuers other than natural persons.

The provision is effective for obligations issued after July 1, 1982, unless issued pursuant to a written commitment binding on July 1, 1982, and at all times thereafter.

13. Coupon stripping (sec. 232 of the act)

Under present law, if a taxpayer disposes of a bond and retains the unmatured interest coupons or disposes of the bond and the coupons in separate transactions, it is arguable that the taxpayer's basis is entirely allocable to the corpus (bond principal). Any loss from disposing of the corpus, if allowable, is an ordinary loss to a dealer in such obligations, or to a bank, and a capital loss to other taxpayers.

Gain to the purchaser of a stripped bond is deferred until the bond is sold or redeemed and is ordinary income to the extent of the difference between the value of the bond with and without the coupons attached at the time of purchase. The purchaser of stripped coupons allocates cost to the coupons in accordance with their relative values at the time of purchase. Capital gain may result if coupons are sold rather than redeemed.

Under the act, stripped bonds and stripped coupons in the hands of a purchaser are treated as bonds issued at a discount. The discount is the excess of the redemption price of the bond, or amount payable on maturity of the coupon, over the purchase price allocable to the bond or coupon. The purchaser must include the discount in income under the original issue discount rules.

The seller of a stripped bond or stripped coupons must, immediately before the disposition, allocate the basis of the bond (with coupons) among the bond and coupons in accordance with their values. This will prevent artificial losses from the sale of stripped bonds. The same original issue discount treatment applicable to a buyer of a stripped bond or stripped coupons applies to the retained portions after a seller strips and disposes of either the corpus or coupons.

The rule of present law that requires ordinary income treatment on the sale or other disposition of a stripped bond to the extent of the difference in fair market value of the bond with and without coupons attached at the time of purchase is continued for bonds purchased at any time before July 2, 1982. This rule is applicable to tax exempt obligations without regard to the date of purchase.

The new treatment applicable to coupon stripping applies where there is a sale after July 1, 1982, of either a stripped bond or stripped coupons.

14. Targeted jobs credit (sec. 233 of the act)

The targeted jobs credit is available for hiring individuals from one or more of 9 target groups (sec. 44B). The credit is equal to 50 percent of the first $6,000 of wages paid for the first year of employment, and 25 percent of the first $6,000 of wages paid for the second year of employment, to a target group individual. Under present law, the credit is available for wages paid to eligible individuals who begin work for the employer before 1983.

The act modifies the credit in several ways. First, the credit is made available with respect to any member of a targeted group who begins work on or before Dec. 31, 1984.

Second, a new targeted group is added, consisting of economically disadvantaged youths who are 16 or 17 years of age on the hiring date and who have not worked for the employer before the period for which the employer claims the credit. The credit for this group is 85 percent of up to $3,000 of wages paid for services attributable to any 90-day period between May 1 and September 15, effective for individuals beginning work for the employer after Apr. 30, 1983.

Third, recipients of noncash, as well as cash, general assistance payments are members of a targeted group.

Fourth, the target group consisting of individuals involuntarily terminated from CETA jobs will be terminated for individuals who begin work for the employer after Dec. 31, 1982.

Fifth, appropriations of administrative funds are authorized for such sums as may be necessary in fiscal years 1983 and 1984.

Sixth, the Secretary of Labor will be required to submit annual quality control reports to the Congress, reviewing the accuracy of the process by which the eligibility of individuals as members of targeted groups is determined.

Seventh, certifications will be valid if requested or received on or before the day the individual begins work for the employer.

C. COMPLIANCE PROVISIONS

1. Withholding on interest and dividends (secs. 301–308 of the act)

Under present law, no income tax withholding is required on payments of interest, dividends, or patronage dividends to U.S. persons.

The act provides for withholding on payments of dividends, interest, and certain patronage dividends paid to individuals (and certain others) at a rate of 10 percent . Exceptions are provided for:

(1) individuals with prior year income tax liability of $600 or less ($1,000 on a joint return);

(2) elderly individuals with prior year income tax liability of $1,500 or less ($2,500 on a joint return);

(3) interest payments by electing payors of $150 or less on an annualized basis;

(4) payments by consumer cooperatives; and

(5) payments to corporations, governments, securities dealers, money market funds, exempt organizations, nominees, and certain other recipients.

Interest subject to withholding generally includes interest (including original issue discount), other than (1) interest paid by individuals, or State and local governments on tax-exempt obligations, (2) interest paid to nonresident alien individuals, foreign corporations and certain other foreign entities, and (3) foreign source interest paid outside the United States by U.S. corporations.

Dividends subject to withholding generally are distributions out of earnings and profits other than payments to nonresident alien individuals and foreign corporations.

Patronage dividends subject to withholding do not include per-unit retain allocations or patronage dividends which include consent-type qualified written notices of allocations unless 50 percent or more of such patronage dividend is paid in money or by qualified check.

In general, these provisions apply to interest and dividends paid or credited after June 30, 1983. This authority may be exercised on a case-by-case basis when the payor has attempted in good faith to comply with the withholding obligations but cannot do so without undue hardship.

2. Reporting provisions and penalty provisions to improve reporting generally

a. Reporting of interest (sec. 309 of the act).—Present law contains an information reporting requirement with respect to payments of interest aggregating $10 or more to any other person during the calendar year (sec. 6049). Any corporation that has an obligation outstanding in registered form with respect to which $10 or more of original issue discount is includible in the gross income of any holder during any calendar year must also file an information return with the Secretary. Payors of interest and persons who are required to file information returns with respect to original issue discount must also furnish information statements to recipients.

Under the act, as under present law, every person who makes payments of interest aggregating $10 or more to any other person during the calendar year, must file an information return. In addition, any person who withholds tax from a payment of interest must file an information return with the Secretary. Original issue discount is generally treated as paid at the time includible in income. In the case of original issue discount on a bearer obligation issued before Jan. 1, 1983, and original issue discount which is not includible in the income of a holder periodically (including discount on short-term government obligations), the original issue discount is treated as paid on the earlier of redemption or maturity of the obligation.

Under the act, interest subject to the information reporting requirement is defined to include interest on any obligation which is issued in registered form, or which is of a type offered to the public (other than any obligation with a maturity, at issue, of not more than 1 year which is held by a corporation); interest on bank deposits, and, to the extent provided in regulations prescribed by the Secretary, any other interest (which is not specifically excluded from the definition of interest). These are generally the same categories of interest that are subject to reporting under present law except interest on all obligations in registered form or of a type offered to the public is subject to reporting rather than only interest on corporate obligations as under present law.

As under existing law, interest on bearer obligations that is paid outside the United States by a U.S. person (e.g., a foreign branch of a U.S. bank) acting as a paying agent for a foreign cororate issuer (or for a U.S. corporate issuer whose interest payments are foreign-source) is exempt from the information reporting requirements, except to the extent otherwise provided by regulations.

In contrast to present law, interest paid on bearer obligations to a U.S. person by a person acting as a nominee, paying agent, or other middleman is subject to the information reporting requirements if the payment is made within the United States, even if the issuer is a foreign corporation.

This provision is effective for amounts paid after Dec. 31, 1982.

b. Obligations required to be registered (sec. 310 of the act).—Under present law, except for certain housing or energy bonds, the tax status of debt obligations is generally the same regardless of whether the obligation is issued in registered form or in a bearer form.

Under the act, the issuance of most bearer obligations by the U.S. or its agencies or instrumentalities is prohibited and certain tax benefits are denied to issuers and holders of other bearer obligations. In addition, an excise tax is imposed on bearer obligations that were required to be issued in registered form. Certain exceptions to the registration requirements are provided.

If a registration-required obligation is not issued in registered form, no interest deduction is allowable to the issuer with respect to interest (including original issue discount) paid or accrued on the obligation. In addition, the earnings and profits of a corporation issuing a registration-required obligation in bearer form will not be reduced by the amount of any interest paid or accrued on the obligation. Moreover, interest on an otherwise tax-exempt unregistered registration-required obligation is not exempt from tax. An excise tax is imposed on the issuer of a "registration-required obligation" that is not issued in registered form, equal to 1 percent of the principal amount of the obligation multiplied by the number of years in the term of the obligation. An exception is provided from these issuer sanctions for certain issues of bonds not intended for distribution (or redistribution in connection with the original issue) to U.S. persons.

Holder sanctions are imposed on U.S. persons who own bearer bonds issued after 1982 that were not subject to the excise tax and that should have been issued in registered form or were issued under the exception for bonds distributed outside the United States. Specifically, these sanctions are the loss of capital gains treatment and the denial of loss deductions when such obligations are sold or exchanged or become worthless. Exceptions from the holder sanctions are provided for persons who promptly surrender bearer obligations for reissuance in registered form, for persons who hold certain bearer obligations in connection with their active conduct of a trade or business outside the United States, for securities dealers holding bearer bonds in inventory, and for persons complying with reporting requirements that may be promulgated by the Secretary, if certain conditions are satisfied to ensure that the bearer bonds will not be delivered to U.S. persons other than those qualifying under the exceptions.

These provisions apply to obligations issued after Dec. 31, 1982, except that the holder and issuer sanctions do not apply to obligations issued in bearer form pursuant to warrants or convertible bonds issued before Aug. 10, 1982, provided the obligations are issued under arrangements reasonably designed to ensure that they will be sold or resold only to foreign persons.

c. Returns of brokers (sec. 311 of the act.—Under present law, every person doing business as a broker must make returns reporting on profits and losses of its customers when required under regulations issued by the Secretary (sec. 6045). There are, currently, no regulations under this section.

The act (1) permits the Secretary to require gross proceeds reporting, (2) requires brokers to furnish statements to their customers, and (3) clarifies the definition of broker to explicitly include persons such as dealers, barter exchanges, and other middlemen.

The act also extends the definition of third-party recordkeepers (for administrative summons purposes) to include barter exchanges that are subject to the information reporting requirements imposed on brokers.

Generally, this provision will take effect on the date of enactment. Further, regulations must be issued under this provision within 6 months after the date of enactment; however, any such regulations may not apply to transactions occurring before Jan. 1, 1983. The provision defining barter exchanges as third-party recordkeepers is effective for summonses served after Dec. 31, 1982.

d. Information reporting requirements and penalties with respect to payments of remuneration for services and direct sales (sec. 312 of the act.—

Payments of remuneration.—Present law generally requires a person engaged in a trade or business to file an information return with respect to payments to another person aggregating $600 or more in the calendar year (code sec. 6041(a)). The penalty for failure to file, or to provide statements to recipients, is $10 per failure, with a maximum aggregate penalty for each type of failure of $25,000 for any one calendar year (code secs. 6652 and 6678).

The act adds a separate code provision dealing specifically with payments of remuneration for services, effective for payments made after 1982. In addition, the act provides that the penalty for failure to file a return with respect to such payments, or failure to provide a statement to the recipient, is $50 per failure, not to exceed $50,000 in any calendar year. However, if the failure is due to intentional disregard of the filing requirements, the penalty will be no less than 10 percent of the amount not properly reported, without regard to the $50,000 limitation. The provision applies to returns the due date of which (without extensions) is after Dec. 31, 1982.

Direct sales.—There is no reporting requirement under present law with respect to sales of consumer products for resale.

The act provides that direct sellers will be required to file information returns identifying all buyers to whom aggregate sales of $5,000 or more are made during the calendar year. Statements also must be provided to the buyers.

The provision applies to sales after Dec. 31, 1982. The penalty for failure to comply with these reporting requirements is $50 per failure, not to exceed $50,000 in any calendar year. However, if the failure is due to intentional disregard of the reporting requirements, then the penalty will be $100 per failure, without regard to the $50,000 limitation.

e. Reporting of State and local income tax refunds (sec. 313 of the act).—Under present law, the refund, credit or offset of State or local income taxes that were deducted (with a resulting tax benefit) in a prior year is includible in a taxpayer's gross income. There is no requirement that information returns with respect to such refunds be filed with the United States or that a statement regarding the refund be furnished to the recipient.

The act provides that an information return must be filed with the Secretary with respect to any State or local income tax refunds, credits, or offsets aggregating $10 or more paid or credited to an individual during the calendar year. In addition, a statement must be furnished to the recipient during January of the calendar year following the year of the refund, credit or offset.

This new requirement will apply to refunds paid, and credits or offsets allowed after Dec. 31, 1982.

f. Employer reporting with respect to tips (sec. 314 of the act).—Under present law, tipped employees must generally report all tips received in the course of their employment to their employer.

In general, withholding for purposes of the Federal Insurance Contributions Act (FICA) tax and the income tax is required only to the extent tips are reported to the employer and only to the extent collection of the tax can be made by the employer from wages paid to the employee (excluding tips, but including funds turned over by the employee to the employer or under the control of the employer).

Employees, whether or not they receive tips, are required to keep records to establish the amount of gross income and deductions. Employers are expressly required to retain only charge tip receipts and statements of tips received by employees furnished by such employees.

Under the act, the rules of present law relating to reporting of tips to employers by their employees and to the resulting withholding of FICA and income taxes is retained. However, each large food and beverage establishment is required to report annually to the Internal Revenue Service (1) the gross receipts of the establishment from food and beverage sales (other than receipts from carryout sales and mandatory 10-percent or more service charge sales), (2) the amount of aggregate charge receipts (other than receipts from carryout sales and 10-percent service charge sales), (3) the aggregate amount of tips shown on such charge receipts, and (4) reported tip income and mandatory service charges of less than 10 percent.

If the employees voluntarily report tips aggregating 8 percent or more of gross receipts (defined as gross receipts less carryout sales, less 10-percent service charge sales), then no tip allocations will need to be made. However, if this 8-percent reporting threshold is not met, then the employer must allocate an amount equal to the difference between 8 percent of gross receipts and the amounts reported by employees for the year to all tipped employees pursuant to either an agreement between the employer and employees or in the absence of such an agreement according to regulations issued by the Secretary.

A large food or beverage establishment is any establishment (public or private) the activity of which is the provision of food or beverages for consumption on the premises, other than of a "carryout" nature such as "fast food restaurants," with respect to which tipping is customary, and which normally employed more than 10 employees on a typical business day during the preceding calendar year.

The act requires the Secretary of the Treasury to submit, prior to Jan. 1, 1987, to the tax-writing committees of the Congress a report on the operation of the present reporting system as applied to tips received as wages or compensation.

These amendments generally apply to calendar years beginning after Dec. 31, 1982, but the allocation rules will first apply to payroll periods ending after Mar. 31, 1983.

g. Increased penalties for failure to file information returns and statements (sec. 315 of the act).—Present law imposes a penalty on any person who fails to file timely information returns relating to various forms of compensation, interest and dividends. The penalty is $10 for each such failure, but the total amount of penalties imposed for all such failures during a calendar year cannot exceed $25,000. Persons with respect to whom information returns are filed generally are entitled to a statement of the information shown on the return. The penalty for failure to provide these statements is also $10 per failure up to $25,000 per year. Employers and plan administrators must file information returns with respect to certain deferred compensation plans. The penalty for failure to provide these returns is $10 for each day the failure continues up to $5,000. The penalty is not imposed if the failure is due to reasonable cause and not due to willful neglect.

Under the act, the category of information returns subject to the general penalty for failure to file timely information returns is expanded to include broker returns and direct seller returns. The penalty for failure to file most information returns, and to provide statements to recipients, is increased to $50 per failure, not to exceed $50,000 per calendar year. The penalty for failure to file information returns or statements with respect to certain deferred compensation plans, and certain term, annuity, and bond purchase plans is increased to $25 per day that the failure continues, but not to exceed $15,000.

If the failure to file information returns is due to intentional disregard of the filing requirements, the penalty will be no less than 10 percent of the amounts not properly reported (5 percent in the case of broker returns and $100 in the case of direct sellers) and the $50,000 limitation will not apply.

The provision applies to returns and statements required (without regard to extensions) after Dec. 31, 1982.

h. Increase in civil penalty on failure to supply identifying numbers (sec. 316 of the act).—Present law imposes a penalty of $5 per failure on any person who is required by regulations (1) to include his taxpayer identification number (TIN) in any return, statement or document, (2) to furnish his TIN to another person, or (3) to include in any return or statement made with respect to another person the TIN of such other person, and who fails to comply with such requirement at the time prescribed (sec. 6676).

The penalty for failure to supply identifying numbers (other than in case (1), above) is increased from $5 per failure to $50 per failure, but not to exceed $50,000 for all such failures in any calendar year.

The provision will be effective for returns the due date of which (without extensions) is after Dec. 31, 1982.

i. Extension of withholding to certain payments where identifying number not furnished or inaccurate (sec. 317 of the act).—Present law imposes a penalty of $5 per failure on any person who is required by regulations (1) to include his taxpayer identification number (TIN) in any return, statement, or document, (2) to furnish his TIN to another person, or (3) to include in any return or statement made with respect to another person the TIN of such other person, and who fails to comply with such requirement at the time prescribed. The penalty is not imposed if the failure is due to reasonable cause and not to due to willful neglect.

Under the act, withholding at source at a tax rate of 15 percent will be required if a taxpayer fails to supply a TIN or supplies an incorrect TIN to another person who must file certain types of information returns with respect to payments to the taxpayer. If a taxpayer fails to supply a TIN to the payor of a backup withholding payment or supplies an obviously incorrect number then the withholding obligation rules would apply immediately. Otherwise, a 15-day grace period would apply during which the payor will not be liable if it failed to withhold, or withholds where he had an obligation to do so. The types of payments subject to this withholding requirement (back-up withholding payments) generally would include the types of payments subject to the information reporting requirements. This withholding generally would not apply to payments made to the United States or any agency or instrumentality thereof, to any State or political subdivision thereof, to any tax-exempt organization, or to any foreign government or international organization.

Except in the case of payments of compensation, etc. for which information reporting is required under sec. 6041 (relating to information at the source generally) or sec. 6041A (relating to payment to independent contractors), this requirement for withholding would apply without regard to the reporting thresholds provided for the information returns.

Generally, payment of amounts subject to this new withholding provision would be treated as wages paid by an employer to an employee and subject to the various provisions applying to collection of income tax at the source on wages.

This provision will apply to payments made after Dec. 31, 1983.

j. Minimum penalty for extended failure to file (sec. 318 of the act).—Under present law, if a taxpayer fails to file a tax return on the date prescribed therefor (including extensions) and if there is an underpayment of the tax required to be shown on such return, then he is subject to a penalty of 5 percent of the underpayment per month (or fraction thereof) while the failure continues, but not more than 25 percent.

Under the act, if an income tax return is not filed within 60 days of the date prescribed therefor (with extensions), the penalty for failure to file will be at least $100 or the tax owed, which ever is less. This minimum penalty would not be imposed if the failure to file the return were due to reasonable cause.

The penalty will apply to returns due after Dec. 31, 1982.

k. Form of returns (sec. 319 of the act).—In general, returns required by the tax law must be made according to the forms and regulations prescribed by the Secretary. There is no statutory or regulatory requirement that returns be filed on magnetic tape or in other machine-readable form.

Under the act, the Secretary is required to prescribe regulations providing standards for determining which returns must be filed on magnetic media or in other machine-readable form. In providing these standards, the Secretary must take into account, among all other relevant factors, the ability of the taxpayer to comply, at a reasonable cost, with such a filing requirement. In no event may the Secretary require returns of the tax imposed under subtitle A (i.e., the income tax) by individuals, estates, and trusts, to be other than on paper forms.

3. Other penalty provisions

a. Penalty for promoting abusive tax shelters, etc. (sec. 320 of the act).—Present law contains no penalty provision specifically directed toward promoters of abusive tax shelters and other abusive tax avoidance schemes.

Under the act, a new civil penalty is to be imposed on persons who organize or sell any interest in a partnership or other entity or investment, when, in connection with such organization or sale, the person makes or furnished either (1) a statement, which the person knows or has reason to know is false or fraudulent as to any material matter with respect to the availability of any tax benefit said to be available by reason of participating in the investment, or (2) a gross valuation overstatement as to a matter material to the entity which is more than 200 percent of the correct value.

The penalty for promoting an abusive tax shelter is an assessable penalty equal to the greater of $1,000 or 10 percent of the gross income derived, or to be derived, from the activity.

The Secretary is given authority to waive all or part of any penalty resulting from a gross valuation overstatement upon a showing that there was a reasonable basis for the valuation and the valuation was made in good faith. This penalty is in addition to all other penalties provided for by law.

This provision will take effect on the day after the date of enactment.

b. Action to enjoin promoters of abusive tax shelters, etc. (sec. 321 of the act).—Present law provides that a civil action may be brought by the United States to enjoin any person who is an income tax return preparer who engages in certain prescribed acts.

The act permits the United States to seek injunctive relief against any person engaging in conduct subject to the penalty for organizing or selling abusive tax shelters (sec. 331 of the act and new code sec. 6700). Venue for these actions generally is the district in which the promoter resides, has his principal place of business, or has engaged in the conduct subject to penalty under sec. 6700.

This provision will take effect on the day after the day of enactment.

c. Procedural rules applicable to penalties under code secs. 6700, 6701, and 6702 (sec. 322 of the act).—Under present law, the burden of proof is on the Secretary in any proceeding in which the issue is whether an income tax return preparer has willfully attempted to understate the liability for tax of any person. Similarly, the burden of proof is generally on the Secretary to prove fraud. Under present law, the deficiency procedures generally apply to the collection of additions to tax, additional amounts, and nonassessable penalties.

The act provides district court review of the Secretary's assessment and notice and demand of (1) the abusive tax shelters promoter penalty, (2) the civil aiding and abetting penalty, and (3) the frivolous return penalty, before the full amount of such penalties can be collected if certain procedural requirements are met. In any proceeding involving the issue of whether any taxpayer is liable for such penalties, the burden is on the Secretary.

The provision takes effect on the day after the date of enactment.

d. Penalty for substantial understatement (sec. 323 of the act).—Under present law, penalties may be imposed on the failure to pay certain taxes shown on a return or required to be shown on a return, unless such failure is due to reasonable cause and not willful neglect. If the failure is due to negligence or fraud, additional penalties may apply. If a taxpayer makes a substantial property valuation overstatement which results in an underpayment of tax, then a penalty measured as a percentage of the underpayment resulting from the valuation overstatement generally is imposed without regard to fault.

Under the act, a penalty of 10 percent would be imposed on any substantial understatement of income tax. for this purpose, an understatement is the excess of the amount of income tax imposed on the taxpayer for the taxable year, over the amount of tax shown on the return. A substantial understatement of income tax exists if the understatement for the taxable year exceeds the greater of 10 percent of the tax required to be shown on the return for the taxable year, and $5,000 ($10,000 for corporations other than subchapter S corporations and personal holding companies).

The amount of the understatement will be reduced by the portion of the understatement that is attributable to (1) the treatment of any item for which there is or was substantial authority, or (2) any item for which there was adequate disclosure of the relevant facts on the return. In the case of a tax shelter, the reduction will apply only to the portion which the taxpayer believed was more likely than not to be the correct treatment. A tax shelter is defined as a transaction for which evasion or avoidance of inocme tax is the principal purpose.

The Secretary may waive all or a part of the penalty on a showing by the taxpayer that there was a resaonable basis for the understatement and the taxpayer acted in good faith.

The penalty is effective with respect to returns which have a due date after 1982.

e. Penalty for aiding and abetting the understatement of tax liability (sec. 324 of the act).—Present law provides a criminal penalty for willfully aiding in the preparation or presentation of a false or fraudulent return, or other document under the internal revenue laws. The penalty is a fine of up to $5,000 or 3 years imprisonment, or both, together with costs. There is no comparable civil penalty on persons who aid in the preparation of false or fraudulent documents. Income tax return preparers who willfully attempt to understate the liability for tax of any person are subject to a penalty of $500 per return.

The act provides for a new civil penalty on any person who aids in the preparation or presentation of any portion of a return or other document under the internal revenue laws which the person knows will be used in connection with any material matter arising under the tax laws, and which the person knows will (if used) result in any understatement of the tax liability of another person.

This penalty is $1,000 for each return or other document ($10,000 in the case of returns and documents relating to the tax of a corporation). In general, this penalty is in addition to all other penalties provided by law. However, if the return preparer penalties for negligence or intentional disregards of rules or regulations, or for willful attempt to understate the tax liability of any person, are imposed with respect to any document, this new penalty will not apply with respect to such document.

This provision will be effective on the day after the date of enactment.

f. Fraud penalty (sec. 325 of the act).—Under present law, if any portion of an underpayment of tax is due to fraud, a civil penalty is imposed (as an addition to tax) equal to 50 percent of the entire underpayment. If part of an underpayment is attributable to negligence or intentional disregard of rules and regulations, the penalty under present law is equal to 5 percent of the entire underpayment plus 50 percent of interest payable on the portion of the underpayment attributable to negligence or disregard of rules and regulations for the period beginning on the last date prescribed for payment of the tax and ending on the date of assessment of the tax. In the case of the windfall profit tax, both the negligence and the fraud penalty may apply to the same underpayment.

The act conforms the civil fraud penalty to the negligence penalty by providing that in addition to the 50-percent fraud penalty on the entire underpayment, there is a penalty equal to 50 percent of the interest payable on the portion of the underpayment attributable to fraud for the period beginning on the last date prescribed for payment of the tax (without regard to any extension), and ending on the earlier of the date of assessment or the date of payment of the tax. Under the act, the negligence penalty does not apply in any case in which the fraud penalty has been assessed.

Finally, the act provides that when a joint return is filed, the interest addition does not apply with respect to a spouse's tax unless some part of the underpayment was due to the spouse's fraud.

The provision applies to taxes the last day for payment of which (without regard to any extension) is after the date of enactment.

g. Penalty for frivolous returns (sec. 326 of the act).—Under present law, a taxpayer who files a protest return is subject to a penalty only if he or she also underpays his or her tax. Thus, if a taxpayer has paid at least the correct amount of tax through estimated tax or wage withholding, there is no penalty for filing a protest return.

The act provides for an immediately assessable penalty of $500 on any individual who files a frivolous return. The penalty applies only as to documents purporting to be returns that are patently improper and not in cases involving valid disputes with the Secretary.

The deficiency procedures, under which the taxpayer receives advance notice before the assessment, will not apply to this penalty. There is, however, a provision allowing district court review of the assessment on payment of 15 percent of the amount assessed and the filing of a claim for refund on the amount paid.

This penalty applies to documents filed after the date of enactment.

h. Adjustments to penalty relating to estimated tax provision (secs. 327 and 328 of the act).—Under present law, an individual required to pay estimated taxes is subject to a penalty for underpayment of such taxes if he fails to pay at least 80 percent of the total amount of each installment when due. The penalty does not apply, however, if the taxpayer pays (1) at least the tax shown on the preceding year's return (if such return was for a taxable year of 12 months); (2) 80 percent of the tax due by placing his income on an annualized basis; (3) an amount equal to 90 percent of the tax due using current year's tax rates applied to the actual income prior to the month in which the installment is paid; or (4) an amount equal to the tax computed using current year's rates applied to the facts and law applicable to the preceding year's return. A criminal penalty may also apply. There are no expressed exceptions to the criminal penalty.

In addition to paying estimated taxes when required, individuals are required to file declarations of estimated taxes. There is, however, no penalty for failure to file a declaration.

Under the act, any individual or corporation that fails to make any estimated tax payment would not be subject to the criminal penalty for such failure if the civil penalty for such failure is not applicable because an exception to the civil penalty applies. This provision is effective on the date of enactment.

The act provides that no civil estimated tax penalty may be imposed on an individual if the individual had no tax liability for the preceding taxable year, such taxable year was a taxable year of 12 months, and the individual was a U.S. citizen or resident for the entire year.

The requirement for filing a declaration of estimated tax is terminated after 1982. Other provisions of law will, however, continue to apply as if such declaration were filed. In addition, the requirement of present law that a taxpayer must pay 100 percent of each installment when due is modified to require payment only of an amount computed by taking into account the penalty provisions.

These provisions are effective for taxable years beginning after 1982.

i. Criminal penalties (sec. 329 of the act).—Under present law—(1) Any person who willfully attempts to evade or defeat any tax or the payment thereof is guilty of a felony and, if convicted, may be fined not more than $10,000 or imprisoned for not less than 5 years, or both.

(2) Any person who is required to pay any tax or estimated tax or keep records or report information and willfully fails to do so is guilty of a misdemeanor and is punishable by a fine of not more than $10,000 or imprisonment for not more than 1 year, or both.

(3) Any person who willfully files a false declaration under penalty of perjury, aids or assists in the preparation of a false or fraudulent document; falsely executes any document under the internal revenue laws; conceals goods, etc., to evade or defeat any tax; or does certain other acts, is guilty of a felony and upon conviction may be fined not more than $5,000 or imprisoned for not more than 3 years, or both.

(4) Any person who willfully delivers any false or fraudulent document to the Secretary, or does certain other acts, is guilty of a misdemeanor and may be fined not more than $1,000 or imprisoned for 1 year, or both.

The act increases these maximum fines. Thus, in (1) above, the maximum penalty is increased from $10,000 to $100,000 ($500,000 for corporations); the maximum penalty amount in (2) above is increased from $10,000 to $25,000 ($100,000 for corporations); the maximum fine in (3) above is increased from $5,000 to $100,000 ($500,000 for corporations); and the maximum fines in (4) above are increased from $1,000 to $10,000 ($50,000 for corporations).

These increases are effective with respect to offenses committed after the date of enactment.

j. Special rules with respect to certain cash (sec. 330 of the act).—Under present law, the Secretary may not generally assess and collect a tax deficiency unless he follows certain procedures designed to allow the taxpayer to first contest the existence and amount of the deficiency. These procedures include written notice of deficiency followed by a 90-day (or 150-day) period during which time the taxpayer may petition the Tax Court for review of the Secretary's determination. No assessment may be made until after this period has expired or until after a decision of the Tax Court is final.

Jeopardy and termination assessment procedures are provided when the Secretary believes the collection of a tax will be jeopardized by delay. These procedures permit immediate assessment and collection of the tax; that is, the taxpayer is denied the opportunity to contest the liability prior to payment. In both the jeopardy and termination assessment cases, the taxpayer is entitled to an expedited review of whether the determination of jeopardy was reasonable under the circumstances and whether the amount assessed and demanded was appropriate under the circumstances.

The act provides that the Secrtary can presume that the collection of an amount of income tax is in jeopardy, where an individual in physical possession of more than $10,000 of cash or its equivalent denies ownership of the cash and does not claim that such cash belongs to another person the identify of whom is readily ascertainable by the Secretary (and who acknowledges ownership). In such a case, the Secretary may presume, for purposes of the jeopardy or termination assessment provisions (1) that such cash represents gross income to a single individual for the taxable year of possession taxable at 50 percent rate, and (2) that the collection of the tax on such cash would be jeopardized by delay. The Internal Revenue Service cannot assess on the same cash twice.

Notices with respect to the assessment are given to the person found in possession of the cash. However, the true owner can come forward and challenge the assessment and will be retroactively substituted for the possessor for all purposes (including establishing lien priorities) as of the date of the original assessment. In addition, the true owner will continue to have the same rights as exist under present law to recover his cash.

This provision is effective the day after the date of enactment.

4. Administrative summons

a. Special procedures for third-party summonses and third-party recordkeepers (secs. 331 and 332 of the act).—Under present law, if an administrative summons is served on a third-party recordkeeper, then notice of the summons must also be given to the person whose records have been summoned (i.e., the taxpayer). The taxpayer can stay compliance with a third-party summons by notifying the recordkeeper in writing not to comply with the summons. To enforce the summons, the Secretary must then seek an order of a U.S. district court compelling compliance.

Under the act, a taxpayer whose records are summoned, and who wishes to prevent compliance with the summons by the recordkeeper, is required to begin a civil action in court to quash the summons not later than the 20th day after the day notice of the summons is given. No examination of the summoned records is allowed before the close of the 23d day after notice was given, or, if the proceeding to quash is begun, until the court so orders or the taxpayer consents. The ultimate burden of persuasion with respect to his right to enforce the summons remains on the Secretary.

The act also requires third-party recordkeepers to proceed to assemble summoned records upon receipt of the summons and to be prepared to produce the records on the date specified for their examination.

The provisions apply with respect to summonses initially served after Dec. 31, 1982.

b. Limitation on use of administrative summons (sec. 333 of the act).—Under present law, the Secretary may issue summonses for the purpose of determining liability for taxes due under the internal revenue laws unless the Internal Revenue Service has institutionally abandoned its civil tax case.

Under the act, the Secretary may not issue any summons or commence any action to enforce a summons if a Justice Department referral is in effect with respect to the person whose tax liability is in issue. The act provides that the purposes for which an administrative summons may be issued include the right to inquire into any offense connected with the administration or enforcement of the internal revenue laws.

This provision will be effective the day after the date of enactment.

5. Withholding and recordkeeping provisions relating to pensions and other retirement income

a. Withholding on pensions, annuities, and certain deferred income (sec. 334 of the act).—Under present law, income tax generally is not required to be withheld on pension or annuity payments. However, a recipient may elect to have tax withheld on annuity payments.

The act provides that payors generally will be required to withhold tax from the taxable part of payments made from or under a pension, etc., plan, an IRA, or a commercial annuity contract. Tax will be withheld on periodic payments in excess of $5,400 under the wage withholding tables. Tax on certain total distributions will be withheld under a schedule designed to reflect the special tax treatment accorded to lump-sum distributions, and tax on other non-periodic distributions will be withheld at a flat 10-percent rate.

Withholding will be required with respect to payments made after Dec. 31, 1982, unless the recipient elects not to have tax withheld. The act generally requires that payors notify recipients of the withholding rules and their rights to elect out.

Civil and criminal penalties for failure to withhold tax will not apply to any failure before July 1, 1983, if the payor made a good faith effort to withhold, and actually withholds from any subsequent 1983 payments sufficient amounts to satisfy the pre-July 1983 requirements. In addition, the act permits the Secretary to waive the withholding obligation on a case-by-case basis prior to July 1, 1983, if he finds the payor cannot comply without undue hardship.

b. Pension reporting requirements (sec. 334 of the act).—Under present law, distributions under a tax-qualified plan or annuity contract are required to be reported only if the amount includible in income totals $600 or more for the calendar year. Distributions from an IRA are required to be reported without regard to the amount of the distributions. Penalties generally apply to any person failing to file a required report.

The act provides for reporting of necessary information by employers and administrators of plans and issuers of insurance or annuity contracts from which taxable distributions can be made. Increased penalties apply to any person failing to file any required reports. The provision is effective for calendar years beginning after Dec. 31, 1982.

c. Pension recordkeeping requirements (sec. 334 of the act).—Under present law, no separate penalty is imposed for failure to maintain a data base sufficient to provide required reports.

The act imposes a new penalty if the data base needed for reports is not maintained whether or not reports are due for the period during which the recordkeeping failure occurs. However, no penalty is imposed for a recordkeeping failure that is due to a prior failure with respect to which the penalty has already been imposed, or which occurred before 1983, if all reasonable efforts have been made to correct the prior failure. The recordkeeping penalties will be effective on Jan. 1, 1985.

d. Partial rollovers of IRAs (sec. 335 of the act).—Distributions from qualified pension, etc., plans and IRAs are eligible for tax-free rollover treatment. However, under present law, distributions from an IRA are eligible for tax-free rollover treatment only if the entire amount of the distribution is rolled over to another eligible retirement plan, while distributions from qualified plans are eligible for tax-free rollover treatment to the extent of any amount so transfered.

Under the act, distributions from IRAs which are made after Dec. 31, 1982, are eligible for tax-free rollover treatment to the extent that the distribution is rolled over to another eligible retirement plan.

6. Transactions outside the United States

a. Court jurisdiction and enforcement of summonses in the case of persons residing outside the United States (sec. 336 of the act).—Under present law, an administrative summons may be directed to a U.S. person outside the United States. However, it may not be enforceable because the code specifically confers jurisdiction to enforce the summons on a district court only when a person "resides or is found" in a judicial district of the United States.

The act establishes jurisdicition for summons enforcement actions, involving U.S. citizens or residents living abroad, in the United States District Court for the District of Columbia. A citizen or resident of the United States who does not reside in any U.S. judicial district, and who is not found in any U.S. judicial district, is treated as residing in the District of Columbia for tax purposes relating to jurisdiction of courts and enforcement of summons.

The provision is effective on the date after the date of enactment.

b. Admissibility of documentation maintained in foreign countries (sec. 337 of the act).—Under present law, there is generally no special procedure to require timely production of documents held abroad.

The act adds a formal document request procedure that is intended to discourage taxpayers from delaying or refusing disclosure of certain foreign based information to the Internal Revenue Service. Under this procedure, if a taxpayer fails to substantially comply with a formal document request upon motion of the Secretary, a court in a civil proceeding must prohibit the introduction into evidence by the taxpayer of foreign-based documentation covered by the request, unless the documentation was provided to the Secretary within 90 days, or a later date by the Secretary, of the mailing of the request.

Foreign-based documentation is that which is outside the United States and which is relevant and material to the tax treatment of an examined item. It includes documents held by a foreign entity whether or not controlled by the taxpayer.

The request must be made in the course of an audit and after the normal request procedures have failed to produce the requested documentation. It must set forth the time and place for the production of the documentation, contain a statement of the reason the documentation previously produced (if any) is not sufficient, contain a description of the documentation being sought, and state the consequences to the taxpayer of the failure to produce the documentation.

The sanction of nonadmissibility does not arise if the taxpayer establishes that the failure to provide the documentation as requested by the Secretary is due to reasonable cause. The fact that a foreign jurisdiction would impose a civil or criminal penalty on the taxpayer (or any other person) for disclosing the requested documentation is not reasonable cause.

Any dispute about a formal document request may be resolved in judicial proceedings to quash the request at the time it is served.

The provision applies to formal document requests mailed after the date of enactment.

c. Penalty for failure to furnish information with respect to foreign corporations (sec. 338 of the act).—Under present law, a U.S. person who controls a foreign corporation is required to furnish the Internal Revenue Service with certain information concerning that corporation (sec. 6038(a)). The penalty for failure to furnish any required information is a 10-percent reduction of the U.S. person's creditable foreign taxes. Additional 5 percent reductions are provided if the failure to furnish information continues 90 days or more after notice to the U.S. person required to provide the information. The penalty is not available if it is shown to the satisfaction of the Secretary that reasonable cause exists for failure to furnish the required information on time.

The act adds a fixed-dollar penalty for failure of a U.S. share-holder of a foreign corporaton to furnish the Internal Revenue Service the required information. This penalty can be imposed in lieu of the foreign tax credit penalty (although both can be imposed). The penalty is $1,000 for each failure to furnish information for an annual accounting period (generally a taxable year) of the foreign corporation. If the failure continues for more than 90 days after notification by the Secretary, then there are additional $1,000 penalties for each 30-day period (or fraction thereof) during which the taxpayer continues to fail to produce the requested information, up to a total of $25,000. So long as it is shown to the satisfaction of the Secretary that reasonable cause for the failure exists, no penalty is due. The provision is effective for annual accounting periods ending after the date of enactment.

d. Information reporting requirements for corporations controlled by foreign persons (sec. 339 of the act).—Under present law, there is no specific statutory reporting requirement for a U.S. corporation (or a foreign corporation operating in the United States) that is controlled by a foreign person and that enters into transactions with related parties.

Under the act, a U.S. corporation (or a foreign corporation engaged in trade or business in the United States) controlled by a foreign person (defined to include certain possessions residents) are required to report certain transactions with affiliates.

The act imposes penalties for violation of this new reporting requirement that are similar to the act's new supplemental penalties for failure to supply information under the existing reporting requirement relating to controlled foreign corporations. Reasonable cause, as shown to the satisfaction of the Secretary, precludes imposition of this penalty.

This new reporting requirement applies to taxable years beginning after Dec. 31, 1982.

e. Returns with respect to foreign personal holding companies (sec. 340 of the act).—Under present law, certain information returns are required of officers, directors, and 50-percent U.S. shareholders of companies that are foreign personal holding companies at year's end. There is no civil penalty for failure to file.

The act gives the Commissioner flexibility in setting due dates and waiving duplicate filings for foreign personal holding company reports and returns. The act also makes changes in reporting requirements, including imposing reporting requirements on 10-percent shareholders. A $1,000 civil penalty for failure to file a proper return is imposed. The provision applies to taxable years of foreign corporations beginning after the date of enactment.

f. Authority to delay date for filing certain returns relating to foreign corporations and trusts (sec. 341 of the act).—Acquisition of a 5-percent interest (or an additional 5-percent interest) in a foreign corporation or the creation of or transfer of property to a foreign trust causes a U.S. person to have to file an information return (secs. 6046 and 6048). Beginning service as an officer or director of a foreign corporation creates a similar requirement. The returns are due 90 days after the triggering events.

The act gives the Commissioner flexibility to delay the date for reporting of certain transactions relating to foreign corporations and foreign trusts beyond the current due date.

The provision applies to returns due after the date of enactment.

g. Withholding of tax on nonresident aliens and foreign corporations—treaty benefits (sec. 342 of the act).—Under present law, a 30-percent tax is imposed on the gross amount of certain passive income which arises from U.S. sources and is paid to foreign persons. The 30-percent tax on such gross amounts is collected by withholding at the source (secs. 1441 and 1442).

Tax treaties between the United States and other countries commonly provide, on a reciprocal basis, for reduced rates or elimination of U.S. tax on various categories of passive income paid to residents of such other countries. Generally, under current regulations, a foreign recipient of U.S. source passive income may obtain a reduction or elimination of u.S. tax on such income under an applicable treaty if the recipient provides the payor or other person having control of such income with a completed Internal Revenue Service form 1001. Regulations prescribe a different method, the "address method," under which a reduced rate of tax is generally given for a payment to a recipient of U.S. source dividends who has an address in a country with which the United States has a tax treaty.

The act requires the Secretary to establish procedures to limit treaty benefits to those persons who are justifiably entitled to such benefits. The act also requires the Secretary to consider the refund system and the certification system as methods of limiting treaty benefits to those persons entitled to them. The Secretary is not limited to consideration of these methods; he is to consider other methods as well.

The provision requires the Secretary to establish procedures within 2 years of the date of enactment.

h. Technical amendment to section 905(c) (sec. 343 of the act).—The last sentence of sec. 905(c) appears to provide that interest on a U.S. tax underpayment triggered by a refund of foreign taxes begins to run before receipt of the refund. Other code provisions begin the running of interest on receipt of the refund and provide a penalty for failure to report a refund.

Under the act, the last sentence of sec. 905(c) is eliminated, effective retroactively for all years.

7. Modification of interest provisions

a. Daily compounding of interest (sec. 344 of the act).—Under present law, interest payable to or by the United States under the internal revenue laws is not compounded.

All interest payable under the internal revenue laws will be compounded daily. The change will also affect any other amounts computed by reference to the interest rate provided for in the code other than the penalty for failure to pay estimated taxes.

This compounding requirement will apply to interest accruing after Dec. 31, 1982, on amounts (including interest) remaining unpaid after that date. In a case in which the principal portion of an obligation is satisfied, and interest remains outstanding, such interest will, of course, be compounded.

b. Semi-annual determination of rate of interest (sec. 345 of the act).—Under present law, the rate of interest paid on underpayments, overpayments, and for certain other purposes under the internal revenue laws is determined once a year based on September's average predominant prime rate.

Under the act, interest rates are redetermined twice a year on the basis of the average adjusted prime rate charged by commercial banks during the 6-month period ending September 30 (effective January 1 of the succeeding calendar year), and March 31 (effective July 1 of the same calendar year).

The amendment is effective for adjustments taking effect after Dec. 31, 1982.

c. Restrictions on payment of interest for certain periods (sec. 346 of the act).—In general, under present law, interest on refunds, credits, and offsets runs from the date of overpayment or (in the case of a credit) to the due date of the amount against which the credit is taken. An overpayment resulting from a net operating loss carryback, net capital loss carryback, or credit carryback is treated as having occurred at the close of the year in which the carryback arose.

In the case of an underpayment of tax, interest generally runs from the last date prescribed for payment of the tax without regard to extensions, to the date the tax is paid.

Under the act, the general rule with respect to the payment of interest on overpayments is unchanged when the credit or refund is claimed in a timely filed return. However, when the return is late because it is filed after the due date (determined with regard to extensions), no interest is payable on the overpayment for any period prior to the date on which the return is filed. For this purpose, and for purposes of determining whether a refund has been made within 45 days after the return is filed, no retrun is treated as filed until filed in processible form.

Under the act, an overpayment resulting from a net operating loss carryback, a net capital loss carryback, or credit carryback is treated as having occurred on the due date (without extensions) of the return for the year in which the carryback arose. In the case of a refund, the return for the loss year is treated as not filed prior to the time the claim for refund therefor is filed. Thus, no interest will be paid on a refund claimed on a late return if the refund is made within 45 days after the claim for refund is filed.

The provisions regarding late returns and processible returns are effective for returns filed after the 30th day after the date of enactment. The provision regarding interest overpayments due to carrybacks is applicable to interest accruing 30 days after enactment.

8. Taxpayer safeguard provisions

a. Property exempt from levy (sec. 347 of the act).—Among other items, present law exempts from levy certain amounts of (1) fuel, provisions, furniture, and personal effects, etc.; (2) books and tools of a trade, business, or profession; and (3) wages, salary, or other income (code sec. 6334).

The act increases from $500 to $1,500 the exemption for fuel, provisions, furniture, and personal effects, etc. The exemption for books and tools of a trade, business, or profession is increased from $250 to $1,000. The exemption for wages, salary, and other income is increased from $50 per week and $15 for each dependent to $75 per week plus $25 for each dependent.

The provision applies to levies made after Dec. 31, 1982.

b. Release of liens (sec. 348 of the act).—Present law imposes no statutory time limit for the release of a lien (code sec. 6325).

The act provides that a lien must be released no later than 30 days after (1) tax liability has been fully satisfied or has become legally unenforceable, or (2) a bond has been accepted.

This provision is effective with respect to liens (1) which are filed after Dec. 31, 1982, (2) which are satisfied after Dec. 31, 1982, or (3) with respect to which the taxpayer after Dec. 31, 1982, requests the Secretary to issue a certificate of release on the grounds that the liablity was satisfied or legally unenforceable.

c. Notice before levy (sec. 349 of the act).—Levy upon property may be made if the taxpayer neglects or refuses to pay tax within 10 days after notice and demand. In the case of a levy upon property, other than salary or wages, there is no statutory provision that requires additional notice before levy (code sec. 6331).

The act provides that levy may be made upon the salary, wages, or other property of any person with respect to any unpaid tax only after the Secretary has notified the person in writing of his intention to make such levy. This notice must be given in person, left at the dwelling or usual place of business of such person, or sent by certified or registered mail to such person's last known address, no less than 10 days before the day of levy.

This provision applies to levies made after Dec. 31, 1982.

d. Redemption of property (sec. 349A of the act).—in general, present law provides that real property that has been sold after a seizure may be redeemed at any time within 120 days after the sale (code sec. 6337).

The act extends the period of time during which property that has been sold after a seizure may be redeemed from 120 days to 180 days.

This provision applies to property sold after the date of enactment.

e. Amount of damages in case of wrongful levy (sec. 350 of the act).—If there has been a wrongful levy and sale of real property belonging to a person other than the person against whom tax was assessed, present law allows the recovery of an amount not exceeding the amount received by the United States from the sale of the property (code sec. 7426).

The act provides for recovery of an amount not exceeding the greater of: (1) the amount received by the United States from the sale of the property, or (2) the fair market value of the property immediately before the levy. The provision applies to levies made after Dec. 31, 1982.

9. Other provisions

a. Disallowing deductions for drug dealing (sec. 351 of the act).—Ordinary and necessary trade or business expenses are generally deductible in computing taxable income. However, fines, illegal bribes and kickbacks, and certain other illegal payments are nondeductible (sec. 162).

Under the act, all deductions and credits for amounts paid or incurred in the illegal trafficking in drugs listed in the Controlled Substances Act are disallowed.

This provision is effective for amounts paid or incurred after the date of enactment.

b. Internal Revenue Service staff increases (sec. 352 of the act).—Public Law 97-92 enables the Internal Revenue Service to maintain an average of 85,363 positions during fiscal year 1982. The administration's budget request for fiscal year 1983 includes a net increase in Internal Revenue Service manpower of 3,310 average positions.

The act contains a sense of the Congress resolution that additional funds be appropriated to the Internal Revenue Service pursuant to the administration's request for fiscal year 1983 and that additional funds be provided in future years for the Internal Revenue Service sufficient to collect additional tax revenues of at least $1 billion in fiscal year 1984 and $2 billion in fiscal year 1985.

c. Reports on forms (sec. 353 of the act).—Under the act, the Treasury is required to study and report to Congress, no later than June 30, 1983, on methods of modifying the design of the forms used by the Internal Revenue Service to achieve greater accuracy in the reporting of income and the matching of information reports and returns with the actual income tax returns.

10. Tax treatment of partnership items (secs. 401-406 of the act)

For income tax purposes, partnerships are not taxable entities. Instead, a partnership is a conduit, in which the items of partnership income, deduction, and credit are allocated among the partners for inclusion in their respective income tax returns.

Partnerships are required to file an annual information return setting forth the partnership income, deductions, and credits, names and addresses of the partners, each partner's distributive share of these items, and certain other information required by the regulations.

a. Partnership proceedings.—Under the act, the tax treatment of items of partnership income, loss, deductions, and credits are determined at the partnership level in a unified partnership proceeding rather than in separate proceedings with the partners.

Return filing requirements. Partnerships will continue to file information returns and notify each partner of that partner's share of partnership income, loss, etc. Partners generally will be required to file returns consistent with the partnership return or notify the Internal Revenue Service of the inconsistency.

Administrative proceeding. A partnership level administrative proceeding will go through the same process of examination, audit, appeal, settlement, notice of final determination, etc., that generally applies to a tax audit. All partners will be notified by the IRS of the commencement of a partnership administrative proceeding, will be eligible to participate in the proceeding, and will be given notice by the IRS of the final partnership administrative adjustment (FPAA). If the partnership return lists more than 100 partners, the IRS will be required to provide notice only to partners with an interest in partnership profits of 1 percent or greater. A tax matters partner (TMP) will be designated (normally by the general partners, otherwise as prescribed) and will receive notice on behalf of other partners and be required to notify them of the commencement of a proceeding and notice of a FPAA. However, a notice group with an aggregate interest of 5 percent or more in partnership profits may designate a representative in lieu of the TMP to receive notice of a FPAA. The TMP will notify all partners of significant events during the course of an audit, such as conferences or settlement offers.

Settlements. The IRS must, upon settlement with any partner, offer consistent settlement terms to all other partners. The TMP may enter into a binding settlement on behalf of non-notice partners who have not formed a notice group, unless the non-notice partner notifies the IRS that the TMP is not authorized to act on his behalf.

Effect of final partnership administrative adjustment. The FPAA is binding on all partners (unless they are subject to separate proceedings under other portions of the proposal) if a petition for judicial review is not filed within 150 days. The IRS may thereafter, generally within a period of 1 year, assess any resulting adjustments to the partners' tax liability.

Judicial review of FPAA. Within 90 days after notice of an FPAA, the TMP may file a petition for judicial review. Other partners may not file suit during the 90-day period. Upon expiration of the 90 days, if the TMP does not file a petition, any other partner may file.

Petition may be filed in the Tax Court, the district court for the district in which the partnership has its principal place of business, or the Claims Court. Only one court acquires jurisdiction, and the choice of forum by the TMP always governs. Otherwise, if a petition is filed in the Tax Court, the Tax Court becomes the forum. Otherwise, the earliest filed petition determines whether the forum is the district court or the Claims Court. A partner filing in any forum other than the Tax Court must first pay the deficiency resulting from adjustments to his return to reflect the FPAA. Other partners, where the forum is not the Tax Court, are subject to assessment and collection.

Administrative adjustment requests. The act provides for an administrative adjustment request (AAR) to be filed within 3 years of the due date for the partnership return. An AAR functions as does a claim for refund. When it is filed by the TMP, it is filed on behalf of all the partners and the IRS may proceed to allow it and grant refunds or institute a partnership proceeding. Failure by the IRS to act within 6 months enables the partnership to file suit. Petition may be filed in the Tax Court, the Claims Court, or the appropriate district court and the scope of judicial review is limited to disallowed items to which the AAR relates. If an AAR is filed by any other partner, unless IRS commences a partnership audit, the items to which the request relates are treated as nonpartnership items and the partner may file a refund suit pursuant to sec. 7422, as under existing law.

Statute of limitations. The period of limitations for assessments attributable to partnership items generally is the later of 3 years from the filing of the partnership return or the last day for filing such return, extended by the period during which suit may be filed, by the pendency of court proceedings, and for 1 year thereafter. The assessment period will not expire with respect to any partner, if the IRS has mailed a timely notice of FPAA, until 1 year after the IRS is furnished the partner's name and address. The limitations period otherwise applicable may be extended by agreement (the TMP is authorized to enter into an extension agreement on behalf of all partners).

Small partnerships. The new partnership rules for administrative and judicial proceedings do not apply to partnerships with 10 or fewer partners each of whom is a natural person (other than a nonresident alien) or an estate, provided each partner's distributive share of any item is the same as his distributive share of all other items. A partnership eligible to be excluded under this provision may elect to be covered by the rules.

Other matters—

(1) Multi-tiered partnerships and pass-through partners.—Where one partnership (or a trust or subchapter S corporation) holds an interest in another partnership that is the subject of a partnership proceeding, the taxpayer whose liability is affected by the partnership determination is not the immediate partner. If such indirect partners are properly identified and their profits interests disclosed with the partnership return (or thereafter, pursuant to regulation), the IRS will deal with them as the parties in interest for all purposes of the proposals. Otherwise, such indirect partners are bound by any action taken with respect to the pass-through partner.

(2) Contest of computational adjustments.—While a partner is precluded from challenging the final administrative or judicial determination of partnership items, the partner may by claim for refund and by judicial proceeding seek redetermination of the correctness of any computational adjustment to his tax liability resulting from such determination. Substantive issues may not be raised in such proceeding.

(3) Regulatory authority.—The act authorizes regulations limiting its scope where treatment as partnership items would interfere with effective enforcement of the tax law. This authority extends to criminal investigations, jeopardy and termination assessments, and other areas presenting special enforcement considerations.

b. Foreign-based partnerships.—The act explicitly applies the partnership return filing requirement to any partnership which has U.S. partners (direct or indirect). Where the TMP resides outside the United States or the partnership books and records are kept outside the United States, failure to comply with the partnership return requirement or provide the return information on request will result in disallowance of partnership losses and credits to the partners. The Treasury Department would be given authority to waive the reporting requirement in appropriate cases. The act also requires reporting by a U.S. person who acquires or disposes of an interest in a foreign partnership.

c. Effective date.—The provisions relating to partnership proceedings and the partnership return filing requirements apply to partnership taxable years beginning after the date of enactment of the act.[8] However, if all partners request and the Treasury Department consents, these provisions will apply to the partnership taxable years ending after the date of enactment. The return requirement relating to acquisitions and dispositions of interests in a foreign partnership apply to any such changes after the date of enactment.

d. Windfall profit tax audits.—Under the act, windfall profit tax items are included as partnership audit items under regulations to be issued by the Treasury. Thus, the tax treatment of any partnership windfall profit tax item will be determined at the partnership level rather than the partner level. A partnership windfall profit tax item is any item relating to the computation of the windfall profit tax on crude oil produced by the partnership which the Treasury determines by regulation to be more appropriately determined at the partnership rather than the partner level.

Under regulations, the partnership will be authorized to act on behalf of its partners for purposes of the determination, examination, and collection of windfall profit tax. Thus, the partnership can be made responsible for certifying necessary withholding tax information to first purchasers and for filing quarterly and annual returns with respect to the partnership's production of domestic crude oil. When necessary, the partnership will be able to rely on certifications by its partners of their status under the windfall profit tax. On the election of one or more partners owning an interest in at least 5 percent of partnership income, this authorization will cease to apply for the entire partnership.

Each partner will remain primarily liable for the windfall profit tax on his allocable share of taxable crude oil produced by the partnership. The partner's liability will be abated to the extent of any payment of windfall profit tax by the partnership. In determining the liability of any partner for windfall profit tax purposes, each partner will be required to treat any partnership windfall profit tax item in a manner consistent with the treatment of that item on the partnership return unless the partner notifies the Treasury of an inconsistent position. Each partner will be required to certify to the partnership that partner's correct treatment under the exemption of independent stripper wells, the special rates on independent producers, the royalty owners exemption, and other producer-related provisions. The partnership will compute and pay the windfall profit tax on the assumption that the certifications given by the partners are correct.

The act will apply to determination, examination, and collection of windfall profit tax with respect to oil removed in taxable periods beginning after Dec. 31, 1982, unless the partnership, each partner, each indirect partner, and the Treasury consent to earlier application of the provisions.

D. PENSION PROVISIONS

1. Overall limits on contributions, benefits, and exclusions (secs. 235 and 245 of the act)

The act makes several changes to the overall limits on contributions and benefits for an employee under a tax-qualified pension, etc., plan. The dollar limit for annual additions to a profit-sharing and other defined contribution plans is reduced from $45,475 to $30,000.

With regard to defined benefit pension plans, the act reduces the dollar limit for annual benefits from $136,425 to $90,000, and requires that an interest rate of not less than the greater of 5 percent or the rate specified in the plan be used to determine whether alternative benefit forms (e.g., lump sum distributions) are within the annual benefit limit. Also, the dollar limit is to be actuarially reduced (using the same interest rate) if benefits commence before age 62 (increased from age 55), except that the dollar limit is not less than $75,000 for benefits commencing at age 55 or later. For ages below 55, the dollar limit is not less than the actuarial equivalent of a $75,000 annual benefit commencing at age 55. For benefits commencing after age 65, the dollar limit is increased (using an interest rate not exceeding the lesser of 5 percent or the rate specified in the plan) to the equivalent of the benefit limit as applied to benefits commencing at age 65.

The act suspends cost-of-living adjustments to the dollar limits for defined benefit plans and defined contribution plans until 1986, at which time the limits will be adjusted for post-1984 cost-of-living increases (as measured by the social security benefit index). In addition, employers may not currently deduct contributions to defined benefit plans to fund anticipated cost-of-living increases, and such anticipated increases cannot be taken into account in determining actuarial equivalents.

The act also reduces the aggregate limit for an individual who participates in a defined contribution plan and a defined benefit plan of the same employer from 1.4 (140 percent of the otherwise applicable separate dollar or percentage limit) to the lesser of 1.25, as applied only to the dollar limits, or 1.4, as applied under present law. In addition, the act provides a transitional rule to insure that contributions or benefits provided under the present-law higher limits will not effectively preclude future contributions or benefits under the lower limits provided by the act. Under this transitional rule, the Secretary of the Treasury is to prescribe regulations under which the numerator of the defined contribution plan fraction (as determined for the last year beginning before Jan. 1, 1983) is to be reduced, so that the sum of the fractions does not exceed the act's aggregate limit.

The act's provisions relating to the overall limits on contributions and benefits will apply to plan years beginning after Dec. 31, 1982, except that plan amendments will be required with repsect to plan years beginning after Dec. 31, 1983.

With respect to decedents dying after Dec. 31, 1982, the act also places a $100,000 aggregate limit on the estate tax exclusion for certain retirement benefits under qualified pension, etc., plans, tax-sheltered annuities, individual retirement accounts (IRAs), and certain military retirement plans.

2. Loans from retirement plans (sec. 236 of the act)

A qualified pension, etc., plan or a tax-sheltered annuity program generally is permitted to make reasonable loans to participatants other than owner-employees under an H.R. 10 plan or shareholder-employees under a subchapter S corporation plan. If a self-employed individual borrows from an H.R. 10 plan or if an individual borrows from an IRA, the loan is treated as a distribution, subject to the usual income tax rules.

The act generally provides that a loan received after Aug. 13, 1982, by a participant or beneficiary under a qualified plan, government plan, or tax-sheltered annuity which is to be repaid within 5 years is treated as a distribution only to the extent that the amount of the loan, when added to the outstanding loan balance with respect to the employee under all plans of the employer, exceeds the lesser of (1) $50,000, or (2) one-half of the present value of the employee's nonforfeitable accrued benefit under such plans, but not less than $10,000.

In addition, a loan made with respect to an employee under a qualified plan, etc., which is not required to be repaid within 5 years, is treated as a distribution. For this purpose, the period within which a loan is required to be repaid is determined at the time the loan is made. However, the act also provides an exception to the 5-year repayment rule to the extent that a loan made with respect to a plan participant is applied toward acquiring, constructing, or substantially rehabilitating any principal residence of the participant or a member of the participant's family.

Investments (including investments in residential mortgages) which are made in the ordinary course of an investment program will not be considered as loans, if the amount of the mortgage loan does not exceed the fair market value of the property purchased with the loan proceeds.

The act also provides a special transitional rule for qualified refunding loans (those loans made before Aug. 14, 1983, and applied to repay plan loans which fall due before that date). Qualified refunding loans will not be treated as distributions to the extent repaid before Aug. 14, 1983.

3. Parity under the qualfied plan rules for corporate and noncorporate employers; group-term life insurance

a. Rules for H.R. 10 plans repealed; additional qualification requirements for top-heavy plans (secs. 237-243 and 249 of the act).—Under present law, plans which benefit self-employed individuals, owner-employees, or shareholder-employees of subchapter S corporations are subject to additional, more restrictive, qualification requirements designed to limit benefits for such individuals and provide additional protections for rank-and-file employees.

For years beginning after 1983, the act generally eliminates distinctions in the tax law between qualified pension, etc., plans of corporations and those benefiting self-employed individuals (H.R. 10 plans) or shareholder-employees. The act (1) repeals certain of the special rules for H.R. 10 plans, (2) extends other of the special rules to all qualified plans, including those maintained by corporate employers, and (3) generally applies the remainder of the special rules, with appropriate modifications, only to those plans (whether maintained by a corporate or noncorporate employer) which primarily benefit the employer's key employees (top-heavy plans).

The special rules for H.R. 10 plans which are repealed include those which (1) set lower limits on contributions and benefits for self-employed individuals, (2) prevent certain H.R. 10 plans from limiting coverage to a fair cross section of employees, and (3) prohibit integration with social security. Thus, beginning in 1984, self-employed individuals will be allowed annual contributions of up to $30,000 under a defined contribution plan and may maintain a defined benefit plan without regard to the present-law restrictions (sec. 401(j)).

The special rules for H.R. 10 plans which are extended (with modifications) to all qualified plans are those under which (1) the payment of a participant's benefits must commence not later than the taxable year in which the participant attains age 70½, or if later, the year in which the participant retires, and (2) the tax rate applicable to employers for old age, survivors, and disabilty insurance (OASDI) under social security is the maximum rate at which employer contributions can be reduced under plans that are integrated with social security.

Under the special rules for H.R. 10 plans which generally are extended (with modifications) to top-heavy plans (1) a participant's compensation taken into account under the plan is limited to $200,000 (as adjusted, after 1985, for cost-of-living increases), (2) benefits for non-key employees must become nonforfeitable under either of two alternative schedules (3-year full vesting or 6-year graded vesting), (3) plan withdrawals by key employees before age 59½ generally are subject to an additional 10-percent income tax, and (4) plan distributions for a key employee must commence not later than age 70½.

The act's provisions relating to top-heavy plans also require that participants in a defined benefit plan who are not key employees must accrue an employer-provided minimum nonintegrated benefit of 2-percent of the employee's average annual compensation per year, not to exceed 20 percent. Under a top-heavy defined contribution plan, the employer generally must contribute to the plan on behalf of each participant who is not a key employee an amount not less than 3 percent of the participant's compensation (determined without regard to employer-provided social security benefits).

Unless certain requirements are met (including an extra minimum benefit or contribution), the aggregate limit for a key employee who participates in both a defined benefit plan and a defined contribution plan which are included in a top-heavy group is the lesser of 1.0 (as applied only to the dollar limits) or 1.4 (as determined under prior law).

Under the act, a defined benefit plan is a top-heavy plan for a plan year if, as of the determination date, the present value of the accumulated accrued benefits for participants who are key employees exceeds 60 percent of the present value of the accumulated accrued benefits for all employees. A defined contribution plan is a top-heavy plan for a plan year if the sum of the account balances of participants who are key employees exceeds 60 percent of the sum of the account balances of all employees. The determination date for any plan year generally is the last day of the preceding plan year. The act also provides rules under which two or more plans of a single employer are aggregated to determine whether each plan is top-heavy on account of the plans, as a group, being top-heavy.

Key employees generally include employees who (1) are officers (subject to certain limitations), (2) are one of the 10 employees owning the largest interests in the employer, (3) own more than a 5-percent interest in the employer, or (4) own more than a 1-percent interest in the employer and have annual compensation from the employer in excess of $150,000.

b. Certain organizations performing personal services.—

Organizations performing management functions (sec. 246 of the act). Effective for years beginning after Dec. 31, 1983, the act expands the class of employers which, under the rules for affiliated service groups (sec. 414(m)), are to be treated as a single employer for purposes of certain of the tax-law rules for qualified pension plans, etc. Under the act, if an organization's principal business is performing, on a regular and continuing basis, management functions for another organization, the two organizations are treated as a single employer. The provision applies only where the management functions are functions historically performed by employees, including partners or sole proprietors in the case of unincorporated trade or businesses.

Employee leasing (sec. 248 of the act). Effective for years beginning after Dec. 31, 1983, the act also provides that, for purposes of certain of the tax-law rules for qualified pension, etc., plans an individual (a leased employee) who performs services for another person (the recipient) may be treated as the recipient's employee where the services are performed pursuant to an agreement between the recipient and a third person (the leasing organization) who is otherwise treated as the individual's employer. The individual is to be treated as the recipient's employee only if the individual has performed services for the recipient (or for the recipient and persons related to the recipient) on a substantially full-time basis for a period of at least 12 months, and the services are of a type historically performed by employees in the recipient's business field.

Under the provision, contributions or benefits for the leased employee which are provided by the leasing organization under a qualified plan or simplified employee pension (SEP) maintained by the leasing organization are to be treated as if provided by the recipient to the extent such contributions or benefits are attributable to services performed by the leased employee for the recipient.

In addition, under a "safe harbor" rule, an individual who otherwise would be treated as a recipient's employee will not be treated as such an employee, if certain requirements are met with respect to contributions and benefits provided for the individual under a qualified money purchase pension plan maintained by the leasing organization.

Certain corporations performing personal services (sec. 250 of the act). Under the act, if a corporation, the principal activity of which is the performance of personal services substantially all of which are performed by employee-owners for or on behalf of another corporation, partnership, or entity (including related parties), is availed of for the principal purpose of evasion or avoidance of Federal income tax by securing for any employee-owner significant tax benefits which would not otherwise be available, then the Secretary may allocate all income, as well as such deductions, credits, exclusions, etc., as may be allowable, between or among the corporation and employee-owners involved. For this purpose, an employee-owner is defined as any employee who owns (after application of the attribution rules under sec. 318) more than 10 percent of the outstanding stock of the corporation.

The provision applies to taxable years beginning after Dec. 31, 1982.

c. Group-term life insurance (sec. 244 of the act).—The act also provides that the income exclusion for the cost of employer-provided group-term life insurance (sec. 79) will apply with respect to a key employee for taxable years beginning after Dec. 31, 1983, only if the life insurance is provided under a program of the employer which does not discriminate in favor of key employees as to (1) eligibility to participate, or (2) the type and amount of life insurance benefits provided under the plan. Group-term life insurance benefits will not be considered to discriminate as to amount merely because the amount of life insurance provided employees bears a uniform relationship to compensation. In addition, group term life insurance provided under a cafeteria plan (sec. 125) will not be considered to discriminate as to eligibility to participate if the eligibility rules for cafeteria plans are satisfied.

The Secretary of the Treasury is to periodically revise the tables for computing the amount includible in an employee's gross income on account of employer-provided group-term life insurance costs.

d. Disincorporation of personal service corporations (sec. 247 of the act).—The act provides a transitional rule under which personal service corporations may, during 1983 or 1984, complete a 1-month liquidation under code sec. 333 without the risk that the corporation would incur tax on its unrealized receivables. The income represented by unrealized receivables will retain its character as ordinary income and will be fully recognized by the distributee shareholder upon subsequent collection or other disposition.

4. Retirement savings for church employees (sec. 251 of the act)

Public schools and certain tax-exempt organizations (including churches) may contribute to a tax-sheltered annuity contract for an employee. Annual contributions excluded from an employee's income are limited to 20 percent of the employee's compensation multiplied by the number of the employee's years of service with the employer, reduced by amounts already contributed by the employer. In addition, under the overall limit on annual additions to tax-favored retirement savings arrangements, special one-time elections increase the limit for a year to allow contributions permitted under the exclusion allowance on account of prior years of service. Under prior law, the elections were not available to most church employees.

The act revises the tax-sheltered annuity rules as they apply to church employees for taxable years beginning after Dec. 31, 1981, by (1) providing a minimum exclusion allowance equal to the lesser of $3,000 or 100 percent of compensation for employees with adjusted gross income of $17,000 or less; (2) providing that all years of service with organizations that are part of a particular church are treated as years with one employer; (3) extending to all church employees the special catchup elections to increase the annual contribution limit; and (4) providing an additional election for church employees which increases the contribution limit to as much as $10,000 for any year, subject to a $40,000 lifetime cap. In addition, the act permits churches to maintain segregated defined contribution retirement savings programs pursuant to the tax-sheltered annuity rules, and provides a special retroactive correction period for church plans.

5. State judicial retirement plans (sec. 252 of the act)

State or local government employees may defer compensation under an eligible State deferred compensation plan, subject to prescribed annual limits. If a plan is not an eligible plan, amounts under the plan are includible in an employee's income when there is no substantial risk of forfeiture.

The act provides that participants in a qualified State judicial plan are not required to include benefits in gross income merely because there is no substantial risk that the benefits will be forefeited. The plan must be a mandatory retirement plan for State judges which has been continuously in existence since Dec. 31, 1978, and which meets certain requirements with regard to contributions and benefits.

6. Contributions for disabled employees (sec. 253 of the act)

Contributions to a tax-qualified profit-sharing or other defined contribution plan generally may not be made for an employee after the employee separates from the service of the employer.

For years beginning after Dec. 31, 1981, the act permits an employer to continue deductible contributions to a profit-sharing or other defined contribution plan for an employee (other than an officer, owner, or highly compensated individual) who is permanently and totally disabled, if the contributions are nonforfeitable when made.

7. Participation in group trusts by governmental plans (sec. 254 of the act)

Under prior law, a group trust was exempt from tax only if each of the participating trusts was a qualified trust forming a part of a qualified pension, etc., plan or an IRA.

For taxable years beginning after Dec. 31, 1981, the act permits a governmental retirement plan to participate in a group trust without regard to whether plan assets are held in trust or the plan is a qualified plan.

E. INSURANCE PROVISIONS

1. Reinsurance arrangements (secs. 255–258 of the act)

Under present law, a ceding company and the reinsurer may elect to report a modified coinsurance transaction for tax purposes as if the assets relating to the risks reinsured were transfered to the reinsurer, as if the premium income for the reinsured policies and the investment income on the assets were received directly by the reinsurer, and as if reserves to reflect liability for future claims were maintained by the reinsurer, although no transfer of assets actually occurs.

Also, under present law, a reinsurer (under either a modified coinsurance or a conventional coinsurance agreement between life insurance companies) is treated as having paid policyholder dividends to the extent it reimburses the ceding company for payment of such dividends.

The act repeals the special elective provisions for modified coinsurance arrangements. Existing arrangements will be treated as terminated on Jan. 1, 1982, and reinsurers will be permitted to pay any tax attributable to termination treatment in installments over a 3-year period. With respect to the reimbursement of policyholder dividends, the dividends will be treated as paid by the ceding company rather than the reinsurer. With respect to other reinsurance arrangements, the act denies any deduction (in computing taxable investment income) for interest paid on debt obligations issued by a ceding company in connection with such arrangements. Also, the Treasury Department is granted authority to recharacterize items in connection with a reinsurance arrangement between related taxpayers in order to reflect the proper source and character of taxable income. Finally, pre-1982 modified coinsurance transactions are grandfathered except in the event of fraud.

Generally, these provisions are effective as of Jan. 1, 1982, subject to certain special elective rules. However, the special allocation authority for related party reinsurance contracts applies to contracts entered into after the date of enactment.

2. Policyholder dividends (sec. 259 of the act)

Under present law, the deduction for policyholder dividends (and certain other special deductions) is limited to $250,000 plus the amount by which gain from operations (computed without regard to these deductions) exceeds taxable investment income.

The act increases the $250,000 limit to $1 million. The limit must be allocated among members of an affiliated group of corporations and is also phased out for larger companies (between $4 million and $8 million in dividends paid). Alternatively, at the annual election of the taxpayer, the amount of special deductions is limited to the sum of 100 percent of the policyholder dividends credited to qualified pension plans, the statutory amount of $1 million (subject to the affiliated group and phaseout rules), and 77½ percent of the policyholder dividends paid by mutual companies on other than pension business or 85 percent of policyholder dividends and the special deduction for nonparticipating contracts for stock companies. These provisions apply for a 2-year period (1982–83).

3. Life insurance reserves and contract liabilities (secs. 250 and 267 of the act)

Under present law, the computation of reserves is taken into account for several purposes. First, taxpayers may revalue life insurance reserves computed on a preliminary term basis to a net level premium basis under an approximate revaluation formula (reserves for other than term insurance are increased by $21 per $1,000 insurance in force, less 2.1 percent of reserves under such contracts). Second, in computing reserves for certain contracts, taxpayers may reflect the future liability for interest (which may be guaranteed for more than 1 year) in excess of the assumed rate for such contracts. Third, life insurance companies may allocate investment yield to pension contracts on the basis of the current earnings rate or higher guaranteed rates of interest depending on whether the contracts have permanent purchase rate guarantees. Fourth, for purposes of qualifying as a life insurance company for tax purposes, present law requires that more than 50 percent of a company's total reserves must consist of life insurance reserves.

The act revises the approximate revaluation formula for preliminary term reserves by permanently reducing the revaluation from $21 to $19 per $1,000 of other than term insurance in force, for business written after Mar. 31, 1982. For 1982 through 1983, except for a special transition rule, no reserve deductions will be allowed for excess interest guaranteed beyond the close of a taxable year for guarantees made after July 1, 1982. For 1983, the act eliminates the so-called "double-dip" available under present law by providing that the amount excludable from investment yield for group pension contracts is limited to the amount actually credited to the contracts. Finally, for any taxable year ending before Jan. 1, 1985, the act provides that life insurance company status for a company will not be changed by treating reserves for group pension contracts without permanent annuity purchase rate guarantees as not being insurance reserves.

4. Menge formula (sec. 261 of the act)

Under present law, a mechanical arithmetic adjustment, commonly called the "Menge" formula, is used to compute the amount of adjusted life insurance reserves. The amount computed is then used in determining the policyholders' share of investment yield and accordingly affects the computation of a life insurance company's taxable investment income. For a 2-year period (1982–83), the act provides a "geometric" Menge formula to compute adjusted life insurance reserves for purposes of allocating investment yield to policyholders.

5. Consolidated returns (sec. 262 of the act)

Under present law, two or more affiliated domestic life insurance companies may elect to file a consolidated return. For a 2-year period (1982–83), the act provides that a "bottom-line" method of consolidation is allowed for determining consolidated life insurance company taxable income. That is, taxable income first is determined for each component member of the affiliated group and then consolidated by adding those separate company taxable incomes. Further, the Internal Revenue Service cannot disturb a bottom-line reporting position taken in a consolidated return filed for taxable years beginning before 1981 for returns (including amended returns) filed before July 1, 1982 and for taxable years beginning in 1981 for returns filed before Sept. 16, 1982.

6. Allowance of deduction for excess interest (sec. 264 of the act)

The Internal Revenue Service has ruled that excess interest credited by an insurance company with respect to certain deferred annuity contracts is a policyholder dividend subject to the statutory deduction limitation, while taxpayers have taken the position that excess interest is fully deductible as an increase in reserves for guaranteed contractual benefits.

The act allows a deduction for 100 percent of the interest credited to qualified annuities if it is guaranteed in advance, at a fixed rate or in accordance with a formula, for a period of not less than 12 months. For purposes of this deduction, an annuity contract is "qualified" if it is not a pension plan contract, involves life contingencies, is nonparticipating under State law, and provides for the payment of excess interest. A participating contract, meeting all other requirements, may also be treated as a qualified contract at the election of the taxpayer, but the interest deduction is limited to 100 percent of the permanently guaranteed rate of interest and 92½ percent for any interest credited in excess of the guaranteed rate.

Subject to certain transition rules, these provisions apply to taxable years beginning after Dec. 31, 1981.

7. Amounts received under annuity contracts (sec. 265 of the act)

Under present law, taxation of interest or other current earnings on a policyholder's investment in an annuity contract generally is deferred until annuity payments are received or amounts characterized as income are withdrawn. Amounts paid out before the annuity starting date are first a return of capital and are taxable (as ordinary income) only after investment in the contract is recovered. There is no tax penalty for withdrawals or surrenders before the annuity starting date or before a certain age.

The act provides that amounts received before the annuity starting date will be treated first as withdrawals of income earned on investments to the extent of such income, the remainder being treated as a return of capital. Likewise, loans under the contract, or amounts received upon assignment or pledging of the contract, will be treated as amounts received under the contract. These provisions apply as of Aug. 31, 1982, but do not apply to income amounts allocable to investments made before Aug. 14, 1982, to endowment of life insurance contracts (except to the extent prescribed in regulations), or to contracts purchased under qualified pension plans.

In addition, the act imposes a penalty on certain distributions from an annuity contract. The penalty will be equal to 5 percent of the amount includible in income, to the extent the amount is allocable to an investment made within 10 years of the receipt. However, the penalty will not apply to a distribution that is (1) made on or after the policyholder reaches 59½; (2) made to a beneficiary on or after death of the policyholder; (3) attributable to the policyholder becoming disabled; (4) a payment under an annuity for life or at least 5 years; (5) from a qualified pension plan; or (6) allocable to an investment before Aug. 14, 1982. Also, the penalty only applies to distributions made after Dec. 31, 1982.

8. Flexible premium contracts (sec. 266 of the act)

Under present law, gross income does not include proceeds of a life insurance contract paid by reason of the death of the insured. The act provides mandatory guidelines for determining whether a death benefit paid under a life insurance contract that provides for payment of one or more premiums not fixed by the insurer as to both timing and amount (a flexible premium life insurance contract) should be excluded from gross income. In addition to providing a life insurance benefit, such contracts can also provide benefits for guaranteed insurability, accidental death, family term coverage, or waiver of premium; they do not provide life insurance to the extent they provide any annuity benefits other than as settlement options. The guidelines contain alternative tests which a contract must meet at all times in order to be considered life insurance thereunder. The first test sets standards for both the amount of premiums that can be paid and the amount of pure death benefit required. The second test sets a standard for the cash value of the contract. The act also provides computational rules that must be followed for purposes of applying the guidelines, as well as special provisions for correcting errors so that a contract can meet the guideline tests. Except for some transition rules, the guidelines are applicable for flexible premium contracts issued before Jan. 1, 1984.

9. Indeterminate premium policies (sec. 263(b) of the act)

In a private letter ruling issued in June 1982, the Internal Revenue Service held, among other things, that the excess of the maximum premium chargeable over the premium actually collected should be treated as a distribution of policyholder dividends which is paid back as a premium to the company. The act provides grandfather treatment so that, for taxable years beginning before 1982, amounts that could have been charged as a premium or mortality charge, but were not, will not be included in premium income.

10. Underpayments of 1982 estimated taxes (sec. 268 of the act)

Under present law, a nondeductible penalty is imposed on underpayments of estimated taxes. The act provides that the underpayment penalty will not apply to underpayment periods ending before Dec. 15, 1982, to the extent an underpayment is created or increased by the provisions of the act affecting life insurance companies.

F. EMPLOYMENT TAX PROVISIONS

1. Independent contractors (secs. 269 and 270 of the act)

Treatment of real estate agents and direct sellers.—The act provides that salespersons who are licensed real estate agents and individuals who are direct sellers will be treated, for Federal income and employment tax purposes, as self-employed persons (and not as employees) if substantially all their remuneration is directly related to sales or other output and their services are performed pursuant to a written contract providing that they will not be treated as employees for Federal tax purposes. The provision applies to services performed after 1982.

Interim provisions relating to classification controversies.—Sec. 530 of the Revenue Act of 1978 provided that taxpayers who had a reasonable basis for not treating workers as employees in the past could continue such treatment without incurring employment tax liabilities. The provision expired on June 30, 1982.

The act indefinitely extends the interim provisions of sec. 530 of the Revenue Act of 1978 from July 1, 1982, until such time as the Congress enacts legislation concerning the classification of workers as independent contractors or employees.

Certain employment tax liabilities.—If a worker reclassification occurs under present law, the employer generally is responsible for all employment tax liabilities (income tax withholding, both the employer's and employee's share of FICA taxes, and FUTA taxes) with respect to the reclassified worker.

The act provides that an employer will be liable for 1.5 percent of wages and 20 percent of the worker's share of FICA tax that should have been withheld if the employer erroneously treated the worker as a nonemployee for income tax and social security tax purposes. These amounts are doubled if no information returns are filed. The reduced liability does not apply if the employer treats a worker as a nonemployee with intentional disregard of the law. The provision is effective on enactment, but does not apply to assessments made before Jan. 1, 1983.

2. Federal unemployment tax (FUTA) provisions

a. FUTA rate and wage base (secs. 271–275 of the act).—Under FUTA, employers are subject to a payroll tax of 3.4 percent (a permanent tax of 3.2 percent and a temporary extended benefit tax of 0.2 percent) of the first $6,000 of wages per employee per year. If a State unemployment insurance law meets requirements of Federal law, employers in that State generally receive a 2.7 percent credit against the Federal tax, for a net Federal tax of 0.7 percent.

Sixty-five percent of the revenue raised by FUTA is allocated to the Employment Security Administration Account (ESAA), and 35 percent is allocated to the Extended Benefits Account (EUCA). Upon repayment of the Federal general revenue advances to EUCA, the 0.2 percent temporary tax will be eliminated and the allocation to EUCA will be reduced to 10 percent of the revenue raised by the Federal unemployment tax.

A State that has depleted its own unemployment funds may receive Federal loans as necessary to pay regular State benefits. States that borrow funds have 2 to 3 years to repay the loan, depending on the month the loan is received. If a State does not fully repay all loans within the 2 to 3 year period, employers in the State become subject to an annual reduction in the offset credit against the gross Federal unemployment tax rate of at least 0.3 percent. This means the net Federal tax rate, currently 0.7 percent, becomes subject to annual increases of a least 0.3 percent, up to a maximum of 3.4 percent, until sufficient revenue has been raised through such increases to repay the State's entire outstanding loan balance.

There are two potential credit reductions that are in addition to the annual 0.3 percent reduction. In the fourth year, in addition to another 0.3 percent reduction, employers in the State face a reduction equal to the amount that 2.7 percent exceeds the State's average tax rate on taxable wages in the calendar year to which the reduction applies. In the fifth year and thereafter, employers face a reduction, in addition to another 0.3 percent, equal to the higher of the amount of the additional fourth year reduction or the amount that the State's 5-year benefit cost rate exceeds the State's average tax rate on taxable wages in the calendar year to which the reduction applies. (The benefit-cost rate is benefits divided by taxable wages.)

Effective Apr. 1, 1982, through Dec. 31, 1987, States must pay interest on new Federal unemployment loans that are not repaid by the end of the fiscal year in which they are obtained. The interest rate is the same rate paid by the Federal Government on State reserves in the unemployment trust fund for the quarter ending December 31 of the preceding year, but not higher than 10 percent per annum. Interest payments are credited to the General Fund of the U.S. Treasury.

Under the act, effective for remuneration paid after Dec. 31, 1982, the FUTA wage base is increased to $7,000 and the tax rate is increased to 3.5 percent. This increases the net Federal tax to 0.8 percent. In order for employers to qualify for the full 2.7 percent credit against the Federal tax, States will have to have a State unemployment tax wage base of at least $7,000.

Effective for remuneration paid after Dec. 31, 1984, the Federal tax rate is increased to 6.2 percent (a permanent tax of 6.0 and an extended benefit tax of 0.2 percent) and the credit to 5.4 percent. This will require that States could not assign to an employer a tax rate below 5.4 percent except on the basis of experience rating. However, States that, under State law in effect as of Aug. 10, 1982, allow certain specified industries to pay a non-experienced based State unemployment tax rate that is below 5.4 percent could provide for such industries to reach gradually the new 5.4 standard tax rate. Annual increases in the State unemployment tax rate for such industries could be limited to no less than 20 percent of the difference between the rate paid by an employer as of Aug. 10, 1982 and 5.4 percent.

The allocation of Federal unemployment tax revenues among accounts in the Federal trust fund is modified to provide that 60 percent of the revenue raised by the 0.8 percent tax rate (or 0.48 percentage points) will be allocated to the Employment Security Administration Account (ESAA) and 40 percent (or 0.32 percentage points) to the Extended Benefits Account (EUCA).

The act allows States to make Federal unemployment loan repayments from State trust fund accounts in lieu of further reductions in the credit against the gross Federal unemployment tax rate, provided several requirements are met. First, the State account must have sufficient funds or sufficient income to enable it to repay an amount equal to at least the sum that the credit reduction would have generated plus any advances made to the State during the year. Second, after making this repayment, the State must retain enough funds in its account to pay all State benefits for the next 3 months (from November 1). Finally, the State must have made a change in its law, after the date of enactment of the act, and after receiving the first advance, that has resulted in an increase in the solvency of its unemployment compensation system.

The act drops the additional credit reduction based on the State's previous 5-year benefit cost rate that begins in the fifth year a State is subject to annual reductions in the credit against the gross FUTA because of outstanding Federal unemployment loans. This amendment applies to a debtor State in any tax year, beginning after Dec. 31, 1982, in which the State has taken no action during the 12-month period ending on September 30 which has reduced the solvency of the State unemployment trust fund.

Effective for interest due after Dec. 31, 1982, the act permits States with high unemployment to reduce payments of interest on Federal unemployment loans to 25 percent of the amount due in any year, and thereby extend the payment of the total interest obligation over a 4-year period. (Interest would be charged on any deferred amount.) A State will be able to extend payment of interest due in any calendar year in which the State insured unemployment rate equaled or exceeded 7.5 percent during the first 6 months of the preceding calendar year.

b. Exclusion from FUTA of wages paid to certain students (sec. 276 of the act).—Under current law, wages paid to a student under age 22 who is enrolled full-time in a work study or internship program are exempted from the Federal unemployment tax (FUTA) if the work performed is an integral part of the student's academic program.

The act exempts from FUTA tax any wages paid to a student enrolled full-time in a work-study or internship program, regardless of age, for work that is an integral part of the student's academic program, effective for services performed after the date of enactment. In addition, for tax year 1983 only, the act exempts from FUTA wages paid by certain summer camps to employees who are full-time students.

c. Extension of exclusion from FUTA of wages paid to certain alien farmworkers (sec. 277 of the act).—Under the Immigration and Nationality Act, residents of foreign countries who do not intend to abandon such residency may be admitted to the United States to work for a temporary period of time during the peak agricultural crop seasons. Prior to 1982, wages paid to such alien farmworkers were excluded from Federal unemployment (FUTA) taxes.

The act extends for 2 years—from Jan. 1, 1982, to Jan. 1, 1984—the provision of prior law that excluded wages paid to certain alien farmworkers from FUTA taxes. The provision is effective on the date of enactment.

3. Extension of social security hospital insurance taxes and medicare coverage to Federal employees (sec. 278 of the act)

Under present law, Federal employees generally are not subject to social security hospital insurance taxes, nor does their employment qualify them for medicare coverage.

Under the act, Federal employment is subject to the hospital insurance portion of the FICA tax, effective for remuneration paid after Dec. 31, 1982, and the newly covered Federal employment will be used in determining eligibility for protection under medicare part A (hospital insurance). A transitional provision provides credit for additional hospital insurance quarters of coverage for certain Federal employees who perform service during and before January 1983, and who otherwise would not qualify for medicare protection even though they have made hospital insurance tax contributions based on their Federal employment.

G. EXCISE TAX PROVISIONS

1. Airport and airway taxes (secs. 279–281 of the act)

Present law imposes a 5-percent tax on domestic air passenger tickets, the revenues from which go into the general fund. In addition, present law imposes a 4-cents-per-gallon tax on gasoline used by noncommercial aviation and taxes on aircraft tires and tubes; the revenues from these taxes currently go into the Highway Trust Fund.

a. Tax provisions.—The act makes the following changes in aviation excise taxes through Dec. 31, 1987: (1) increases the domestic air passenger ticket tax to 8 percent; (2) reimposes the 5-percent tax on air freight waybills; (3) reimposes the $3 per person international departure tax; (4) increases the tax on noncommercial aviation gasoline to 12 cents per gallon; (5) imposes a 14-cents-per-gallon tax on other noncommercial aviation fuels; (6) continues the tax on aircraft tires and tubes at present rates; and (7) provides an exemption from the fuels and air passenger ticket taxes for helicopters not utilizing Federal-aid airports or the Federal aviation system where used in (a) timber operations or (b) hard mineral exploration or development.

Three modifications are made in the application of the air passenger ticket tax. First, the 6-hour layover rule is increased to 12 hours for purposes of determining whether the flight is treated as uninterrupted international travel subject only to the departure tax (i.e., not subject to the domestic ticket tax).

Second, the Secretary of the Treasury is granted the authority to waive the 225-mile zone rule if Canada or Mexico enters into a "qualified agreement" regarding the tax to be applied to persons traveling by air between the United States and that country, with the objective of eliminating double taxation of travel between the countries or within the 225-mile zone.

Third, the requirement that the ticket fare and tax be shown by trip segments is repealed, effective from the date of enactment. The requirement for separately showing the total airfare and total ticket tax is retained.

The tax changes are effective for tickets, waybills, and fuels purchased after Aug. 31, 1982.

b. Trust fund provisions.—Revenues from these aviation excise taxes are appropriated to the Airport and Airway Trust Fund, effective Sept. 1, 1982, through Dec. 31, 1987. The act also transfers the Airport and Airway Trust Fund statute to the Internal Revenue Code, effective Sept. 1, 1982, and extends the trust fund expenditure authority through Sept. 30, 1987. The trust fund expenditure purposes are updated to include the changes made in the Airport and Airway System Development Act of 1982 (title V of the act).

2. Temporary increase in cigarette excise taxes (sec. 283 of the act)

Present law (sec. 5701) imposes a manufacturers excise tax equal to $4 per thousand (8 cents per pack) on small cigarettes (i.e., cigarettes weighing no more than 3 pounds per thousand). Generally, a tax equal to $8.40 per thousand is imposed on large cigarettes, except that higher rates apply to large cigarettes that exceed 6.5 inches in length.

The act temporarily doubles the excise taxes on small and large cigarettes, effective during the period Jan. 1, 1983 through Sept. 30, 1985. The act also imposes a special floor stocks tax on cigarettes removed before Jan. 1, 1983, and held for sale on that date. The floor stocks tax is equal to the excess of the new tax rates over the lower pre-1983 rates.

3. Temporary increase in telephone excise tax (sec. 282 of the act)

Under present law (sec. 4251), the excise tax on local and long-distance telephone and teletypewriter services is 1 percent in 1982 through 1984. The tax is scheduled to expire after 1984.

The act increases the telephone excise tax to 3 percent for calendar years 1983–85, and terminates the tax after 1985.

4. Windfall profit tax provisions

a. Windfall profit tax TAPS adjustment repeal (sec. 284 of the act).—Under present law, the windfall profit tax base price of Sadlerochit oil is adjusted upward by the amount by which the Trans-Alaska Pipeline System (TAPS) tariff falls below $6.26.

Under the act, the TAPS adjustment is repealed effective for oil removed after Dec. 31, 1982.

b. Windfall profit tax on Alaska Native corporations (sec. 291 of the act).—Under present law, certain domestic crude oil is exempt from the windfall profit tax if the producer is a native corporation "organized under" the Alaska Native Claims Settlement Act (as in effect on Jan. 21, 1980).

The act clarifies this exemption by providing that certain domestic crude oil the producer of which is a corporation "organized pursuant to" the Alaska Native Claims Settlement Act (including a wholly owned subsidiary) is exempt Indian oil within the meaning of the windfall profit tax.

H. OTHER PROVISIONS

1. Exclusion from income of National Research Service Awards (sec. 285 of the act)

Amounts received as National Research Service Awards were treated, under the Revenue Act of 1978, as excludible scholarships or fellowship grants. That exclusion, as subsequently extended, was effective for awards made through 1981. The act extends the temporary exclusion from income for National Research Service Awards for 2 additional years (i.e., for awards made through 1983).

2. Annual accrual accounting method for certain partnerships (sec. 230 of the act)

Farming corporations generally are required to use the accrual method and are required to capitalize preproductive period expenses. When the restriction was first provided corporations were permitted to continue to use the "annual" accrual method and deduct currently preproductive period expenses for certain farming businesses. Under present law, if a corporation which is eligible to use the annual accrual method for a farming business transfers the business to a partnership with other corporations, the partnership is not allowed to continue to use the annual accrual method for the business.

Under the act, a partnership principally engaged in the business of growing sugarcane and consisting solely of corporations (other than personal holding companies or subchapter S corporations) is permitted to use the annual accrual method for a farming business covered by the original grandfather provision. This provision applies to taxable years beginning after 1982.

3. Certain payments to foreign government officials or employees (sec. 288 of the act)

Under present law, taxpayers cannot deduct payments to foreign government officials or employees which would be illegal under U.S. law, if U.S. law applied (sec. 162(c)).

Under the act, payments to foreign government officials or employees which are otherwise deductible will not be disallowed on grounds of illegality under U.S. law unless those payments are illegal under the Foreign Corrupt Practices Act. The provision applies to payments made after the date of enactment.

4. Debt management provisions (sec. 289 of the act)

a. Rate of interest on U.S. savings bonds.—The Secretary of the Treasury, with the approval of the President, presently may increase the investment yield on any U.S. savings bond above the current rate in any 6-month period by no more than 1 percentage point (annual rate, compounded semiannually).

The act provides that the Secretary of the Treasury, with the approval of the President, is allowed to fix the investment yield on any U.S. savings bond. The Secretary also is authorized to provide for increases and decreases in the yield on any outstanding U.S. savings bond. With this authority, however, the Secretary may not decrease the yield on any bond below the minimum yield guaranteed at the time of its issuance for the period the bond is held. This provision is effective on enactment.

b. Long-term U.S. bonds.—Bonds are defined under present law as obligations of the United States which have a maturity when issued that is longer than 10 years. The rate of interest that may be paid under present law on a bond may not exceed 4¼ percent, except that up to $70 billion in outstanding bonds with rates of interest above 4¼ percent may be held by the public.

The act provides an additional $40 billion increase in the exception from the interest rate ceiling. This action raises the exception to $110 billion. All bonds issued under the additional exception must be issued in registered form. This provision is effective on enactment.

5. Disclosure of tax returns (secs. 356–358 of the act)

a. Disclosure for nontax criminal investigation purposes.—Present law restricts the disclosure of tax returns and return information. In general, tax information may be disclosed to Justice Department personnel, for nontax criminal investigation purposes, only pursuant to the grant of an ex parte order by a U.S. district court judge (sec. 6103(i)). However, certain tax information that is received by the Internal Revenue Service from a party other than the taxpayer may be disclosed upon written request. Moreover, the IRS may disclose certain tax information on its own initiative.

The act (1) modifies the standards for the granting of an ex parte order for the disclosure of tax returns and return information and allows U.S. district court magistrates, as well as judges, to issue those orders; (2) expands the number of personnel who are permitted to request disclosure; (3) allows the disclosure of tax information, pursuant to court order, for the purpose of locating Federal fugitives from justice; and (4) provides additional authority for the IRS to disclose tax information, on its own initiative, in emergency circumstances. These provisions are effective on the day after the date of enactment.

b. Civil damages for unauthorized disclosures.—Present law provides that a person who knowingly or negligently makes an unauthorized disclosure of tax returns or return information may be sued in a civil action for damages in a U.S. district court (sec. 7217).

The act provides that if a U.S. officer or employee knowingly or negligently makes an unauthorized disclosure of tax information, the wronged party will be permitted to bring a civil action for damages against the United States (rather than against the officer or employee). The provision is effective for disclosures made after the date of enactment.

c. Disclosure for use in certain GAO audits.—The General Accounting Office (GAO) currently has access to tax information for the purpose of auditing the Internal Revenue Service, and for purposes of auditing how other Federal agencies safeguard tax information (sec. 6103(i)(6)).

The act expands the GAO access to tax information for the purpose of auditing the programs or activities of another Federal agency. The provision is effective on the day after the date of enactment.

6. Veterans organizations (sec. 354 of the act)

Under present law, a domestic post or organization of war veterans (or an auxiliary unit or society of, or a trust or foundation for, such post or organization) is tax exempt if at least 75 percent of its members are war veterans and substantially all the other members are veterans or cadets, or are spouses, widows, or widowers of such individuals, and if no part of its net earnings inures to the benefit of any private individual (sec. 501(c)(19)).

The act modifies the membership requirement to allow tax exemption for a veterans organization as long as 75 percent of its members are past or present members of the U.S. Armed Forces. Also, it allows exemption for any veterans associations founded before 1880, 75 percent of the members of which are past or present members of the U.S. Armed Forces, and the primary purpose of which is to provide insurance and other benefits to veterans and their dependents. The provision is effective on the date of enactment.

7. Amateur athletic organizations (sec. 286 of the act)

Athletic organizations may qualify for tax exemption and tax-deductible contributions if they meet the general requirements for charitable or educational organizations. Also, such organizations could qualify if organized and operated exclusively to foster national or international amateur sports competition, but only if no part of the organization's activities involve the provision of athletic facilities or equipment and no part of the net earnings of the organization inure to the benefit of any private individual.

The act allows tax-exempt status, and tax-deductible contributions, to amateur athletic organizations that conduct national or international competition in sports or support and develop amateur athletes for such competition (whether or not the organization provides facilities or equipment to its members), if no part of the organization's net earnings inures to the benefit of any private individual. As under present law, a tax deduction is not allowed if the contributor derives a substantial, direct personal benefit from the contribution. The provision is effective as of Oct. 5, 1976.

8. New Jersey general revenue sharing allocation (sec. 287 of the act)

Under present law, only taxes assessed and collected by a local government are counted toward the jurisdiction's tax effort under the general revenue sharing allocation (31 U.S.C. 1228).

The act provides that the New Jersey Franchise and Gross Receipts Taxes shall be deemed an adjusted tax of local governments for the purpose of allocating revenue sharing funds for the quarterly period beginning Oct. 1, 1982. This change will remain in effect for future quarterly payments if New Jersey amends its tax status to provide for local retention and collection.

This provision is effective for revenue sharing payments made with respect to the last quarter in calendar year 1982.

9. Relief for the Jefferson County Mental Health Center, Lakewood, Colo. (sec. 290 of the act)

Employees of a nonprofit organization are excluded from social security coverage unless the organization files with the Internal Revenue Service a certificate waiving its exemption from taxation.

The act authorizes the payment of $50,000 to the Jefferson County Mental Health Center, Lakewood, Colo., in settlement of its claims against the United States for repayment of $74,128 that the Center refunded to its employees for social security contributions after the IRS erroneously advised the Center that the contributions had been withheld incorrectly. The provision is effective on enactment.

10. Award of reasonable litigation costs where taxpayer prevails and Government position was unreasonable (sec. 292 of the act)

Attorneys fees. Under the Equal Access to Justice Act, a taxpayer who prevails in civil tax litigation in the Federal courts (other than the U.S. Tax Court) may be awarded reasonable attorneys fees and other litigation costs, unless the court finds that the position of the United States was substantially justified or that special circumstances make an award unjust.

In substitution of the existing rules, the act provides that a taxpayer who prevails in civil tax litigation in a Federal court, including the U.S. Tax Court, may be awarded reasonable attorneys fees and other litigation costs if the position of the United States was unreasonable. The maximum award is $25,000. The provision applies to civil tax litigation begun on or after Mar. 1, 1983. The provision does not apply to cases begun after Dec. 31, 1985.

Damages for delay in Tax Court. Present law provides that if a U.S. Tax Court proceeding has been instituted by a taxpayer merely for delay, the court may award damages to the United States in an amount not to exceed $500 (sec. 6673).

The act provides that if a Tax Court proceeding has been brought primarily for delay, or if the taxpayer's position in the case is frivolous or groundless, the Court may award damages to the United States in an amount not to exceed $5,000. The provision applies to Tax Court cases begun after Dec. 31, 1982.

11. Personal holding companies (sec. 293 of the act)

Under present law, a corporation actively engaged in a lending or finance business is excluded from the personal holding company tax provisions if the corporation has qualifying business expenses equal to at least 15 percent of the first $500,000 of ordinary gross income from its lending or finance business, plus 5 percent of such ordinary gross income from $500,000 to $1 million. The term "lending or finance business" is defined to include the business of making loans with maturities of not more than 60 months.

Effective for taxable years beginning after Dec. 31, 1981, the act modifies the business expense test to require a lending or finance company to have qualifying business expenses equal to at least 15 percent of the first $500,000 of ordinary income from the lending or finance business, plus 5 percent of such ordinary gross income in excess of $500,000. Thus, 5 percent of ordinary gross income in excess of $1 million will be added to the qualifying business expense test of present law.

In addition, effective for taxable years beginning after Dec. 31, 1980, the act increases the 60-month loan maturity limitation to 144 months, and the definition of a lending or finance business is amended to include the business of making loans in indefinite maturity credit transactions.

12. Additional refunds relating to repeal of the excise tax on buses (sec. 294 of the act)

The Energy Tax Act of 1978 repealed the prior law 10-percent manfacturers excise tax on buses effective after Nov. 9, 1978. The act also contained provisions effectively repealing the tax for buses sold after Apr. 19, 1977, and before Nov. 10, 1978, if a claim for refund was filed with the Internal Revenue Service and if the tax originally collected from ultimate purchasers was reimbursed before Sept. 5, 1979.

The act extends the last date for reimbursing ultimate purchasers of buses to Dec. 31, 1982, and permits the reimbursement to occur at the same time a refund from IRS is received. The provision applies to taxpayers that filed a claim for refund before Sept. 5, 1979.

TITLE V OF TEFRA

The act includes the conference agreement reached by the House Committees on Public Works and Transportation and Science and Technoloyg and the Senate Committee on Commerce, Science and Transportation on the Airport and Airway Improvement Act of 1982. In general, the provisions of this title authorize apending for the various airport development, safety and research programs for fiscal years 1982-87.

[3] Negligible cost.

Note: The estimates for each provision of outlay savings within each program (e.g. Medicare) reflect the savings to that program and not necessarily the total budget impact. If a provision has an impact upon 2 programs, it is listed twice. In addition, there is a loss in revenue under Medicare secondary for older workers of $85, $130, and $150 million for fiscal years 1983 to 1985 respectively.

[1] Negligible.
[2] Loss of less than $5 million.
[3] Additional gains in budget receipts are expected from the administration's proposal to increase IRS personnel in taxpayer compliance enforcement activities: $2.1 billion in fiscal year 1983, $2.4 billion in 1984, $2.4 billion in 1985, $1.3 billion in 1986, and $0.6 billion in 1987.
[4] The figures represent net increases, after accounting for lower income tax receipts. Additional revenues from aviation excise taxes resulting from this bill before taking account of the income tax offset are estimated at $1,089 million in 1983, $1,283 million in 1984, $1,452 million in 1985, $1,621 million in 1986, and $1,809 million in 1987.
[5] The figures represent net increases, after accounting for lower income tax receipts. Increases in general fund receipts from this tax before taking account of the income tax offset are estimated at $821 million in fiscal year 1983, $1,431 million in 1984, $2,133 million in 1985, and $973 million in 1986.
[6] The figures represent net increases, after accounting for lower income tax receipts. Increases in general fund receipts from this tax before taking account on the income tax offset are estimated at $1,700 million in fiscal year 1983, $2,439 million in 1984, $2,479 million in 1985.
[7] The figures represent net increases, after accounting for lower income tax receipts. Increases in general fund receipts from this tax before taking account of the income tax offset are estimated at $139 million in fiscal year 1983, $260 million in 1984, $285 million in 1985, $267 million in 1986, and $241 million in 1987.

[9] Increases outlays by less than $5 million.

H.R. 5133 (Mr. Ottinger with cosponsors); passed House Dec. 15, 1982.

H.R. 5133 establishes minimum domestic content requirements for motor vehicles sold in the United States. The level of domestic parts and labor required of manufacturers on a fleet average basis increases with the number of motor vehicles sold in the United States annually. Implementation of the requirements would take place over a 3-year period beginning in model year 1984. The bill contains an enforcement provision establishing penalties for failure to meet the required domestic content ratios. The penalty provided is a 12-month quota on auto and automotive parts imports by the offending manufacturer. The Commissioner of Customs is directed to take necessary actions to ensure that quota levels are not exceeded during that 12-month penalty period.

H.R. 5133 was sequentially referred to the Committee on Ways and Means on Sept. 21, 1982, for 8 working days. The Subcommittee on Trade held comprehensive hearings on all aspects of the bill over a 9-day period ending Oct. 1, 1982. While referral time made completion of Committee consideration of the bill impossible, the resultant hearing record proved useful to Members during floor debate on the bill. The House passed H.R. 5133 on Dec. 15, 1982. As of adjournment of the 97th Congress, H.R. 5133 was pending on the Senate calendar.

H.R. 5159 (Mr. Rostenkowski by request); Public Law 97-119; app. Dec. 29, 1981.

H.R. 5159, the Black Lung Benefits Revenue Act of 1981, temporarily doubles the coal excise tax on Jan. 1, 1982, to $1 per ton for underground-mined coal and 50 cents per ton for surface-mined coal, with a cap of 4 percent of the price for which the coal is sold. The tax will revert to the levels specified under prior law on Jan. 1, 1996, or, if earlier, when the Black Lung Disability Trust Fund has repaid all advances, including interest thereon, from the general fund of the Treasury.

The act modifies the computation of interest on certain amounts owed to or by the trust fund. The act amends the obligations of the fund to include certain claims that had been previously denied but subsequently approved and to exclude payments of certain retroactive lump sum benefits. The act also transfers provisions which establish the Black Lung Disability Trust Fund to the Internal Revenue Code and provides that trust fund moneys will be available to meet obligations incurred under specified provisions of the Black Lung Benefits Act, as such sections are in effect immediately after enactment.

Under a Senate floor amendment, the act amends certain of the criteria and procedures for determining whether a claimant or survivors are eligible for black lung disability benefits.

Three other tax related provisions were added by the Senate.

(1) The first Senate amendment provides for a 2-year deferral, until Jan. 1, 1984, of the effective date of the 1976 Tax Reform Act amendments to the net operating loss carryover rules in code sec. 382. (An identical provision was included in H.R. 4961, the Miscellaneous Revenue Act of 1981, as passed by the House of Representatives on Dec. 15, 1981.)

(2) The second Senate amendment requires an information return to be filed with the Internal Revenue Service in order for an agreement to qualify as a lease under the safe harbor leasing provisions of the accelerated cost recovery system enacted in the Economic Recovery Tax Act of 1981. The information return must be filed with the national office of the Internal Revenue Service not later than the 30th day after the date the agreement is executed, or Jan. 31, 1982, whichever is later. The provision applies to recovery property placed in service after Dec. 31, 1980. (A similar provision was included in H.R. 4717 as passed by the House of Representatives on Dec. 15, 1981.)

(3) The third Senate amendment includes changes to code sec. 280A, which limits the deduction of certain expenses incurred in connection with the use of a dwelling unit in a trade or business or income-producing activity of the taxpayer if the taxpayer also uses the dwelling unit for personal purposes. (Similar provisions were included in H.R. 4961 as passed by the House of Representatives on Dec. 15, 1981.) Under the Senate amendment, a taxpayer will not be treated as using a residence for personal purposes during any period the dwelling unit is rented, at a fair rental, to another person for use as that person's principal residence. New rules are provided for rentals to co-owners. The amendment also provides that a day which the taxpayer spends in the dwelling unit making repairs and performing maintenance is not a day of personal use even if other persons are present but not working. The amendment also clarifies that a taxpayer can have a principal place of business for each separate business and can deduct expenses attributable to use of a residence as a principal place of business if the regular and exclusive use tests are met. These amendments are effective for open tax years beginning after Dec. 31, 1975.

The Senate amendment also coordinates the application of code sec. 280A with the deductions allowable under code sec. 162(a)(2) and other provisions of the Internal Revenue Code applicable when the taxpayer is away from home in the pursuit of a trade or business and provides for the Treasury to issue rules to allow Members of Congress to deduct appropriate amounts for expenses away from home.

H.R. 5159, introduced on Dec. 10, 1981, was referred jointly to the Committees on Ways and Means and Education and Labor. The Committee on Ways and Means ordered the bill favorably reported without amendment on Dec. 10, 1981. The Committee on Ways and Means reported H.R. 5159 to the House on Dec. 14, 1981. The bill was considered and passed by the House under suspension of the rules on Dec. 15, 1981. The Senate considered and passed H.R. 5159, with the amendments described above, on Dec. 16, 1981. The House agreed to the Senate amendments on Dec. 16, 1981. H.R. 5159 was signed into law by the President on Dec. 29, 1981, as Public Law 97-119.

H.R. 5238 (Mr. Waxman with cosponsors); Public Law 97–414; app. Jan. 4, 1983.

H.R. 5238, the Orphan Drug Act, was jointly referred to the Committee on Ways and Means and the Committee on Energy and Commerce. The bill was reported by the Committee on Energy and Commerce on Sept. 17, 1982.

On Sept. 23, 1982, a letter from the Committee on Ways and Means was sent to the Committee on Energy and Commerce granting permission to place the bill on the suspension calendar and also informing them that this action does not prejudice our jurisdiction over this legislation or any similar subject matter in the future.

H.R. 5238 passed the House on Sept. 28, 1982, under suspension of the rules. As passed by the House, H.R. 5238 would require the FDA to determine if a disease were rare enough within the United States so that a drug for its cure would qualify as an orphan drug. The bill would: provide a tax credit of 90 percent through 1989 for the cost of conducting certain experiments on the orphan drugs; offer exclusive marketing rights on unpatentable orphan drugs for a period of 7 years; and establish an Orphan Products Board to coordinate the activities of Federal agencies involved in drug research and regulation.

The Senate amended and passed H.R. 5238 on Oct. 1, 1982. The Senate amendment deleted the 90-percent tax credit and substituted an authorization for an appropriation of $14 million in fiscal year 1983, $18 million in fiscal year 1984, and $18 million in fiscal year 1985.

The House agreed to the Senate amendment with an amendment on Dec. 14, 1982. The House amendment provides a 50-percent elective, nonrefundable tax credit for human clinical testing expenditures necessary in obtaining the approval of the Food and Drug Administration for the commercial sale of a drug for a rare disease. The amount of the credit reduces otherwise allowable deductions or charges to capital account. The House amendment defined rare disease or condition to mean any disease or condition which occurs so infrequently that there is no reasonable expectation that the cost of developing and making available in the United States a drug for such disease would be recovered from U.S. sales of such drug. The credit is not available for any testing, either inside or outside the United States, conducted by corporations to which secs. 934(b) or 936 apply. All members of a controlled group of corporations would be tested as one taxpayer for purposes of the credit. The provision on the House amendment applied to qualified expenditures paid or incurred after Dec. 31, 1982, and before Jan. 1, 1988.

In addition, the House authorized grants for $4 million for 3 fiscal years to defray the cost of orphan drug development, and made other technical changes to the Senate amendment.

The Senate agreed to the House amendment on Dec. 16, 1982, and the legislation was signed into law by the President on Jan. 4, 1983, as Public Law 97–414.

H.R. 5470 (Mr. Jacobs with cosponsors); Public Law 97–473; app. Jan. 14, 1983.

As passed by the Senate, H.R. 5470 amends sec. 104 of the Internal Revenue Code to exclude from gross income damages for personal injuries or sickness whether paid as lump sums or as periodic payments. Also, the bill adds a new section to the code providing that any amount received for agreeing to assume a liability for periodic payments as personal injury damages is not included in gross income to the extent it is used to purchase an annuity or a United States' obligation to cover the liability. The assignee's basis in the annuity contract or United States' obligation must be reduced by amounts that were excluded from gross income under the new provision. The provisions of the bill would be effective for taxable years ending after 1981.

H.R. 5470 was reported favorably by the Committee on Ways and Means on Sept. 16, 1982, and passed the House on Sept. 20, 1982.

The Senate Finance Committee reported the bill on Sept. 29, 1982, with technical amendments. In addition, the bill as reported by the Senate Finance Committee, included three amendments.

(1) The reported bill provides that Hawaii's law relating to employer-maintained health insurance plans would not be preempted by ERISA, to the extent that Hawaiian law in effect on Jan. 1, 1977, does not relate to matters thoroughly regulated under ERISA, and provided Hawaii does not attempt to impose tax liability on insurance premiums or benefits.

(2) The reported bill includes a provision extending certain tax provisions to American Indian tribal governments on the same basis as such provisions apply to States. The amendment would (a) grant a deduction from Federal income tax for taxes paid; (b) provide that charitable contributions to Indian tribal governments would be deductible for income, estate, and gift tax purposes; (c) exempt Indian tribal governments from a variety of excise taxes (including the tax on special fuels, the manufacturers' excise taxes, and the tax on the use of certain highway vehicles); and (d) provide an income tax exemption for certain governmental obligations, subject to special limitations regarding the tax treatment of industrial development bonds issued by an Indian tribal government.

(3) The reported bill provides that certain "difficulty of care payments" made to a taxpayer for his care of a handicapped foster child (under the age of 19) are excluded from income. "Difficulty of care" payments are payments in addition to basic payments for the care of a foster child and are made as compensation for providing the additional care required by reason of a child's handicap.

The bill as reported by the Senate Finance Committee, passed the Senate on Oct. 1, 1982, with amendments. One Senate amendment revises certain taxes due to the Virgin Islands on Virgin Islands source income. The amendment would change the tax on non-Virgin Islands recipients of certain Virgin Islands source passive income to 10 percent when the recipient is a U.S. individual or corporation and imposes a corresponding withholding obligation on the Virgin Islands payor of such income. The amendment would allow the Virgin Islands Government further to reduce this 10 percent rate at its discretion. This amendment is identical to H.R. 7093 as it passed the House. (H.R. 7093 was favorably reported by the Senate Finance Committee on Oct. 1, 1982, with amendments relating to the Social Security Disability Insurance Program).

Another Senate amendment extends the highway excise taxes and the Highway Trust Fund for 1 year, until Oct. 1, 1985, permits expenditures out of the Trust Fund until Oct. 1, 1986, and extends the exemption from fuels taxes for certain taxicabs for 1 year (through Dec. 31, 1983).

An amendment was adopted by the Senate limiting the definition of Indian tribal government in Alaska to include only the Metlakatia Indian Community.

An amendment was adopted by the Senate relating to Hawaiian law in effect on Jan. 1, 1976 (rather than Jan. 1, 1977, as in the reported bill), for purposes of ERISA preemption of Hawaii prepaid health care laws.

The House concurred in the Senate amendment to the bill, as passed by the House with an amendment on Dec. 13, 1982. The House amendment made several technical changes with respect to the Senate amendments concerning periodic payment provisions and the exemption from tax of certain foster care payments. The House amendment also deleted from the Senate amendment provisions concerning proposed extensions of the Highway Trust Fund and withholding on Virgin Islands payors, in light of pertinent legislation moving independent of H.R. 5470. Finally, the House amendment made miscellaneous changes to the Senate amendment with regard to the preemption exemption for the Hawaii Prepaid Health Care Act, and included a new provision clarifying Federal and State responsibilities under ERISA involving the regulation of multiemployer health trusts.

The Senate requested a conference on the bill as amended, on Dec. 16, 1982. The House agreed to a motion to insist on its amendment and agreed to go to conference on Dec. 18, 1982.

The conference agreement followed the House bill with respect to the exclusion from gross income for certain periodic damage payments, the exclusion from gross income of amounts received as reimbursement of foster parents and difficulty of care payments, the waiver of preemption in the case of the Hawaiian health statute, the waiver of preemption in the case of certain multiple employer welfare arrangements, the reduction in income tax rate on Virgin Islands source income and the extension of the Highway Trust Fund taxes. The conference agreement followed the Senate amendment with modifications and clarifications with respect to the tax treatment of transactions involving certain Indian tribal governments.

The conference report was filed and approved in both the House and Senate on Dec. 21, 1982. H.R. 5470 was signed into law by the President on Jan. 14, 1983, as Public Law 97-473.

H.R. 5573 (Mr. Stark with cosponsors); reported to the Senate Oct. 1, 1982.

H.R. 5573, the Computer Equipment Contribution Act of 1982, was reported to the House by the Committee on Ways and Means on Sept. 17, 1982, and passed the House on Sept. 22, 1982. The bill provides a special rule for charitable contributions, made by corporations in 1983, of certain newly manufactured computers to primary or secondary schools for use directly in the education of students. For qualifying equipment the deduction equals the sum of the taxpayer's basis in the donated property plus 50 percent of the difference between the property's fair market value and the basis, but not to exceed twice the basis amount.

On Oct. 1, 1982, the Senate Finance Committee favorably reported H.R. 5573 with amendments. H.R. 5573, as ordered reported, was amended to include among eligible recipients, libraries and museums, and provided that a computer company may make contributions for any single taxable year beginning in 1983, 1984, or 1985. In addition, the Senate Finance Committee provided that the maximum allowable deduction for qualifying equipment may not exceed 150 percent of the taxpayer's basis.

The bill, as reported by the Senate Finance Committee, also included an amendment making permanent a 1 percent rate for determining a bank's deduction for bad debts under the percentage of outstanding loan methods, effective for taxable years beginning after 1982.

H.R. 6055 (Mr. Rostenkowski and Mr. Conable); Public Law 97-354; app. Oct. 19, 1982.

H.R. 6055, the Subchapter S Revision Act of 1982, simplifies and modifies the tax rules relating to eligibility for subchapter S status and the operation of subchapter S corporations. This is accomplished by removing eligibility restrictions that appear unnecessary and by revising the rules relating to income, distribution, etc., that tend to create traps for the unwary. The principal changes from present law made by the act are summarized below.

ELIGIBILITY

With respect to initial and continued eligibility of a corporation for subchapter S treatment, the act makes the following changes:

(1) The number of permitted shareholders is increased from 25 to 35;

(2) Difference in voting rights in common stock will not violate the one-class-of-stock requirement;

(3) The present law rule which results in termination of an election if the corporation derives more than 80 percent of its gross receipts from sources outside the United States is repealed;

(4) The present law rule which automatically terminates a corporation's subchapter S election if more than 20 percent of a corporation's gross receipts for any taxable year is passive investment income is eliminated for corporations which do not have subchapter C accumulated earnings and profits at the close of the taxable year, and is modified for corporations with subchapter C accumulated earnings and profits by raising the 20 percent test to 25 percent, by imposing a corporate level tax on the excess passive income, and by terminating the election only where the corporation has excess passive income for 3 consecutive years; and

(5) A person who becomes a shareholder of a subchapter S corporation after the initial election of subchapter S status will not have the power to terminate the election by affirmatively refusing to consent to the election. Accordingly, the new shareholder will be bound by the initial election until the election is otherwise terminated.

ELECTIONS, REVOCATIONS, AND TERMINATIONS

The act provides that an election made on or before the 15th day of the 3rd month of the taxable year if all persons who held stock in the corporation during the preelection portion of that year were individuals, estates, and qualified trusts, and if all persons who held stock in the corporation at any time during the year, up to the time the election is made, consent to the election. If these requirements are not met, or if the election is made later than the 15th day of the 3rd month of the taxable year, it will not be effective until the subsequent taxable year.

An event occurring during the taxable year which causes a corporation to fail to meet the definition of an eligible corporation will terminate the election as of the day on which the event occurred (rather than as of the 1st day of the taxable year in which the event occurred as under present law). To minimize the effect of an inadvertent termination, the act provides that the Internal Revenue Service may waive the terminating event so that the corporation may continue to be a subchapter S corporation notwithstanding that event.

The act provides that an election can be revoked by those shareholders holding a majority of the corporation's voting stock (as contrasted with the current rule which requires all shareholders to consent to a revocation). The prior law rule allowing a revocation filed during the 1st month of the taxable year to be effective for that entire taxable year is modified so that such a retroactive revocation may be filed on or before the 15th day of the 3rd month of the taxable year.

PASSTHROUGH OF INCOME, ETC.

The act provides that the character of items of income, deduction, loss, and credits of the corporation will pass through to the shareholders in the same general manner as the character of such items of a partnership passes through to partners. Thus, for example, such items as tax-exempt interest, capital gains and loss, and foreign income taxes will pass through and retain their character in the hands of shareholders.

As is the case under prior law with respect to losses, income will be passed through and allocated to shareholders on a per-share, per-day basis.

SELECTION OF TAXABLE YEAR

Under the act, rules generally similar to those applicable to partnerships will apply to the selection of a taxable year for a subchapter S corporation. The taxable year of a corporation which makes a subchapter S election will be required to be either the calendar year, or any other accounting period for which the corporation establishes a business purpose to the satisfaction of the Treasury Department. These rules also apply to corporations currently operating under subchapter S. However, a corporation with a subchapter S election in effect on Dec. 31, 1982, can continue its current taxable year so long as 50 percent or more of the outstanding stock in the corporation on that date continues to be owned by the same shareholder. For purposes of this transitional rule, transfers of stock pursuant to certain existing agreements, by gift to family members, or through inheritance will not be considered changes in ownership.

CARRYFORWARD OF LOSS

Under the act, a subchapter S shareholder is entitled to carry forward a loss to the extent that the amount of the loss passed through for the year exceeds the aggregate amount of the basis in this subchapter S stock and loans to the corporation. The loss carried forward can be deducted only by that shareholder if and when the basis in his or her stock of, or loans to, the corporation is restored.

DISTRIBUTIONS

The rules relating to distributions from subchapter S corporations are extremely revised by the act.

Under the new rules, a corporation will not have earnings and profits attributable to any taxable year beginning after the date of enactment if a subchapter S election is in effect for that year. For corporations with no earnings and profits, the amount of the distribution (generally cash plus fair market value of property) will be tax-free and will reduce the shareholder's basis in his or her stock. To the extent that the amount of the distribution exceeds the amount of the basis in the stock, capital gains generally will result.

For corporations with accumulated earnings and profits, the distribution will be treated as a distribution by a corporation without earnings and profits to the extent of the shareholder's portion of the undistributed amount of subchapter S gross income less deductible expenses (an "accumulated adjustment account"). Any amount in excess of the accumulated adjustment account will be treated under the usual corporate rules, first as a distribution out of accumulated earnings and profits to the extent thereof.

Under the act, both taxable and nontaxable income and deductible and nondeductible expenses, respectively, will serve to increase and decrease the subchapter S shareholder's basis in his or her stock of, and loans to, the corporation. These rules are generally analogous to those provided for partnerships. Also, unlike present law, basis will be restored to debt obligations as well as stock. Restoration of basis will be made first to debt (to the extent of prior reductions) and then to stock. Under the act, gain will be recognized by a subchapter S corporation upon nonliquidating distributions of appreciated property.

FRINGE BENEFITS

Under the act, rules similar to the partnership tax rules will apply to employee fringe benefits. For this purpose, persons owning 2 percent or more of the corporate stock will be treated as partners.

TREATMENT OF TRANSACTIONS BETWEEN CORPORATIONS AND RELATED PARTIES

Under the act, amounts accruing to any cash-basis shareholder owning 2 percent or more of the corporation's stock will be deductible only when paid.

ADMINISTRATIVE PROVISIONS

The act provides that the items of subchapter S income, deductions, and credits will be determined in audit and judicial proceedings at the corporate level rather than separately with each shareholder. Shareholders are to be given notice of, and the opportunity to participate in, Internal Revenue Service proceedings with the corporation.

EFFECTIVE DATE

The act is generally effective for taxable years beginning after Dec. 31, 1982. The new passive income rules are effective for taxable years beginning after Dec. 31, 1981.

LEGISLATIVE BACKGROUND

The bill was favorably reported by the Committee on Ways and Means to the House on Sept. 16, 1982. H.R. 6055 passed the House without amendment on Sept. 20, 1982.

H.R. 6055, as passed by the House, was reported favorably by the Senate Finance Committee on Sept. 29, 1982, with amendments. The bill as amended, passed the Senate with no further amendments on Sept. 30, 1982. On Oct. 1, 1982, the House concurred in the Senate amendments to H.R. 6055.

H.R. 6055 was signed into law by the President on Oct. 19, 1982, as Public Law 97-354.

H.R. 6056 (Mr. Rostenkowski); Public Law 97-448; app. Jan. 12, 1983.

H.R. 6056, the Technical Corrections Act of 1982, contains technical, clerical, conforming, and clarifying amendments to provisions enacted by the Economic Recovery Tax Act of 1981, the Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act of 1982, and certain other tax legislation. These amendments were developed as a result of a review of the application of the tax law changes made by the tax legislation, taking into account comments submitted to the committee from the Treasury Department, the Internal Revenue Service, the staff, tax practitioners, and others from the public. In addition to written statements submitted to the committee, the committee received public testimony on H.R. 6056 as introduced. The committee approved several amendments as a result of the testimony and comments received, and on Sept. 8, 1982, the bill was reported to the House by the Committee on Ways and Means. H.R. 6056 passed the House on Sept. 14, 1982.

The Senate Finance Committee included a number of additional amendments in the bill reported to the Senate on Sept. 28, 1982, including amendments to both tax and spending reduction provisions of the TEFRA of 1982. The committee amendments and three unprinted amendments were agreed to by the Senate on Sept. 30, 1982. Two of the unprinted amendments change provisions of the TEFRA of 1982 and the third amends sec. 5701 of the Internal Reveue Code.

The Senate also agreed to S. Res. 489 on Sept. 30, 1982, making technical corrections in the engrossment of the Senate amendments to H.R. 6056.

On Dec. 13, 1982, the House agreed to a number of the Senate amendments, disagreed to others, and asked for a conference. The conference report was filed and agreed to in the House on Dec. 21, 1982, and the Senate on Dec. 22, 1982. H.R. 6056 was signed by the President on Jan. 12, 1983, as Public Law 97-448.

The Act is divided into three general titles. The first title covers technical, clerical, and conforming amendments to the Economic Recovery Tax Act of 1981. The second title covers amendments to the Crude Oil Windfall Profit Tax Act of 1980, and the third title covers amendments to the Installment Sales Revision Act of 1980, the Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act of 1982, and certain other tax legislation.

H.R. 6094 (Mr. Gibbons); Public Law 97-456; app. Jan. 12, 1983.

H.R. 6094 was reported to the House amended on Apr. 29, 1982. The bill combines three separate agency authorizations of appropriations under the jurisdiction of the Committee on Ways and Means, and makes certain changes in the administrative authorities of the three agencies.

For the U.S. International Trade Commission (ITC), the bill authorizes appropriations of $19,737,000 for fiscal year 1983 and requires that ITC be reimbursed by other agencies for studies requested of the ITC by such agencies; provides authority to the Chairman of ITC to accept gifts, including reimbursement for travel.

For the Customs Service, the bill authorizes $568,801,000 for fiscal year 1983. This amends the authorization level set forth in the bill as introduced and increases by $38,277,000 the amount requested for Customs in President Reagan's budget. This authorization includes funds for the transfer of functions of the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, and Firearms to the Customs Service. The bill also was amended to remove the overtime pay limit or "cap" for Customs inspectors. H.R. 6094 further authorizes appropriations to reflect an automatic salary supplemental and prohibits any acceleration in the current system of collecting customs duties on commercial transactions.

For the U.S. Trade Representative (USTR), the bill authorizes $10,100,000 for fiscal year 1983. The bill authorizes appropriations to reflect an automatic salary supplemental and provides certain standard administrative authorities to the agency.

On June 16, 1982, H.R. 6094, as amended by the committee, was passed by the House.

On May 20, 1982, the Senate Finance Committee reported to the Senate S. 2555, an identical bill to H.R. 6094, except for the following differences: (1) an authorization level for the U.S. Customs Service of $530,524,000; (2) no provisions on the collection of estimated duties or overtime pay with respect to the U.S. Customs Service; (3) an authorization level of $11,100,000 for the USTR; and (4) a provision establishing a third Deputy USTR with ambassadorial rank.

On Sept. 30, 1982, the Senate passed H.R. 6094, striking out all after the enacting clause and substituting the provisions of S. 2555, as reported, with a committee amendment providing an authorization level for the U.S. Customs Service of $564,224,000.

On Dec. 22, 1982, both Houses passed a conference report in which the House concurred in the Senate amendments to H.R. 6094. The President signed the bill into law on Jan. 12, 1983, as Public Law 97-456.

H.R. 6181 (Mr. Pickle with cosponsors); reported to House May 26, 1982.

H.R. 6181 was reported to the House amended on May 26, 1982. The bill would provide adjustment benefits, vocational training and waiver of overpayments for individuals terminated from the disability program; strengthen the reconsideration process by providing for the earlier introduction of evidence of record, and provide for more uniformity in decisionmaking at all levels of adjudication.

PROTECTION FOR TERMINATED DISABILITY BENEFICIARIES

H.R. 6181 contains a number of provisions which are designed to protect social security and SSI beneficiaries whose disabilities are terminated by providing some additional benefits and job services which will help to avoid severe financial hardships and ease the adjustments they will have to make due to leaving the benefit rolls. These provisions would—

(1) Permit a social security disability beneficiary whose benefits have been terminated to elect to have benefits continue until a reconsideration determination is made (repayment would be required if the termination is upheld);

(2) Provide, through calendar year 1984, an additional 4 months of "adjustment benefits" in cases where social security or SSI benefits have been terminated due to medical recovery for beneficiaries who have been on the rolls for at least 36 months prior to termination;

(3) Not count as overpayments, through calendar year 1984, benefits paid to disabled social security and SSI disabled beneficiaries for any months prior to receipt of notice of termination on account of medical recovery; and

(4) Establish a temporary vocational rehabilitation program in fiscal years 1983–84 to provide evaluation and job placement services to social security disability beneficiaries whose benefits have been terminated due to medical recovery.

STRENGTHENING THE RECONSIDERATION PROCESS

The appeals procedure—initial decision, reconsideration and hearing—is specifically spelled out in the law. Existing law is changed by providing that new evidence with respect to a previously filed application may not be entered into the record after the reconsideration decision unless the ALJ determines the evidence could not have been made available at the reconsideration level. The closing of the record would only be applicable in termination cases where there is a face-to-face evidentiary hearing. Such a hearing procedure is required by Jan. 1, 1984. State agencies that do not wish to carry out this function can elect to have it done by Federal employees.

An individual who wishes to introduce such new evidence would have the option of having the case remanded to the State agency for incorporation into the record or of going directly to an ALJ hearing. Evidence of a new impairment or a worsening of the impairment would be admissible at the ALJ level. Individuals requesting reconsideration shall be informed both orally and in writing of the provisions of this requirement and shall be advised that they may wish to retain an attorney or other representative to assist them during the reconsideration.

After an initial determination of ineligibility for disability benefits, a claimant will have 180 days in which to request a review at the reconsideration level as opposed to 60 days under present law.

UNIFORMITY OF DECISIONMAKING

H.R. 6181 contains several provisions which are designed to promote uniformity and consistency of disability decisionmaking at all levels of the adjudicative process by—

(1) Requiring the review of 15 percent of ALJ allowances in fiscal year 1982 and 25 percent in each of fiscal years 1983–87, requiring review of State agency denials as well as allowances before benefits may be paid;

(2) Modifying preadjudicative review requirements of State agency decisions so as to require that after 1982 one-sixth of all determinations reviewed be denials;

(3) Requiring the same criteria to be used to make disability determinations at all adjudicative levels;

(4) Including in the law an explicit statement as to how allegations of pain are to be evaluated in the disability adjudication process.

MISCELLANEOUS CHANGES

H.R. 6181 contains several other provisions affecting the social security and SSI disability programs. These include—

(1) Automatically revising, based on increases in average earnings levels, the earnings guidelines for determining whether a person ins engaging in substantial gainful activity and for determining what constitutes a month of trial work for a person who returns to work despite an impairment;

(2) Making clear that social security benefits may not be paid until a final determination is made on an application for benefit by including an explicit prohibition against interim payments in the law;

(3) Improving the disability offset provision by correcting certain unintended effects of 1980 and 1981 legislation and by making the provision easier to administer;

(4) Revitalizing the vocational rehabilitation program for disabled social security and SSI beneficiaries by making a number of changes, including expanding the definition of reimbursable State agency costs and requiring SSA to experiment to determine how vocational rehabilitation services can best be provided to beneficiaries; and

(5) Providing a specific statement in the law that hearings conducted at the ALJ level shall be conducted under the provisions for adjudication outlined in the Administrative Procedure Act and that the ALJ conducting such hearing shall be appointed pursuant to its provisions.

The provisions relating to court remands and the qualifying experience of staff attorneys for ALJ positions were stricken from the bill because of the jurisdictional concerns of the Judiciary and Post Office and Civil Service Committees, respectively.

At the adjournment of the 97th Congress, H.R. 6181 was pending in the House.

H.R. 6198 (Mr. Kastenmeier); Public Law 97–215; app. July 13, 1982.

H.R. 6198 extends until July 1, 1986, the so-called "manufacturing clause" of the copyright law contained in sec. 601(a) of title 17 of the United States code. Present law provides for expiration on July 1, 1982. The manufacturing clause restricts the importation of copyrighted nondramatic, literary materials published in English by American domiciled authors. Under the clause, such materials must be published in the United States or Canada in order to receive full copyright protection.

H.R. 6198 was sequentially referred to the Committee on Ways and Means on May 19, 1982, for consideration of its relationship to customs revenues and trade agreements. It passed the House without amendment on June 15, 1982. The bill was received in the Senate on June 15, 1982 and passed on June 30, 1982. A veto message was received from the President on July 12, 1982, and was overridden by both Houses on July 13, 1982, whereupon it became Public Law 97–215.

H.R. 6211 (Mr. Anderson with cosponsors); Public Law 97–424; app. Jan. 6, 1983.

H.R. 6211, the Surface Transportation Assistance Act, as it passed the House on Dec. 7, 1982, contained authorizations for increased spending on highway programs for the period fiscal years 1983 through 1986. On the House floor, the provisions of H.R. 7368 were offered by the Committee on Ways and Means as an amendment to H.R. 6211 in order to provide a revenue title for the bill (see H.R. 7368).

The Senate passed H.R. 6211 on Dec. 21, 1982, with amendments approved on the Senate floor and by the Senate Finance Committee, the Senate Environment and Public Works Committee, the Senate Commerce Committee, and the Senate Banking Committee.

The bill, as reported by the conference committees and as passed by the Congress, contained authorizations at increased levels for highway and highway safety programs and urban and rural mass transportation programs for fiscal years 1983 through 1986; provisions relating to commercial motor vehicle safety, including length limitations; provisions concerning State recreational boating programs, reforestation expenditures, fisheries, ocean dumping, and the airport and airway development programs. Title V of the bill contained the Highway Revenue Act of 1982 which revised and extended the highway-related user taxes and the Highway Trust Fund through Sept. 30, 1988. This title also contained a number of other revenue provisions added by the Senate Finance Committee and agreed to by the conferees, including an extension of Federal supplemental unemployment compensation benefits, and provisions excluding certain home energy assistance from income under the AFDC and SSI programs. H.R. 6211 was signed into law by the President on Jan. 6, 1983, as Public Law 97–424.

Title V contains the following provisions:

HIGHWAY-RELATED TAX CHANGES (SUBTITLE B)

Gasoline tax and other fuel taxes

The bill increases the gasoline tax from 4 cents to 9 cents per gallon, effective Apr. 1, 1983. Similar increases are provided for the taxes on diesel fuel, special motor fuels, and motorboat fuels. The present law exemptions from these taxes are continued for buses, State and local governments, nonprofit educational institutions, and farming use. The exemption for off-highway business use, which is currently 2 cents, is extended to the full tax. A new exemption from the tax is provided for 85 percent or more alcohol fuels from sources other than petroleum or natural gas. Taxicabs are provided a 4-cent exemption through Sept. 30, 1984, and the conditions under which the exemption is provided are expanded, for 1983, to include jurisdictions where ride-sharing is prohibited by local law.

Gasohol is exempt from 5 cents of the 9-cent tax. The 40-cent-per-gallon income tax credit for alcohol fuels and the 40-cent tariff on imported alcohol fuels are both increased to 50 cents. The gasohol rules apply through 1992.

The time for payment of the gasoline tax is increased by 5 days for independent refiners and for persons other than those who produce more than 1,000 barrels of crude oil per day.

Tires, tread rubber, and innertubes

The tax on highway tires, currently 9.75 cents per pound, is converted to a graduated tax based on weight. Tires 40 pounds or less, which include ordinary passenger car tires, are exempt. The tax will be 15 cents for each pound over 40 pounds and not over 70 pounds, $4.50 plus 30 cents for each pound between 70 and 90 pounds, and $10.50 plus 50 cents for each pound over 90 pounds. The taxes on nonhighway tires, laminated tires, tread rubber and innertubes are repealed. These changes are effective Jan. 1, 1984.

Lubricating oil

The present law tax on lubricating oil is repealed, effective on Jan. 7, 1983.

Truck-related taxes

The 10-percent tax on trucks and trailers whose gross vehicle weight exceeds 10,000 pounds is increased to 12 percent, and the weight thresholds are increased to 33,000 pounds for trucks and 26,000 pounds for trailers. The tax is converted from a manufacturers tax to a retail tax. Roadrailer trailers (but not piggyback trailers) are exempt from the tax. The present law tax on truck parts is repealed. These provisions are effective on Apr. 1, 1983, for tax increases and on Dec. 2, 1982, for tax reductions.

Heavy vehicle use tax

The heavy vehicle use tax, currently $3 per 1,000 pounds for vehicles whose gross vehicle weight exceeds 26,000 pounds (a tax of $240 for an 80,000-pound vehicle), is converted to a graduated tax, effective July 1, 1984. The maximum tax is increased to $1,600 on July 1, 1984, $1,700 on July 1, 1986, $1,800 on July 1, 1987, and $1,900 on July 1, 1988. There is a 1-year delay of this phasein for owner-operators with five or fewer trucks. If a truck is retired from service during the year because of accident or theft, the use tax will be refunded on a pro rata basis. There is also an exemption for trucks used on highways for 5,000 miles or less during the year.

Motor carrier operating rights

The basis adjustment provided in the Economic Recovery Tax Act of 1981 for motor carrier operating rights where stock is acquired by a corporate purchaser is extended to individual purchasers.

Sunset provision

All the highway-related user taxes and exemptions from these taxes expire on Oct. 1, 1988.

Floor Stock Provisions (Subtitle C)

The act provides for floor stock taxes on those items where the rate of tax is increased, effective on the date that the rate increase is effective. Provisions for floor stock refunds are also included for tax-repealed articles held in inventory and not sold before Jan. 7, 1983, including consumer purchases after Dec. 2, 1982, and before Jan. 7, 1983.

Trust Fund Provisions (Subtitle D)

The Highway Trust Fund is extended 4 years, through Sept. 30, 1988, and its provisions are revised and transferred to the Internal Revenue Code. These revisions include clarifying changes to the expenditure purposes of the fund and modifications to the antideficit provisions governing the fund. In addition, a new Mass Transit Account is established in the trust fund, financed by 1 cent of the 9-cents-per-gallon tax on fuels, for making capital expenditures authorized under sec. 21(a)(2) of the Urban Mass Transportation Act. Conforming changes are also made to transfer all revenue from the motorboat fuels taxes into the Land and Water Conservation Fund and the National Recreational Boating Fund; the maximum amount that can be transferred annually to the Boating Fund is increased from $20 million to $45 million and the limit on the fund's balance is increased accordingly.

Other Revenue and Miscellaneous Provisions

Normalization method for public utility property

Sec. 541 restates and makes more specific the normalization rules, for public utility rate-making purposes, relating to the investment tax credit, accelerated depreciation, and accelerated cost recovery. Special transition rules are provided to preclude the loss of eligibility for these investment incentives with respect to rate orders entered into prior to Mar. 13, 1980, affecting three California utilities.

To obtain relief under these transition rules, a portion of the tax benefits would have to be repaid to the Treasury over a 2-year period generally beginning June 30, 1983. The portion to be repaid would be limited to the tax benefits which were actually flowed through to consumers too rapidly. The remaining portion of the tax benefits, which would otherwise have to be repaid, will be eligible for protection under the transition rule only if the taxpayers enter into closing agreements with the Internal Revenue Service, generally before July 1, 1983. The Internal Revenue Service would pay no interest on refunds due to the utilities with respect to amounts previously repaid to the Treasury.

Tax return rules

Sec. 542 modifies the income tax filing requirement for dependents having gross income of $1,000 or more during the year to specify that no return is required if the individual's only income is a State grant of $1,000.

Deduction for conventions on cruise ships

Sec. 543 permits a business expense deduction for the cost of attending conventions, seminars, and other similar meetings held on a U.S.-flag cruise ship, but only in the amount of $2,000 per taxpayer per year ($1,000 in the case of a married individual filing separately), and only if all ports of call are in the United States or U.S. possessions, and the taxpayer complies with certain reporting requirements.

Energy credit

Sec. 546 extends the 10 percent business energy credit to certain modifications of chlor-alkali electrolytic cells for tax years 1981 and 1982.

Tax-exempt dividends of regulated investment companies

Sec. 547 expands the class of tax-exempt obligations, the interest on which can be passed through as tax-exempt interest to owners of regulated investment company (mutual fund) shares. The provision permits obligations, the interest on which is tax-exempt by virtue of provisions of law (in effect on the date of enactment) that are outside the Internal Revenue Code, to enjoy the mutual fund passthrough treatment. These include obligations described in sec. 11(b) of the Housing Act of 1979 and obligations of Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands. In addition, student loan bonds exempt under sec. 103(a)(2) are to be eligible for passthrough treatment. (Because H.R. 5470 was signed into law after H.R. 6211, this provision was unintentionally removed from the Internal Revenue Code because of inconsistent alphabetical redesignations of subsecs. of sec. 102. A technical correction will be necessary to correct this error.)

Additional weeks of Federal supplemental compensation

The Federal supplemental compensation (FSC) program provides additional weeks of unemployment compensation to individuals who have exhausted their regular State benefits and any extended benefits to which they were entitled. As originally enacted, the FSC program provided a maximum of 6, 8, or 10 weeks of benefits depending on the State in which the individual claimed the benefits. This act increases the maximum number of weeks of FSC benefits to 8, 10, 12, 14, or 16 weeks.

Exclusion of home energy assistance from income under SSI and AFDC

In the SSI and AFDC programs, the monthly payment to each recipient is determined by subtracting that person's other income from a specified assistance standard. The SSI and AFDC statutes specify certain limited types of income which are not to be counted in making these determinations. This act adds to the list of items not counted as income, any assistance in cash or in kind if it is based on the need for assistance with home energy costs and is furnished by a home heating oil or gas supplier or by a utility company (including a municipal utility) which provides home energy. Assistance of this type would also be excluded from income if it is in-kind assistance. In the case of the AFDC program, the exclusion provided by the act would be optional with each State.

H.R. 6369 (Mr. Ford of Tennessee); reported to House May 25, 1982. (See P.L. 97-248 (H.R. 4961) for similar action.)

H.R. 6369, the Federal Supplemental Unemployment Compensation Act of 1982, was reported to the House by the Committee on Ways and Means on May 25, 1982. As reported the bill provides for a maximum of 13 additional weeks of unemployment compensation in States with high unemployment for jobless workers who have exhausted all unemployment benefits. It contains amendments to the aid to families with dependent children (AFDC) program designed to provide a financial incentive for AFDC recipients to find employment and continue working. In addition, the bill lowers the income thresholds limiting the inclusion of unemployment benefits in adjusted gross income for income tax purposes.

ADDITIONAL WEEKS OF UNEMPLOYMENT COMPENSATION

Unemployed workers who exhaust their State unemployment compensation benefits and Federal-State extended benefits would be provided additional weeks of unemployment compensation equal to one-half of the number of weeks they received State benefits. No one, however, could receive more than 13 additional weeks of benefits. These additional weeks of benefits would be payable in States where, due to high unemployment, the extended benefit program is triggered on.

There would be no additional eligibility requirements for receipt of the additional benefits provided under H.R. 6369. An unemployed worker who has exhausted his or her State and extended benefits, whose benefit year ended on or after Jan. 1, 1982, and who continues to meet all requirements for receipt of State and extended benefits, would be eligible to receive the additional benefits if the extended benefit program is triggered on in the State.

The program would be in effect from date of enactment until Sept. 30, 1983. The costs of the additional benefits would be financed from Federal general revenues.

AFDC WORK INCENTIVE AMENDMENTS

In order to provide a financial incentive for AFDC recipients to find employment and continue working, H.R. 6369 would increase the "earned income disregards" in the AFDC program. Specifically, the bill would require States to disregard the following amount of earnings in determining a family's monthly AFDC benefit: the first $50 of earnings, 20 percent of gross earnings (up to a maximum of $175), child care costs (up to a maximum of $160 per child) and one-third of remaining earnings. The $50 and one-third disregards would be applied in determining a family's AFDC benefit only if the family meets the State income eligibility requirements without the application of these disregards. There would be no time limitation on the one-third or any of the other disregards.

In addition, the bill would (1) require States to disregard the earnings of a child in an AFDC family derived from his or her participation in a CETA youth program; (2) clarify that States are to continue to exclude certain State financed payments that a State has been providing to meet certain needs of AFDC children; (3) repeal the provision in current law that limits AFDC eligibility to families with income below 150 percent of the State standard of need; and (4) repeal the requirement that States assume AFDC recipients with earnings are receiving the earned income tax credit (EITC) on a monthly basis (States would be required to count only the amount of EITC actually received by the person).

AMENDMENT TO INCOME THRESHOLDS FOR TAXATION OF UNEMPLOYMENT COMPENSATION

The income thresholds limiting the inclusion of unemployment benefits in adjusted gross income for Federal income tax purposes would be reduced to $12,000 for single taxpayers and $18,000 for married taxpayers filing jointly. Estimated tax penalties for 1982 attributable to this change would be waived. This change would be effective for benefits paid on or after Jan. 1, 1982.

See P.L. 97-248 (H.R. 4961) for similar action.

H.R. 6550 (Mr. Rostenkowski); reported to House June 10, 1982. (See H.R. 6595.)

H.R. 6550 would have increased the public debt limit to $1,126.9 billion through Aug. 12, 1982, from $1,079.8 billion.

The bill would have made two changes relating to debt management. The interest rate ceiling on savings bonds and retirement bonds would have been repealed and the authority for the administration to issue bonds that pay a rate of interest more than the 4¼ percent statutory ceiling would have been increased from $70 billion to $100 billion. (Similar debt management provisions were included in H.R. 4961, P.L. 97-248).

The bill would also have repealed the authority of the Secretary of the Treasury to promulgate rules relating to unsubstantiated expenses of Members of Congress (the so-called $75/$50 a day rules). The bill would have restored the $3,000 limitation on the deduction of business travel expenses of Members of Congress for 1982. Beginning in 1983, when the new Congress convenes, the bill would have permitted Members of Congress to claim business expense deductions in the same way as other businessmen away from home on business in Washington D.C.

H.R. 6550 was superseded by H.R. 6595.

H.R. 6595 (Mr. Rostenkowski); reported to House June 16, 1982. (See H.J. Res. 519.)

H.R. 6595 would have increased the public debt limit to $1,126.9 billion through Aug. 12, 1982, from $1,079.8 billion.

The bill would have made two changes relating to debt management. The interest rate ceiling on savings bonds and retirement bonds would have been repealed and the authority for the administration to issue bonds that pay a rate of interest more than the 4¼ percent statutory ceiling would have been increased from $70 billion to $100 billion. (Similar debt management provisions were included in H.R. 4961, P.L. 97-248.)

The increase in the public debt limit provided by H.R. 6595 was superseded by passage of H.J. Res. 519.

H.R. 6685 (Mr. Whitten); Public Law 97-216; app. July 18, 1982.

H.R. 6685, the Urgent Supplemental Appropriations Act, 1982, contains two tax-related provisions.

Sec. 215 provides for the repeal of sec. 139 of the act of Oct. 1, 1981 (H.J. Res. 325), which eliminated the $3,000 limitation on the amount of away-from-home business expenses a Member of Congress may deduct. In addition, the directive of the Black Lung Benefits Revenue Act of 1981 (P.L. 97-119) that the Secretary of the Treasury prescribe amounts which could be deducted as away-from-home expenses by a Member of Congress without substantiation is repealed. Effective for taxable years beginning after Dec. 31, 1981, a Member of Congress may deduct away-from-home business expenses up to $3,000.

Sec. 211 amends sec. 112 of the act of Dec. 15, 1981 (H.J. Res. 370), to permit the Secretary of the Treasury to use appropriated funds to consider an exemption from Rev. Rul. 81-216, the proposed amendments to the Income Tax Regulations secs. 1.103-7 and 1.103-10 or regulations reaching the same result. Rev. Rul. 81-216 holds that multiple lots of industrial development bonds of $1 million each will be treated as a single large issue not qualifying for tax-exempt treatment when certain factors, such as issues sold at the same time, at the same rate, or under a common marketing scheme, are present.

The act of Dec. 15, 1981, prohibited the use of funds appropriated by it to enforce this revenue ruling, proposed amendments to the income tax regulations or any other ruling or regulation reaching the same result as Rev. Rul. 81-216.

H.R. 6867 (Mr. Gibbons by request); passed House Sept. 22, 1982. (See P.L. 97-446 (H.R. 4566) for further action.)

H.R. 6867, as reported to the House by the Committee on Ways and Means on Sept. 17, 1982, incorporates 30 miscellaneous tariff and trade bills, as approved by the committee, involving temporary duty suspensions, permanent duty eliminations, duty reductions, lifting of an embargo, and certain provisions affecting U.S. customs administration.

Sec. 1, applies to all other sections of the bill. It states that any amendment or repeal expressed in terms of an amendment to, or repeal of, a schedule, item, or other provision, the reference shall be considered to be made to a schedule, item, or other provision of the Tariff Schedules of the United States (TSUS).

Sec. 101 (introduced as H.R. 5707) repeals an existing embargo on the importation of seven types of furskins from the People's Republic of China. The current embargo, which applies both to the Republic of China and the U.S.S.R., bans the U.S. import of mink, fox, muskrat, marten, weasel, ermine, and kolinsky furskins.

Sec. 102, as amended (introduced as H.R. 4002) accelerates the scheduled duty reduction on tariff item 355.45, "other fish netting and fishing nets (including sections thereof), of textile materials," by implementing the planned column 1 (MFN) rates earlier than scheduled. The 1984 rate would be implemented in 1983, the 1986 rate in 1984, the 1988 rate in 1985, and the 1989 rate of 17 percent ad valorem in 1986. The committee amended the provision to provide early implementation of the scheduled duty reductions rather than going immediately to the 17 percent ad valorem level.

Sec. 103 (introduced as H.R. 4494) establishes a new tariff item, providing permanent duty-free treatment on Fourdrinier wire suitable for use in capacitor papermaking machines. Other Fourdrinier wire would continue to be dutiable.

Sec. 104 (introduced as H.R. 5764) provides definitions for and reclassification of certain stuffed dolls and other toy figures. Sec. 142 of H.R. 6867 contains the remaining provisions of the original bill.

Sec. 105 (introduced as H.R. 5080) provides permanent duty-free treatment to button blanks of casein by establishing a new tariff item and by appropriately amending subpart A headnote of part 7 of schedule 7 of the tariff schedules.

Sec. 106 (introduced as H.R. 4844) provides duty-free treatment to articles for NASA (and other articles launched into space under launch services agreements with NASA) if NASA certifies that such articles are to be launched into space, are spare parts, or are necessary and uniquely associated support equipment for use in connection with a launch into space. In addition, it provides that materials being returned from space by NASA would not be considered an importation and thereby entry of such materials would not be required, These provisions would be effective for materials entered between 15 days after enactment and Dec. 31, 1994.

Sec. 121 (introduced as H.R. 5790) provides until June 15, 1985, column 1 (MFN) duty-free treatment of fresh cantaloupes during the period from Jan. 1, to May 15 of each year. Cantaloupes entering during the referenced period incur a duty of 35 percent ad valorem for both column 1 and column 2 entries.

Sec. 122 (introduced as H.R. 5386) suspends until Dec. 31, 1985, the 15 percent ad valorem column 1 (MFN) rate of duty on hatters' fur.

Sec. 123 (introduced as H.R. 6396) provides column 1 (MFN) duty-free treatment until June 30, 1985, on imports of needlecraft display models which are replicas of needlecraft kits.

Sec. 124 (introduced as H.R. 5891) provides a temporary reduction until Jan. 1, 1988, in duties on disposable gowns and surgical drapes made of bonded fiber fabric and designed for use in hospitals, clinics, laboratories, and contaminated areas. The provision would equalize the rates of duty between paper products and the bonded fiber fabric products. This would be accomplished by reducing the column 1 (MFN) rate of duty to 5.6 percent ad valorem from 32 percent ad valorem equivalent on disposable gowns and from 21 percent ad valorem equivalent on surgical drapes. Similar paper products have a column 1 duty rate of 5.6 percent ad valorem. The column 2 duty rates would be reduced from 76 percent to 26.5 percent ad valorem on disposable gowns and drapes.

Sec. 125, as amended (introduced as H.R. 5498) provides a 3-year duty suspension on column 1 imports of p-Hydroxybenzoic acid. This would be accomplished by establishing a new tariff item for that purpose. This provision would suspend until Sept. 30, 1985, the current rate of duty of 11.3 percent ad valorem for column 1 (MFN) entries and 7 percent ad valorem for least developed developing country (LDDC) entries. The committee amended the provision to change it from permanently duty-free to a 3-year duty suspension.

Sec. 126, as amended (introduced as H.R. 5730) provides a 3-year duty suspension on column 1 (MFN) entries of triphenyl phosphate, a chemical used chiefly as a plasticizer. The committee amended the provision to change it from permanently duty-free to a 3-year duty suspension.

Sec. 127 (introduced as H.R. 5499) extends until June 30, 1984, suspension of the column 1 (MFN) rate of duty on Bis(4-aminobenzoate)-1,3 propanediol (trimethylene glycol di-p-aminobenzoate). The duty on this article is currently suspended until June 30, 1983.

Sec. 128 is a committee amendment adding a provision (introduced as H.R. 6943) which continues until Sept. 30, 1985, the suspension of column 1 (MFN) duty on color couplers and color intermediates. Current law provided a duty suspension which expired June 30, 1982; this provision would be retroactive to that date.

Sec. 129 (introduced as H.R. 4642) temporarily suspends until June 30, 1985, the column 1 (MFN) rate of duty on isomeric mixtures of ethylbiphenyl. The LDDC and column 2 rates of duty would be unaffected.

Sec. 130 (introduced as H.R. 4913) reduces the duty on Dicofol, an insecticide used on many fruit, vegetable, ornamental, and field crops. The provision would, until Sept. 30, 1985, reduce the column 1 (MFN) rate of duty from 18.4 percent ad valorem to 11.2 percent (1982), the LDDC rate from 12.5 percent to 6.9 percent, and the column 2 rate from $0.07 per pound plus 64.5 percent ad valorem to $0.07 per pound plus 41 percent.

Sec. 131 (introduced as H.R 4806) temporarily suspends the column 1 (MFN) rate of duty until Sept. 30, 1984, on uncompounded allyl resins.

Sec. 132 (introduced as H.R. 5811) provides a reduction in the column 1 (MFN) rate of duty on caffeine from the current level of 8.5 percent to 6 percent until Dec. 31, 1983. This duty will currently reduce, as a result of the Multilateral Trade Negotiations, to 8 percent on Jan. 1, 1983.

Sec. 133 (introduced as H.R. 5041) extends the temporary suspension of the column 1 (MFN) rate of duty on natural graphite which expired on June 30, 1981, until Jan. 1, 1985.

Sec. 134 (introduced as H.R. 4641) provides for the temporary suspension of the column 1 (MFN) rate of duty on copper scale until Sept. 30, 1985.

Sec. 135, as amended (introduced as H.R. 5554), provides, until Sept. 30, 1984, temporary suspension of the column 1 (MFN) rate of duty on clock radios which have solid state clocks and the radio portion of other clock radios. The committee amended the provision by changing the entry value limit for qualification from $50 per unit to $40 per unit and adding a phrase declaring that these clock radios cannot be in combination with any other unit.

Sec. 136 (introduced as H.R. 5823) provides, until June 30, 1986, a continued suspension of the column 1 (MFN) rate of duty on certain bicycle parts.

Sec. 137 (introduced as H.R. 5884) temporarily suspends until Sept. 30, 1985, the column 1 (MFN) rate of duty on machines designed for heat-set, stretch texturing of continuous manmade fibers.

Sec. 138 (introduced as H.R. 5839) temporarily suspends until Sept. 30, 1985, the column 1 (MFN) rate of duty on single cylinder, fine gauge hosiery knitting machines and double cylinder jacquard hosiery knitting machines.

Sec. 139 (introduced as H.R. 4155) temporarily suspends the column 1 (MFN) rate of duty on double-headed latch needles until June 30, 1985.

Sec. 140 (introduced as H.R. 4602) temporarily suspends, until Sept. 30, 1984, the column 1 (MFN) rate of duty on externally-powered electric prosthetic devices and their parts.

Sec. 141 (introduced as H.R. 6268) temporarily suspends until Dec. 31, 1986, the column 1 (MFN) rate of duty on small toy and novelty items valued not over 5 cents per unit and jewelry valued not over 1.6 cents per piece.

Sec. 142, as amended (introduced as H.R. 5764) temporarily suspends until Dec. 31, 1985, the column 1 (MFN) rate of duty on stuffed dolls, skins for stuffed dolls, skins for stuffed toy figures of animate and inanimate objects, and stuffed or filled toy figures of inanimate objects. The committee amended the provision by deleting doll clothing and stuffed animate objects from the proposed duty suspension.

Sec. 201, as amended (introduced as H.R. 5170) allows business documents to enter the United States in a no-entry-required status as "intangibles." Such documents primarily enter duty-free as provided in TSUS item 870.10. In addition, the provision would prohibit nominal consignees from conducting customs business on behalf of any other person unless the consignee is a licensed customshouse broker. The committee amended the provision by deleting a requirement that the business documents herein discussed be in conjunction with operations "conducted outside the United States" and by deleting a reference to the nationality of the author of drawings or blueprints. The provision was further amended in reference to consignees to state that "when a consignee declares on entry that he is the owner or purchaser of merchandise, the appropriate customs officer may, without liability, accept the declaration" and to provide a necessary conforming amendment.

Sec. 202 (introduced as H.R. 4690) would allow articles to be delivered into successive customs bonded storage warehouses as long as the ultimate purpose remains that of export. Under current law, articles withdrawn from a bonded manufacturing warehouse may be delivered only to a bonded storage warehouse at an exterior port for the sole purpose of immediate export.

Sec. 203 (introduced as H.R. 5758) encourages production of watches in the insular possessions of the United States. Sec. 203 provides a rebate of duties paid on other watch imports for the industry on a by-company basis which would reflect the amount of insular possessions' labor content in the watches, eliminating the existing limit of 70 percent foreign content, establishing the annual limit on duty-free entry at 7 million units which can be adjusted downward by no more than 10 percent in any one year or upward by no more than 20 percent in any one year, and continuing to provide country allocation authority to the Secretaries of Commerce and Interior.

On Sept. 22, 1982, H.R. 6867 as reported passed the House.

H.R. 6867 was included in the conference report on H.R. 4566 with the exception of surgical drapes and gowns, and fish nets and netting. H.R.

4566 was signed into law by the President on Jan. 12, 1983, as Public Law 97–446. As of adjournment of the 97th Congress, H.R. 6867 was pending in the Senate Finance Committee.

H.R. 7092 (Mr. Rostenkowski); reported to House Sept. 17, 1982. (See H.R. 7368 and P.L. 97-424 (H.R. 6211) for further action.)

H.R. 7092, as reported to the House by the Committee on Ways and Means, would extend the Highway Trust Fund and its related excise taxes for 1 year, through Sept. 30, 1985. This extension is necessary in order to permit the full amount of trust fund authorizations proposed by the Committee on Public Works and Transportation for fiscal year 1983 to be apportioned without triggering the "Byrd amendment," the anti-deficit provision of present law. The bill also transfers the Highway Trust Fund provisions, with certain updating modifications, to the trust fund code of the Internal Revenue Code effective Oct. 1, 1982. Finally, the bill extends for 2 years, through Dec. 31, 1984, the present exemption from the fuels excise taxes for fuel used by certain taxicabs.

At adjournment of the 97th Congress, H.R. 7092 was pending on the House floor. The Committee on Ways and Means had reported a multiyear highway financing bill, H.R. 7368, on Dec. 6, 1982, as a substitute for H.R. 7092. The provisions of H.R. 7368 were enacted as title V of H.R. 6211.

H.R. 7093 (Mr. de Lugo with cosponsors); Public Law 97–455; app. Jan. 12, 1983.

Public Law 97-455 revises the income tax rate on Virgin Islands source income and amends the Social Security Act to provide for a temporary period that payment of disability benefits may continue through the hearing stage of the appeals process.

As passed by the House on Sept. 20, 1982, H.R. 7093 provides that the rate of Virgin Islands tax on payments of passive investment income from Virgin Islands persons to U.S. individuals or corporations shall not exceed 10 percent. The Treasury Department and the Government of the Virgin Islands take the position that previous law imposed a 30 percent tax on the non-Virgin Islands recipient of certain Virgin Islands source passive investment income, and impose withholding at the source by the Virgin Islands payor of such income.

On Oct. 1, 1982, the Senate Finance Committee favorably reported H.R. 7093 as passed by the House, with an amendment relating to social security disability payments. The Senate Finance Committee amendment revised the "continuing disability investigation" (CDI) process mandated by the Social Security Disability Amendments of 1980. (In addition, provisions identical to the Virgin Islands tax changes of H.R. 7093 were added as a Senate floor amendment to H.R. 5470, but were deleted from H.R. 5470 in conference on that legislation.) H.R. 7093 passed the Senate on Dec. 3, 1982.

On Dec. 14, 1982, the House disagreed to Senate amendments regarding social security and agreed to the Virgin Islands provision with technical amendments. The conference report was agreed to by the House and the Senate on Dec. 21, 1982. H.R. 7093 was approved by the President on Jan. 12, 1983, as Public Law 97–455.

Public Law 97–455, as enacted, provides that the rate of Virgin Islands tax on payments of passive investment income from Virgin Islands persons to U.S. persons shall not exceed 10 percent (including the House's technical amendments). Also, the legislation continues DI benefits and medicare coverage for beneficiaries whose benefits are terminated as a result of a review of their disability status before Oct. 1, 1983, and who elect to receive continued benefits while pursuing an appeal through the administrative law judge (ALJ) hearing (in no case would payment continue past June 1, 1984); allows the Secretary of HHS to slow the CDI process for States that demonstrate a good faith effort to process claims in a timely fashion; requires the Secretary of HHS to report semiannually on various aspects of the CDI process; and requires the HHS Secretary to provide opportunity for a face-to-face evidentiary hearing prior to reconsideration of decisions to terminate benefits for disability beneficiaries. The legislation also provides that no public pension offset will apply to an individual who becomes eligible for a public pension prior to July 1983 if that individual is dependent upon his or her spouse for one-half support. The HHS Secretary is required to report a recommendation for permanent legislation regarding pension offsets by May 15, 1983.

H.R. 7094 (Mr. Rangel with cosponsors); reported to Senate Sept. 29, 1982.

H.R. 7094, as passed by the House, imposes an excise tax on plan administrators and trustees of multiemployer pension plans who violate an independent asset management condition in an agreed upon determination letter. This tax applies only to plans where an agreed upon determination letter is presently in effect.

The Senate Finance Committee on Sept. 28, 1982, ordered reported, H.R. 7094 as passed by the House with the following additional amendments:

1. Faculty housing—fringe benefits

The committee approved an amendment providing that the value of certain housing, provided at cost by a college or university to its faculty members, will not, for the duration of the legislative moratorium on the promulgation or enforcement of fringe benefit regulations, be treated as subject to income or employment taxes.

2. Amounts received in settlement of Westinghouse uranium litigation

The committee approved an amendment providing that a utility will not include any amount in income for future discounts or price reductions provided pursuant to its settlement with Westinghouse of litigation regarding contracts to sell uranium. Any price reduction under the settlement will be excluded from the cost of the goods or services to which the reduction relates.

3. Qualifying rollover contributions

The committee approved an amendment providing a special exclusion from gross income of qualified plan distributions that were made within 2 calendar years and rolled over into an individual retirement account.

4. Enterprise zones

The committee approved an amendment providing that up to 25 enterprise zones per year (8 of which to be reserved for rural areas) could be designated by the Secretary of the Department of Housing and Urban Development for each of 3 years, beginning with the 12-month period that starts on July 1, 1983. Each enterprise zone so designated would be eligible for Federal tax and regulatory relief. Areas would be nominated for enterprise zone designation by one or more local governments and the State in which the area is located. Areas nominated for such designation would have to meet certain criteria of economic distress.

The provision includes the following tax incentive for enterprise zones: 3- or 5-percent investment tax credit for investments in personal property in the zone, with a one-half basis adjustment for such property; a 10-percent investment credit for real property in the zone; a 10-percent credit to employers for increases in payroll to qualified zone employees, subject to a $1,500 per-worker limitation; a credit for hiring disadvantaged workers for zone employment; the elimination of capital gains taxes for qualified property within a zone; allowing full ACRS deductions for facilities in zones financed by industrial development bonds; and the continued availability of small issue exemption for industrial development bonds in zones after Dec. 31, 1986. These tax incentives would be effective as of Jan. 1, 1984.

At adjournment of the 97th Congress, H.R. 7094 was pending in the Senate.

H.R. 7368 (Mr. Rostenkowski and Mr. Conable); reported to House Dec. 6, 1982. (See P.L. 97–424 (H.R. 6211) for further action.)

H.R. 7368, as reported to the House by the Committee on Ways and Means, contained the provisions of the Highway Revenue Act of 1982, which were subsequently enacted, with some modifications, as title V of P.L. 97-424 (H.R. 6211), the Surface Transportation Assistance Act of 1982.

H.R. 7368 extended and revised highway excise taxes and the Highway Trust Fund for 4 years, through Sept. 30, 1988. In making these revisions, the trust fund provisions were transferred to the Internal Revenue Code and a new Mass Transit Account was established within the Highway Trust Fund. This account was to be funded by revenues from 1 cent per gallon of the tax on fuels, and its monies were to be available for making capital expenditures authorized under sec. 3 of the Urban Mass Transit Act. The expenditure purposes for the Highway Trust Fund and the antideficit provisions were modified and clarified.

Highway-related excise taxes were revised as follows: the 4-cents-per-gallon tax on fuels was increased to 9 cents per gallon effective Apr. 1, 1983; the taxes on tires, tubes, and tread rubber were revised to eliminate the tax on all nonhighway tires, inner tubes, highway tires of 100 pounds or less and tread rubber used on such tires, and to increase the tax on highway tires of over 100 pounds and tread rubber used on tires of more than 100 pounds to 25 cents per pound, effective Jan. 1, 1984; the tax on lubricating oil was repealed, effective immediately; the tax on new trucks and trailers was increased to 12 percent and shifted to the retail level, effective Apr. 1, 1983, for trucks of 33,000 pounds or more and trailers of 26,000 pounds or more (the tax was eliminated on lighter trucks); the tax on truck parts and accessories was repealed, effective immediately; the heavy vehicle use tax was substantially revised to increase the tax and shift it to heavier trucks, resulting in a maximum tax of $2,000 for an 80,000 pound truck, effective Jan. 1, 1984. Minor modifications were made to the exemption provisions and to provisions transferring revenues to other funds. All the taxes and exemptions terminated on Oct. 1, 1988.

The bill also contained provisions to extend to noncorporate taxpayers the basis adjustment rules enacted in the Economic Recovery Tax Act of 1981 for taxpayers acquiring certain motor carrier operating authorities. (See P.L. 97-424 (H.R. 6211) for further action.

H.R. 7397 (Mr. Gibbons with cosponsors); Reported to Senate Dec. 21, 1982.

On Mar. 17, 1982, the President submitted legislative proposals to the Congress for trade, aid, and tax measures to promote the economic recovery of the Caribbean Basin region, which were introduced as H.R. 5900 on March 18. Title I (establishing duty-free treatment for Caribbean imports) and title III (tax incentives to encourage investment) of this Caribbean Basin Initiative (CBI) were referred to the Committee on Ways and Means.

H.R. 7397 was reported by the Committee on Ways and Means on December 10 and passed by the House on December 17 with committee amendments. The bill contains the following trade and tax incentives for 28 potential beneficiary countries and independent territories in the Caribbean region:

TRADE PROVISIONS (TITLE I)

Under present law, imports from Caribbean countries qualify for limited duty-free treatment under the generalized system of preferences (GSP). Goods not qualifying for GSP are subject to normal rates of duty.

Title I permits the President to proclaim "duty-free" treatment for all "eligible articles" imported from designated beneficiary countries subject to certain limitations and conditions. Provisions to compensate Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands are also included.

A. Designation criteria

The President may designate from among 28 countries and independent territories. He may not designate a country if it: (1) has a Communist government; (2) fails to meet certain criteria regarding expropriation of U.S. property; (3) fails to recognize arbitral awards; (4) affords reverse tariff preferences to other developed countries; or (5) engages in piracy of copyrighted broadcast material. A committee amendment also prohibits eligibility of any country which has not entered into an extradition treaty with the United States. There are also certain discretionary criteria the President must consider prior to designation.

B. Rules of origin

Various "rules of origin" requirements regarding Caribbean imports are designed to prevent passthrough operations and ensure benefits to beneficiary countries. First, the product must be imported directly from a beneficiary country. Second, it must consist of at least 35 percent value-added in the Caribbean except that a certain percentage (15 percent of total value) from U.S.-made components may be counted toward this 35 percent minimum. This will encourage U.S. exports to the Caribbean duty-free zone and would also reduce the quantity of third-country components incorporated into duty-free products. Third, any product including foreign components must be substantially transformed into a "new and different article of commerce" in the Caribbean. Products not qualifying under these three rules will be dutiable. Certain types of passthrough operations such as simple combining, packaging and diluting would not qualify under the rules of origin.

C. Product exemptions

Certain products are ineligible for duty-free treatment. These are: textile and apparel, footwear, handbags, luggage, flat goods, work gloves, leather wearing apparel, and petroleum products. A committee amendment also excluded canned tuna from duty-free entry.

D. Limitation on sugar

Sugar is eligible for duty-free treatment but is subject to certain quantitative limits. The three largest suppliers (Dominican Republic, Guatemala, Panama) receive absolute quotas while other countries would be subject to either existing GSP treatment or quotas negotiated by the President. All limits could be adjusted by the President depending upon market conditions. More restrictive quotas proclaimed under other authority, such as those presently in effect, would take precedence over quota amounts under the bill.

E. Food production plan

Each country seeking duty-free treatment for sugar and beef must submit a "stable food production plan" within 3 months of designation to ensure that increased shipments of such products will not displace basic food production and adversely affect nutritional standards. The provision requires consultation with a particular country and possible suspension of duty-free treatment for sugar and beef if the President determines that measures are inadequate to protect basic food production.

F. Import relief

The President may suspend duty-free treatment for any article under the standard import relief provisions of the Trade Act of 1974 (secs. 201-203) or under national security provisions (sec. 232 of the Trade Expansion Act). Provisions are set forth to authorize specific findings regarding CBI imports during the course of normal import relief proceedings and to allow a range of Presidential action concerning such imports. An emergency relief procedure is established for perishable products which would allow restoration of duties within 21 days pending a finding on final import relief.

G. Measures to compensate Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands

The bill includes several provisions to preserve the special relationship of Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands and compensate them for any potential effects duty-free Caribbean imports might otherwise have on their economies. These include:

1. A provision allowing inputs from the Virgin Islands and Puerto Rico to be treated as Caribbean input for purposes of meeting the 35 percent value-added test described above.

2. A requirement that the President consider compensatory measures if the amount of excise tax rebates on rum is reduced.

3. Liberalization of the rule of origin under headnote 3(a) of the Tariff Schedules by increasing from 30 percent to 70 percent the foreign content maximum on articles entered from the insular possessions able to qualify for duty-free entry. Presently, the 70 percent rule only applies to watches. This change would not affect petroleum products.

4. Amendment of the Tariff Schedules to permit duty-free entry of 5 liters of alcoholic beverages by returning U.S. residents arriving directly from U.S. insular possessions if one liter is the product of an insular possession.

5. A provision ensuring that CBI duty-free treatment will not affect duties on coffee imported into Puerto Rico imposed by the Puerto Rican legislature pursuant to sec. 319 of the Tariff Act of 1930.

6. Clarification of the term "industry" under sec. 201 of the Trade Act of 1974 to include producers located in the insular possessions. This allows such producers to be considered in injury determinations which are a part of import relief proceedings under sec. 201.

H. Economic impact report

The International Trade Commission is required to submit to Congress and the President periodic reports on the impact of the legislation on U.S. industries and consumers. Such reports shall commence 2 years from enactment and cover each year thereafter.

Each report shall include an assessment of the actual effects during the period covered by such report and the probable future effect. The Commission shall consider various enumerated factors pertaining to production, trade, and consumption.

I. Effective date

The duty-free provisions of title I will take effect on the date of enactment.

J. Termination

The duty-free provisions will expire on Sept. 30, 1994.

TAX PROVISIONS (TITLE II)

A. Rum excise tax payments to Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands

Under present law, U.S. excise taxes paid on rum made in Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands and brought into the United States are transferred to the Treasury of the island where the rum was made.

The bill requires that all excise taxes collected on foreign rum brought into the United States after Dec. 31, 1982 (whether or not from Caribbean countries), be transferred to the Treasuries of Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands. The Secretary of the Treasury will prescribe a formula for allocating these tax revenues between Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands.

B. Caribbean conventions

Presently, the Internal Revenue Code generally disallows deductions for business expenses incurred while attending a convention held outside the North American area unless it is as reasonable to hold the meeting outside the North American area as within it. An income tax treaty with Jamaica allows deductions for attending business conventions held in Jamaica.

Under the bill, business expense deductions are to be allowed for costs of attending conventions, seminars, or similar business meetings in certain Caribbean countries if the country meets three qualifications. First, the country must be designated a "beneficiary country" under the trade provisions of the bill. A deduction also is available for business conventions held in Bermuda if Bermuda meets the other requirements. Second, to qualify, the country must enter into an executive agreement with the United States to provide for the exchange of tax information. The agreement is to be negotiated by the Secretary of the Treasury and will provide, on a reciprocal basis, for information relating to U.S. tax matters to be made available to U.S. tax officials. The agreement must apply to both civil and criminal tax matters and must override any local rules requiring secrecy about the ownership of bank accounts or bearer shares. The agreement also must impose on the officials of each country a duty not to disclose the tax information other than to those involved in its tax administration. This provision applies to conventions beginning after Dec. 31, 1982, but only if an exchange of information agreement is in effect on the day the convention begins. Third, a committee amendment provides that where a beneficiary country has an income tax system, the country must provide reciprocal tax treatment for attendance at conventions or other similar business meetings in the United States.

H.J. Res. 265; Public Law 97-49; app. Sept. 30, 1981.

Public Law 96-78 (H.R. 5369) amended the Rules of the House of Representatives to provide a procedure by which the public debt limitation is to be established through the congressional budget process (rule 49). Under this procedure, passage of the conference report on a concurrent budget resolution is deemed to pass a House joint resolution establishing the public debt limitation at the level and for the time period specified in the joint resolution. Section 201 of H. Con. Res. 115, the First Concurrent Budget Resolution for Fiscal Year 1982, specified that the public debt limitation is to be $1,079.8 billion from Oct. 1, 1981, through Sept. 30, 1982. The conference report on H. Con. Res. 115 was approved by the House and Senate on May 20, 1981, and May 21, 1981, respectively. On May 21, 1981, the Speaker announced that pursuant to rule 49, H.J. Res. 265, increasing the temporary public debt limitation from $599.8 billion, the amount set by H.J. Res. 266, to $679.8 billion for the period Oct. 1, 1981, through Sept. 30, 1982 (for a total limitation of $1,079.8 billion), was deemed to have been passed by the House.

H.J. Res. 265 was reported to the Senate on Sept. 15, 1981, with no written report and passed the Senate without amendment on Sept. 29, 1981. H.J. Res. 265 was signed into law by the President on Sept. 30, 1981, as Public Law 97-49.

H.J. Res. 266; Public Law 97-48; app. Sept. 30, 1981.

Public Law 96-78 (H.R. 5369) amended the Rules of the House of Representatives to provide a procedure by which the public debt limitation is to be established through the congressional budget process (rule 49). Under this procedure, passage of the conference report on a concurrent budget resolution is deemed to pass a House joint resolution establishing the public debt limitation at the level and for the time period specified in the joint resolution. Section 102 of H. Con. Res. 115 was approved by the House and Senate on May 20, 1981, and May 21, 1981, respectively. On May 21, 1981, the Speaker announced that pursuant to rule 49, H.J. Res. 266, increasing the temporary public debt limitation from $585 billion to $599.8 billion through Sept. 30, 1981 (for a total limitation of $999.8 bilion), was deemed to have been passed by the House.

On July 6, 1981, the Senate Finance Committee reported the resolution to the Senate with an amendment in the nature of a substitute. A summary of the resolution as reported follows:

INDIVIDUAL TAX RATE REDUCTIONS

There will be across-the-board reductions in individual income tax rates which will reduce tax liability by approximately 1 1/4 percent in 1981, 11 percent in 1982, 18 percent in 1983, and 23 percent in 1984 and future years. These reductions in tax liability will be reflected in corresponding reductions in withheld taxes of 5 percent on Oct. 1, 1981, a further 10 percent on July 1, 1982, and another 10 percent on July 1, 1983.

The highest tax rate will be reduced from 70 to 50 percent for 1982 and subsequent years.

The maximum rate of tax on capital gains will be reduced to 20 percent for transactions occurring after June 10, 1981.

DEDUCTION FOR TWO-EARNER MARRIED COUPLES

In 1982 a married couple will receive a deduction of 5 percent of the first $30,000 of the earnings of the spouse with the lesser amount of earnings. For 1983 and subsequent years, the deduction will be 10 percent.

ACCELERATED COST RECOVERY SYSTEM

The Federal income tax treatment of depreciation and the investment tax credit will be completely revised.

The cost of tangible personal property generally will be recovered using a prescribed accelerated depreciation method over a 15-year, 10-year, 5-year, or 3-year period depending on the type of property.

The cost of most real property will be recovered over a 15-year recovery period, using a prescribed accelerated depreciation method.

The bill will allow a full investment credit for all eligible 15-year, 10-year, and 5-year recovery property and a 6 percent credit for all eligible 3-year recovery property.

INVESTMENT TAX CREDIT FOR REHABILITATION

The present 10-percent investment credit for rehabilitation of industrial and commercial structures and the rapid amortization provisions for certified historic structures will be replaced by a 15-percent credit for rehabilitation of structures 30 or 40 years old, a 20-percent credit for structures at least 40 years old, and a 25-percent credit for certified historic structures.

INDIVIDUAL RETIREMENT SAVINGS

The limits on deductible contributions to individual retirement accounts (IRA's) will be raised from the lesser of 15 percent of earnings or $1,500 to the lesser of 100 percent of earnings or $2,000 ($2,250 for a spousal IRA).

Active participants in employer-sponsored and Government plans will be made eligible for IRA's with a $1,500 limit on deductible contributions ($1,625 for a spousal IRA).

Active participants in employer-sponsored and Government plans will also be allowed to deduct voluntary contributions to their plan, with a $1,500 limit.

RETIREMENT SAVINGS FOR THE SELF-EMPLOYED

The limit on deductible contributions to self-employed retirement plans (Keogh or H.R. 10 plans) will be increased to the lesser of 15 percent of earnings or $15,000. Up to $150,000 of earnings will be taken into account under a plan.

INTEREST AND DIVIDEND EXCLUSION

The $200 ($400 for joint returns) partial exclusion of dividend and interest income will be permitted to revert to prior law as of Dec. 31, 1981, a year earlier than it would under present law.

11-054 O - 83 - 8

TAX-EXEMPT SAVINGS CERTIFICATES

The bill provides for depository institution tax-exempt savings certificates. Such certificates would have a 1-year maturity, would earn interest at a rate of 70 percent of the 1-year Treasury bill interest rate, and must be established at a depository institution between Oct. 1, 1981, and Sept. 30, 1982. The maximum amount of tax-exempt interest on such savings certificates for all taxable years may not exceed $1,000 ($2,000 for joint returns.)

The savings certificates cannot be redeemed before maturity or used as collateral for a loan without losing their tax exemption.

RESEARCH AND EXPERIMENTATION CREDIT

The bill provides for a 25-percent credit for incremental research and experimentation wage expenditures. The incremental increase is measured against a 3-year rolling base period.

INCREASED CHARITABLE DEDUCTION FOR EQUIPMENT FOR RESEARCH PURPOSES

The bill will expand the existing exception to the general rule limiting the amount of charitable deduction for contributions of ordinary income property for contributions by a corporation of new tangible personal property of an inventory nature used by a college or university for research purposes including research training.

ESTATE AND GIFT TAXES

The unified credit will be increased over the next 5 years from its current level of $47,000 to $192,800. When fully phased in there will be no estate or gift tax imposed in transfers up to $600,000.

The marital deduction for gifts and bequests to spouses will no longer be limited.

The present $3,000 annual gift tax exclusion for gifts to any one donee will be raised to $10,000.

Nine changes in the current use valuation rules for farm or closely held business real property are provided. Four technical changes in estate and gift taxation are also provided.

WINDFALL PROFIT TAX CREDIT FOR ROYALTY OWNERS

For 1981 and subsequent years, there will be a credit for royalty owners equal to the first $2,500 of windfall profit tax liability.

REDUCTION OF WINDFALL PROFIT TAX ON NEW OIL

The bill will reduce, beginning in 1983, the tax on newly discovered oil, ultimately reducing the rate to 15 percent.

INCOME EARNED ABROAD

The present deductions and exclusions for income earned abroad will be replaced by an exclusion for the first $50,000 of such income plus 50 percent of the next $50,000. There will also be a deduction for excess housing costs.

COMMODITY TAX STRADDLES

Under the bill much of the uncertainty surrounding commodity futures transactions will be removed by new rules relating to the tax treatment of commodities, including futures contracts, forward contracts, and other interests in such property, cash-and-carry transactions, certain short-term Government obligations issued at a discount, and various related transactions. The new rules seek to prevent the deferral of income and the conversion of ordinary income and short term capital gain into long term capital gain while preserving the liquidity and efficiency of the markets.

INCENTIVE STOCK OPTIONS

The bill will create a new class of stock options similar to the restricted and qualified stock options provided prior to 1976. An employee receiving an incentive stock option to buy his employer's stock would be taxed only at the time he sells the stock acquired under the option. The gain on such sale would be taxed at long-term capital gains rate if the stock were held for more than 12 months.

SMALL BUSINESS PROVISIONS

The maximum number of shareholders allowable in a subchapter S corporation will be increased from 15 to 25, and certain simple trusts will be allowed as shareholders.

The minimum accumulated earnings credit under the accumulated earnings tax on corporate income retained beyond the reasonable needs of the business will be increased from $150,000 to $250,000.

A limited amount of capital investment may be written off in the year the property is placed in service ($5,000 for calendar years 1982 and 1983, $7,500 for 1984 and 1985, and $10,000 for 1986 and thereafter).

The $100,000 limitation on the amount of used property eligible for the regular investment tax credit will be eliminated. Previously claimed investment tax credits will be recaptured upon the sale of the equipment.

EMPLOYEE STOCK OWNERSHIP PLAN CREDIT

Beginning Jan. 1, 1983, a tax credit will be allowed based upon a percentage of an employer's payroll for contributions of employer securities to a tax credit employee stock ownership plan (TRASOP or tax credit ESOP) and the existing investment-based TRASOP will expire.

Certain other modifications to the rules governing ESOP's and TRASOP's are also provided.

DEDUCTION FOR MOTOR CARRIER OPERATING AUTHORITIES

Motor carriers will be allowed a deduction equal to the adjusted basis of all motor carrier operating authorities held on July 1, 1980. The deduction will be taken ratably over a 60-month period.

H.J. Res. 266, as amended by the Senate Finance Committee, was debated on the Senate floor July 15-18, 20-24, 27-29, 1981. During debate numerous amendments were agreed to. On July 31, 1981, the amended text of H.J. Res. 266 was inserted in lieu of all after the enacting clause of H.R. 4242. H.J. Res. 266, as passed by the House, was agreed to in the Senate by unanimous consent on Sept. 29, 1981. It was signed into law by the President on Sept. 30, 1981, as Public Law 97-48.

H.J. Res. 325 (Mr. Whitten); Public Law 97-51; app. Oct. 1, 1981.

H.J. Res. 325, making continuing appropriations for fiscal year 1982, contains one tax-related provision. Sec. 139 repeals the $3,000 limitation on the amount a Member of Congress may deduct as away-from-home business expenses in Washington, D.C., effective for taxable years beginning after Dec. 31, 1981.

H.J. Res. 370 (Mr. Whitten); Public Law 97-92; app. Dec. 15, 1981. (See H.J. Res. 325, H.R. 5159, and H.R. 6685.)

H.J. Res. 370, making further continuing appropriations for fiscal year 1982, contains several tax-related provisions.

Sec. 112 prohibits the use of appropriated funds to enforce Rev. Rul. 81-216, the proposed amendments to the Income Tax Regulations secs. 1.103-7 and 1.103-10, or any other ruling or regulation reaching the same result. Rev. Rul. 81-216 holds that multiple lots of industrial development bonds of $1 million each will be treated as a single large issue not qualifying for tax-exempt treatment when certain factors, such as issues sold at the same time, at the same rate, or under a common marketing scheme, are present.

In addition, the provision prohibits the issuance of regulations or rulings treating as tax-exempt interest earned on an obligation whose proceeds are used for certain disqualified facilities, such as massage parlors, country clubs, golf courses, and tennis clubs.

Sec. 113 provides that it is the sense of the Congress that the President of the United States should not include in his recommendations for revenue enhancements any recommendations which would have the effect of reducing Federal tax incentives for energy conservation or development of renewable energy sources.

Sec. 133a makes the repeal of the $3,000 limitation on the amount a Member of Congress may deduct for away-from-home business expenses in Washington, D.C., which is contained in the act of Oct. 1, 1981 (P.L. 97-51), retroactive to taxable years beginning after Dec. 30, 1980.

H.J. Res. 519; Public Law 97-204; app. June 28, 1982.

Public Law 96-78 (H.R. 5369), amended the Rules of the House of Representatives to provide a procedure by which the public debt limitation is to be established through the congressional budget process (rule 49). Under this procedure, passage of the conference report on a concurrent budget resolution is deemed to pass a House joint resolution establishing the public debt limitation at the level and for the time period specified in the joint resolution. S. Con. Res. 92, the first concurrent budget resolution for fiscal year 1983, specified that the public debt limitation is to be $1,143.1 billion from Oct 1, 1981, through Sept. 30, 1982. The conference report on S. Con. Res. 92 was approved by the House and Senate on June 22, 1982, and June 23, 1982, respectively. On June 23, 1982, the Speaker pro tempore announced that pursuant to rule 49, H.J. Res. 519, increasing the temporary public debt limitation to $743.1 billion for the period Oct. 1, 1981, through Sept. 30, 1982 (for a total limitation of $1,143.1 billion), was deemed to have been passed by the House.

H.J. Res. 519 passed the Senate without amendment on June 23, 1982. H.J. Res. 519 was signed into law by the President on June 28, 1982, as Public Law 97-204.

H.J. Res. 520; Public Law 97-270; app. Sept. 30, 1982.

Public Law 96-78 (H.R. 5369) amended the Rules of the House of Representatives to provide a procedure by which the public debt limitation is to be established through the congressional budget process (rule 49). Under this procedure, passage of the conference report on a concurrent budget resolution is deemed to pass a House joint resolution establishing the public debt limitation at the level and for the time period specified in the joint resolution. S. Con. Res. 92, the first concurrent budget resolution for fiscal year 1983, specified that the public debt limitation is to be $1,290.2 billion from Oct. 1, 1982, through Sept. 30, 1983. The conference report on S. Con. Res. 92 was approved by the House and Senate on June 22, 1982, and June 23, 1982, respectively. On June 23, 1982, the Speaker pro tempore announced that pursuant to rule 49, H.J. Res. 520, increasing the temporary public debt limitation from $743.1 billion, the amount set by H.J. Res. 519, to $890.2 billion for the period Oct. 1, 1982, through Sept. 30, 1983 (for a total limitation of $1,290.2 billion), was deemed to have been passed by the House.

H.J. Res. 520 was reported to the Senate on Aug. 11, 1982, with no written report and passed the Senate without amendment on Sept. 23, 1982. H.J. Res. 520 was signed into law by the President on Sept. 30, 1982, as Public Law 97-270.

H.J. Res. 599 (Mr. Whitten); Public Law 97-276; app. Oct. 2, 1982.

The Senate added the following six amendments affecting the Committee on Ways and Means jurisdiction, to H.J. Res. 599, continuing appropriations through Dec. 17, 1982, which the House agreed to on Oct. 1, 1982.

Trade amendments

The act authorizes the Secretary of the Treasury to regulate entry of steel mill products in order to monitor and enforce foreign export restraints enacted pursuant to an agreement between the United States and a foreign government or customs union. Specifically, this provision authorizes the Secretary to require presentation of export licenses or other documents issued by the foreign authorities as a condition of entry, and to issue regulations governing the terms under which imports without such documents could be denied entry. The purpose of this provision is to provide enforcement authority so that the United States and foreign governments may carry out a restraint agreement with respect to steel imports, particularly with a view to settling pending antidumping and countervailing duty investigations with the European Communities.

The act provides duty-free treatment on imported steam. The purpose of the amendment is to remove the current duty of 6.5 percent ad valorem which a pulp and paper manufacturer would have to pay on residual steam generated from its plant in Canada, to be transported by pipeline across the river for reuse by its plant in Maine.

The act extends the Coffee Agreement Act for 1 year until Oct. 1, 1983. This legislation permits the President to implement the International Coffee Agreement, to which the United States is a signatory, by restricting the importation of Coffee from nonmember countries and by requiring appropriate documentation in the case of imports from member countries subject to quotas.

Provisions affecting medicare

Medicare contractor funding.—The act maintains the Labor-HHS-Education budget at "a rate to maintain current operating levels." The intent of the language is to continue the same level of service for this fiscal year as for last.

Nursing home regulations moratorium.—The act would extend the current moratorium on revised conditions of participation under medicare and medicaid for nursing homes by an additional 120 days. Under TEFRA, HCFA is prohibited from implementing proposed changes for 6 months after the date of enactment. This provision would then extend the moratorium for a further 120 days.

A third amendment expresses the sense of the Senate that the Congress reject any proposal to means-test either the eligibility or the benefits of the medicare program.

H.J. Res. 631 (Mr. Whitten) Public Law 97-377; app. Dec. 21, 1982.

H.J. Res. 631, making further continuing appropriations for fiscal year 1983, contains two tax-related provisions.

Sec. 117 prohibits the Internal Revenue Service from using funds to implement rulings relating to unrelated business income tax provisions in the case of proceeds from gaming activities carried on by charitable organizations in North Dakota.

Sec. 119 prohibits the Internal Revenue Service from using funds to reduce taxpayer assistance, including toll-free telephone service and walk-in assistance. H.J. Res. 631 was signed into law by the President on Dec. 21, 1982, as Public Law 97-377.

H. Con. Res. 95 (Mr. Neal); reported to House Sept. 25, 1981.

House Concurrent Resolution 95 expresses the sense of Congress that the President should try, as a high priority matter in our diplomatic and economic relations, to obtain the agreement of other countries to reduce significantly the extent of export credit subsidies now granted by members of the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development (OECD). The resolution also states that the President should consider using whatever trade policy tools are at his disposal, consistent with domestic and international law, to counter and offset the economic consequences of excessive foreign government export credit subsidies and to induce those governments to negotiate seriously to reduce their subsidies. In carrying out its mandate to neutralize foreign competition in offical export credit, the Export-Import Bank should, as its first and dominant priority, use its available resources to counter and offset subsidies granted by foreign governments, including the French, who have been most reluctant to negotiate a serious and meaningful reform of the OECD Arrangement on Guidelines for Officially Supported Export Credits.

H. Con. Res. 95 was referred jointly to Banking, Finance and Urban Affairs, Foreign Affairs, and Ways and Means Committees. The Ways and Means Committee reported H. Con. Res. 95 to the House on Sept. 25, 1981.

As of adjournment of the 97th Congress, H. Con. Res. 95 was pending in the House.

H. Res. 181 (Mr. Wright); passed House July 21, 1981. (See P.L. 97-35 (H.R. 3982) for futher action.)

H. Res. 181 was referred to the Ways and Means Committee on July 16, 1981. The committee had not taken action on this resolution when it was taken up on the floor by unanimous consent and passed on July 21, 1981.

On June 12, 1981, the Ways and Means Committee reported H.R. 3850, which contained a provision to eliminate the minimum social security benefit prospectively, effective for beneficiaries first eligible for the minimum benefit after Dec. 30, 1981. H.R. 3850 was later incorporated by the Budget Committee into the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1981 (H.R. 3982). This bill was amended on the floor of the House by an amendment in the form of a substitute which was offered by Congressmen Gramm and Latta.

H.R. 3982, as passed by the House, provided for the complete elimination of the minimum benefit, both for current and future beneficiaries, effective November 1981 for new beneficiaries and March 1982 for current beneficiaries. The Senate amendment providing for elimination of the social security minimum benefit was identical to the House bill with the exception of the effective date. The Senate receded to the House provision. (See H.R. 3850 and H.R. 3982 for further details.)

H. Res. 181 expresses the resolve of the House of Representatives that necessary steps be taken to insure that social security benefits are not reduced for those currently receiving them.

H. Res. 521 (Mr. Dornan of California and Mr. Schulze); tabled in House Aug. 18, 1982.

H. Res. 521, as reported unfavorably by the Committee on Ways and Means on Aug. 12, 1982, would disapprove the recommendation of the President, transmitted to the Congress on June 2, 1982, to extend the authority of the President for an additional 12 months to waive freedom of emigration requirements in sec. 402 of the Trade Act of 1974 with respect to the Socialist Republic of Romania.

Imports from Romania are currently subject to column 1 (MFN) rates of duty effective as of Aug. 3, 1975, the date of implementation of the United States-Romanian trade agreement. On Nov. 24, 1975, the President designated Romania as a beneficiary developing country eligible to receive duty-free treatment, effective Jan. 1, 1976, on imports of items eligible for the Generalized System of Preferences (GSP).

Enactment of H. Res. 521 would result in the discontinuance of MFN and GSP treatment for Romania and restoration of the generally higher column 2 rates of duty applicable to non-MFN countries. In addition, Romania would no longer be eligible for Government credits or investment quarantees.

On Aug. 18, 1982, H. Res. 521 was tabled in the House.
